'And the larch-tree,' added the Professor. 'It was the noble larch-tree that kept the secret, my friend. Well, well, I hope you are pleased with the fashionable elements attracted to our Silver Spring. Doubtless the Marquis de Ratti and the demure English maid Alice belong to one of those bands of English thieves who are said to keep a map of country-seats with reference to the plate chest, and are trying their fortune in America. How beautiful they were—those diamonds!'

The Marquis de Ratti departed by the nine o'clock boat that same evening. His foreign accent was never more apparent than when he took leave of Silver Spring.

THE TELEGRAPHIC BLUNDER.

Telegraphic anecdotes being in order reminds us of a dispatch which some years ago a business man in Boston sent to his correspondent in New York, requesting him to have a room reserved for him at the hotel, as he should come on that afternoon.

Arrived late at night he stood serenely behind the crowd at the old Astor House who were registering their names, even till the clerk began to turn applicants away for lack of room—assured that his dispatch in advance must have secured accommodation, but was surprised and indignant that no order for a room had been received and was obliged to hunt up lodings for the night elsewhere.

Early next morning, in response to the demand if his dispatch had been received, his correspondent replied in the affirmative and that a store-house had been hired for him in Beaver street as ordered.

'A store-house! I never ordered a store-house."

The dispatch was produced. It read: 'Shall be on to-night; have room in a store-house secured at once.'

Application at the telegraph office revealed the fact that the young woman who received the message as it came slowly from the wire, supposed the operator had been abbreviating and she therefore corrected (?) the spelling of the message, which originally read: 'Have room in Astor House secured at once.' The division of Astor and addition of an e produced quite a different result than was desired.

WORDS OF WISDOM

True wisdom, in general, consists in energetic determination.

Some men, like pictures, are fitter for a corner than a full light.

In every large community there is always a certain amount of human sediment.

Nature never sends a great man into the planet without confiding the secret to another soul.

Let a man learn that everything in na*ture, even motes and feathers*, goes by law and not by luck, and that what he sows he reaps.

Sober sense, self-possession and intelligent self-control are the safe-guards of head and heart, and make a beautiful temple for the soul.

To discover a truth and to separate it from a falsehood is an occupation worthy of the best intellect, and not unworthy of the best heart.

Frivolity, under whatever form it appears, takes from attention its strength, from thought its originality, from feeling its earnestness.

The more earnest a person is in his own views, the more confirmed in the rightness of his cause, the more convinced he is that every one else is wrong. It takes an exceptionally clear brain, with a rare sense of justice, to allow that others occupy the same standpoint as his own, and have the same right to think themselves as true.

A sporting paper says that a certain base-ball player was "fined twenty-five dollars for missing a fly." Persons who have watched the antics of a bald-headed man as he strikes aimlessly at a fly will wonder how long the richest bald-headed man's purse would hold out if he were obliged to pay twenty-five dollars for a miss.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

POLITICAL REFORM.

There is no present needed reform so absolutely important as that of rescuing suffrage, and consequently legislation and administration, from the corrupting influence of money.

Reform in that direction, positive and permanent, is of the greatest importance to the people, because it means the preservation of their liberties.

The glorious feature of our system of free, representative government is its denial of all class distinction, intending as the Constitution does that every citizen shall fully enjoy the privilege of working himself up, by the power of individual merit, from the lowest to the highest round of the political ladder, and that no mercenary hand shall pull him down.

That is the distinctive right of an American citizen, no matter how poor he may be as to worldly possessions.

To perpetuate that right is a duty incumbent upon every voter who values the dignity of manhood and the blessings of freedom.

To interfere with it is red-handed treason.

The improper use of money within nominating conventions and through election campaigns has become so bold and venal, that proposed candidates for office, every way qualified on the score of character, patriotism and ability, are often publicly opposed and defeated by trading politicians for no other reason than that such reputable citizen, who would serve the people honestly, either lack financial means or are too honorable to barter with corruption.

That is a notorious fact.

The shameful result is that men enter Congress, and other positions of high public trust, with no othe earthly qualification than money.

It is perfectly safe to conclude that men base enough to purchase official place will not hesitate a moment to cheat the people afterwards.

If money is allowed to be a potent factor in American politics, the time will soon arrive when here, as in England, the rich will be ruling potentates and the toiling masses crouching slaves.

Let the people view the threatening peril, and ere too late, decree REFORM.

Our creed is this—

Nominate for every office men thoroughly qualified to discharge attendant duties, and, whether poor or rich, who are known to be personally honest and above reproach.

Let every citizen, legally qualified, vote as he deems right, uninfluenced and unawed by any power on earth.

Spend not a dollar on elections other than for legitimate and necessary expenses.

Unseat with disgrace every man who secures an election through fraud and corruption.

Arrest, convict and consign to prison every offender who dares offer or give money or any other consideration for a vote.

There we stand, and confidently ask all good citizens to join us.

The latest returns of the Kentucky election inform us that Proctor Knott, Dem., will probably have 49,000 majority for Governor. This is the General Apathy that the Philadelphia Press spoke about as existing at the election. But that distinguished military man seems to have commanded the Administration forces. The colored man whom the Republicans nominated for State Auditor is beaten by 60,000 votes. How they do like the negro, these Republicans!

Mr. Ernest O. Chamberlin, founder and editor of Plainfield's daily newspaper, announces that the publication of the same will cease September 1st, and that he has accepted a position on the editorial staff of the Trenton Times. A daily paper in this city has not proven a very profitable undertaking, as we have always asserted it would not. Our best wishes go with Mr. Chamberlin in his new venture, which is likely to prove more remunerative to him than his newspaper experience in Plainfield has the past five years.

The telegraph strike came to an end last week. The monopolies proved too strong for the operators. Master Workman Campbell, of the Brotherhood, advised the members of the organization to look out for themselves, and make as good terms with the Western Union Telegraph Company as they could secure. Each man looked out for himself. The female operators came in a body (thirty in all.) Twelve were accepted, and the rest rejected, their positions having been filled. Forty-five male operators were accepted out of sixty-two who applied.

The Democratic State Central Committee have not as yet announced formally the day on which the Gubernatorial Convention is to be held, although on the occasion of a meeting of the Committee some weeks since, the 13th of September next was suggested as the proper date. It appears, however, that the 13th was not definitely settled upon, and we therefore await the regular and formal call of the Committee as to what day the Convention will be called together. The Republican Committee have since met and decided to call the Republican Convention on the 20th of September, but as yet that body has issued no formal call. No matter when the Democratic Convention is called we have no fears but that a candidate will be placed in the field who will sweep the State. We have no particular candidate ourselves whose claim to advocate.

DEATH OF MAJOR O'CONNOR.

Major Thomas O'Connor, Speaker of the late New Jersey House of Assembly, died at his residence in Newark Monday night. He was taken there from Coney Island in the afternoon in obedience to a wish that he should die at home. He was ill of consumption for nearly a year. His favorite daughter died last Winter, and this greatly affected him. The Major was born in England, of Irish parentage. He was a man of very strong will and marked ability. He was for many years a firm supporter of the Democratic party. During the exposure of the Newark City Hall frauds in 1881 he took an active part in securing a thorough investigation. As Speaker he was Chairman of a legislative committee to investigate the New Jersey State finances, but owing to his long continued illness the investigation has not been made and the question of their condition remains open. During the war the Major served with great gallantry in the Union army.

THE REVELATIONS OF DORSEY.

We do not know how many vials of Revelation and how many seals ex-Senator Dorsey may still have to unseal, but his first book has had convincing testimony to its scriptural accuracy and fidelity.

It told the story of the corruption and purchase of a State, whereby the election of the whole country was corrupted. It told of contributions of money for that purpose by men who had no patriotic interests to serve, who had not even a political interest in the election, who did not care which party succeeded, but who did have a base, a sordid and venal interest in corrupting the very fountain-head and source of Federal justice in buying beforehand the nominations to the Supreme bench.

He has told the story with dates, names and particulars. He has not furnished his documentary proof; he has intimated, however, that the opening of the second seal may be expected. But he has had proof as strong as their unenforced testimony could be from the people who are competent to appear as witnesses for the defense, but who refuse to testify.

No witness has arisen to question or to deny the truth of the whole story. One prominent Republican editor, goaded to fury by a stinging insult, has called Dorsey "liar" and "rascal," and one Brooklyn politician, whose name was not mentioned in the story, has uttered a feeble expression of disbelief.

But of those who could speak as witnesses, of those really competent to give evidence, of those who stood in the light of accomplices as well as of witnesses, whose reputation and good standing before their fellow citizens are involved, not one has uttered one word of denial, contradiction, correction or disclaimer. They are dumb.

Jay Gould is charged with having subscribed a large sum of money on condition that he could secure the nomination of Supreme Court Judges who were friendly to his corporate interests. He does not deny it.

Huntington, who rests under the same charge, does not deny it.

Pension Commissioner Dudley, who was an active manager of the campaign, does not deny it.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury John C. New, who is now the real Secretary of the Treasury, was also a manager of this venal campaign, and he does not deny.

Ex-Senator Platt, who delivered the money with his own hands, does not deny it.

Banker Stephenson, who poured out the golden stream, does not deny it.

All of these gentlemen and every one implicated in this shameful business—all of them have been asked again and again to deny the story, but they refuse to speak; they are dumb. Their silence is a confession of guilt as convincing as any explicit avowal could be.

By the use of money and by the influence of money Indiana and New York, two States which had previously voted Democratic, were bought; a national election was obtained by bribery and purchase; the steps of the Supreme bench were tainted with the slime of venality and corruption.

The condonation of the crime is worse than the crime itself. The silent and guilty criminals are not alone in their guilt. They are not outcast culprits. Not a bit of it. The party they have served stands by them. Not one Republican politician, not one Republican editor, not one member of the party has arisen to repudiate the bargain and the hucksters who made it.

On the contrary they glory in it. One of the most reputable Republican papers, the Commercial Advertiser, compares the corruption fund with the ammunition and rations of an army and laugh at "Sunday-school talk about money in elections" as "absurd."

Is this the worst? Have we reached the bottom? Or is there "within the lowest depth a deeper yet?" Unfortunately there is.

The worst of the matter, the worst of the whole bad business, is not that the criminals are silent, not that the accomplices are satisfied, not that the party of corruption rejoices in its corruption. The worst feature is the widespread, universal indifference, apathy, unconcern among the people.

Not to protest against such a crime is to aquiesce in it. Not to punish it is to invite a repetition of it; and yet, if the truth must be told, the people who were cheated, the people who were wronged, the people who were outraged and insulted are almost indifferent. A great political right has been turned into a farce; a great political power has been broken like glass; money has bought a State, money has elected a President, money has bought a reversion of the Supreme bench, and instead of the general outburst of indignation which should blaze across the country, we witness an indifference which cannot be concealed; such indifference as lulled Rome to rest when a Jay Gould Crassus who had bought the ædileship and who had bought the prætorship had finally bought the consulship.

And with such a state of affairs they tell us that the remedy is in the tariff, or in civil service reform; that the great burning question of the day is that our clerks shall be able to pass examinations in fractions and geography, or that pig-iron shall be made to cost a quarter of cent more a pound.

The question of the day is none of these.

It is Electoral Reform.

We must purify our elections. We must protect the ballot-box. We must protect it against the open violence of the ruffian and against the subtler violence of the corruptionist. We must make the ballot represent the free choice of the voter. We must punish all crimes against the purity of elections—bribe-taking as well as bribe-giving.

That is the issue before the people of the United States to-day; that the cause in which the Democratic party is enlisted; the purpose that can give meaning to its counsels and strength to its efforts. The issue is drawn clearly enough. The Republican party stand ranged in battle array on one side, its forces all drawn up in order, its "ammunition and rations" ready, its generals, and camp sutlers and followers equally devoted to the common cause.

The real position of the Democratic party is on the other side. Across this line we must fight our battle; it will be the Armageddon of bribery and corruption and of Republicanism.—N. Y. World.

THOMAS G. HUNT FOUND.

Thomas G. Hunt, of New York, who has been missing since June 19, has been found at Elizabethtown, N. Y. He was a lard merchant in New York and having lost money heavily at different times left his home very suddenly. It was thought without cause. His mind is not clear but he thinks he went to Trenton and from there on some sailing vessel to England at Cambridge, whence he returned to America. He then has no other recollections at all until he was in Chicago, where he thinks he was put in an hospipal suffering from severe illness. After coming out of the hospital he roamed around the country and Tuesday of last week was in Montreal. Then he took a sleeping car and proceeded south on the Canada Railway. Hearing the porter announce the name of Westport it suddenly flashed through his head that he had been there with his father when a boy. The fact is he has boarded at the Windsor Hotel at that place nearly every Summer for the last fifteen years.

Wandering up to Elizabethtown, a distance of eight miles, he remained in the streets till nearly five o'clock Wednesday morning. He then went to the residence of R. W. Livingston, father of Councilman Livingston of this city and knocked at the door. Livingston, who is an intimate friend of Hunt's, did not know him at first, but quickly recognized him. Every possible pains was taken to make him comfortable. Word was telegraphed to his friend, J. L. Livingston, and Edwin Swain, of New York, and to his confidential clerks, and also to his brothers-in-law, Wm. A. Abbe and Henry Pierce, both of New Bedford, Mass. Mr. Hunt says the reason he left his home was he supposed he had lost everything in lard speculation, and wanted to get away from everyone. He knew he had an idea that he was being pursued, and he wanted to escape "them." He evidently had read the reward of $1,000 for him. He departed at his own request on the south-bound train from Westport, in company with his friends. He will go to the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. Bourne, of New Bedford, Mass. His mind is still wandering.

The wind accompanying the shower on Sunday afternoon did considerable damage to the shade trees, and blew a number of the scuttles from off the roofs of several dwellings.

There was considerable excitement among the residents of Smoky Hollow on Sunday afternoon last, the cause being a fight with harsh words and blows between two women residing on Spring St. They were separated by some of the neighbors. As usual no officer was around.

The Town Committee met on Tuesday evening, August 21st, to examine, correct and amend the duplicate. But very little change was made from the Assessor's valuation. Collector Connoly presented a list of property for which the taxes of 1882 are yet due. That the Town Committee may issue their warrant to him so that he may sell the real estate to make the taxes, those who have not paid had better do so before the cost of advertising is added to the bills.

The annual election for officers of the Westfield B. & E. Co. No. 1, was held at Town Rooms on Friday evening, August 17th. There was considerable interest manifested in the election of several of the officers. The following is the result of the election:

Foreman—Charles Wahl.
1st. Assistant—John N. Wilcox.
2d. Assistant—Benj. H. Woodruff.
Secretary—John M. C. Marsh.
Treasurer—C. F. W. Wittke.

The company hope soon to have a fire apparatus similar to one recently purchased by the Bucket & Engine Co. of Scotch Plains, and which did such excellent service at the fire in that village on Sunday afternoon last.

THE best preventative against disease are fresh air, pure water, cleanliness and plain living, and those remedies are within the reach of all.

A WELL known florist says, flowers will keep better wraped in wet newspapers than in any other way. This is another argument in favor of subscribing.

IT pays to advertise. John Wanamaker, the Philadelphia dry goods king, paid $200,000 for advertising last year, and made over a million of dollars.

THERE are no class of people that can do more than our farmers towards making the coming annual fair a success. Select the best products of the farm for exhibition.

HOLMES boasted that constable Weaver dare not attempt to arrest him single-handed. Pete, however, disabused his mind of that idea when he laid his grappling irons on him at Fanwood the other day.

UNDER a new law every voter of Plainfield must register his name before he can vote the coming fall. The Ward election officers act as a Board of Registry before whom each voter must register before election.

Henry Bidwell's paper mill at Springfield, this county, known as the Springfield Board Mill, was burned early Friday morning last, involving a loss of $30,000, on which there was an insurance of about $16,000. Springfield has no fire department.

THE Elizabeth Journal says: "Plainfield is putting in the Gamewell." Not just at present, Mr. Journal. The question is only being agitated by a few. It would be too expensive a luxury, we fear, with the limited means our Board of Managers command.

MESSRS Carney Bros., of 11 Somerset street are receiving large shipments of all the newest styles and latest improvements in stoves, heaters and ranges. They have been compelled to rent the building at No. 55 Somerset street to contain the large assortment.

A THREE-YEAR-OLD in the Second ward while rambling out of door this week managed to get a burr in the rear of his little pants. Running into the house and holding the minute unmentionables as far as possible from the person, he cried out: "Oh,' mamma, I's dot a skeetie bite in my—my—back room!"

MR. WM. DEAN, late proprietor of the Dunellen House, has removed with his family, to The Highlands, opposite Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he will assume proprietorship of a new hotel called "The Highland House." The citizens of that section may congratulate themselves upon the fact that in Mr. Dean, the new hotel has an experienced proprietor, and one who will soon become popular among them. His past experience in this section has proven that he knows how to cater to the public taste in his line of business in a satisfactory manner.

Gratifying All Around.

During the past few weeks Rev. Father Smyth, the new pastor of St. Mary's Church, has been making the personal acquaintance of the members of the congregation by calling upon them at their residences, and at the same time receiving such contributions as might be offered toward the liquidation of the debt on the church. Sunday of last week at both Masses he expressed himself as being highly pleased at the reception given him, and reported the collection of something over $700.

The State Fair.

The twenty-fifth annual fair of the New Jersey State Agricultural Society will be held at Waverly on the 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st of September. The entries for all the departments except "C," "D" and "E" will close on September 8th. The entries excepted include needlework, preserves, etc., which will be received on the 17th, and fruit, flowers and farm produce on the 18th at noon. The admission to the grounds will be the same as usual, fifty cents for adults and twenty-five for children.

Again.

The overseer of Road District No. 3, of North Plainfield, has recently been plowing out the gutters in front of some property belonging to J. Brute Holmes, to secure proper drainage for the roadway, and Mister Holmes has been filling them in again. In consequence a complaint was made against the offender for maliciously obstructing the highway, and Constable Weaver arrested him on Tuesday morning. Bail was furnished—his bondsman being the same as in the last case against him.

Fine Guns.

A. Vanderbeek, No. 33 Park avenue, has just received a new invoice of breech loading guns, which are cheap and serviceable. The "Diana" is something new and elegant and well worth the attention of sportsmen. The "Lefaucheaux" is a handy and effective weapon and remarkably low in price. Call and see them before you purchase elsewhere. He has also on hand guns of superior make and reputation, at prices that cannot be competed with in larger cities. Guns purchased of Mr. V. are always guaranteed.

Reunion of the Fourteenth.

The survivors of the Fourteenth Regiment of New Jersey Volunteers residing in Trenton have appointed committees to arrange for the annual reunion to take place in that city on Oct. 19th. Elizabeth had a company in the Fourteenth, and the last reunion except one was held in that city.

Won The Case.

There was an interesting game of base-ball played last week between nines picked from the guests of the Catskill Mountain House and the Hotel Kaaterskill. Corporation Counsel, Craig A. Marsh, Esq., of this city, was the Captain of the team from the former House, which defeated its opponents two to one.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The young men's prayer meeting on Monday evening next will be led by Mr. Walter M. McGee. Topic—"The Life most worth living."—Col. 3 1-4.

Tickets for the excursion on Tuesday, Aug. 28th, to the Highlands of Navesink, can be obtained at the Library of the Association.

Thanks.

Our esteemed friend Seymour G. Smith, has our thanks for a number of large and delicious Black Bass left at our home by him a few days since. We learn that his brother caught over 70 pounds of the B. B s in Lake Ontario inside of two hours time, the fish presented us being a portion of the catch.

A Model "Smasher."

Mr. J. H. Garretson, the genial baggage-master of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad at Plainfield, is a model representative of his profession. It is seldom indeed that we meet one in his position as polite and obliging as Mr. Garretson.—Bayonne Herald.

The Herald is right. "Jerry" is one of the most accommodating and obliging officials on the road.

Some Potatoes.

Complaints are heard from amateur and other gardeners in this vicinity, regarding the rotting in the hill of this year's crop of potatoes. Mr. Samuel H. Megie, of East Front street, however, cannot be troubled in that way, as we recently saw two Early Roses taken by him from the same hill, weighing over two pounds and perfectly sound.

Some Other Thomas.

A recently published account in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST of the kicking of Mr. John Thomas of New Brunswick by a horse, led many to suppose the victim was their old Plainfield friend, Mr. J. B. Thomas, now one of the former city's prosperous merchants. As the latter gentleman called on us recently in the best of health and explicitly denied being kicked, we take pleasure in stating that the victim was "another Thomas."

Somebody's Family Vault.

The following item is going the rounds of the State press:

A prehistoric cave was discovered at Brooklyn, N. J., on Friday last, in which were found the petrified bones of several persons, supposed to be Indians. One of these is apparently the shoulder-blade of a man of gigantic stature, while the other relics are of persons of ordinary size, one being a child. There are also various implements of stone, one of which is a large axe. Professor Cook, State Geologist, has been informed of the discovery, and is expected to look into the matter.

Trotting at Somerville.

On Saturday, September 1st, there will be a trotting meeting at Somerville on the track of the Somerset County Agricultural Society. There will be three races —two to sulkeys, one double team, and Irish Lad and Star will also trot the same day. There are five entries in the first race—Daisy P., Nelly, Crazy Jane, Lady Pierson and Gentle Annie. In the double team race—Brown Kitty and Dolly Varden, and Fred & Dan. Star who was beaten here recently by Irish Lad, trotted Waverly track in 2:27 and 2:27¼ on Friday last. These two will meet again at Somerville.

Personalia.

Mr. J. William Van Sickle is spending a few days at Long Branch.

Fire Commissioner Solomon Fisig is at Thomaston, Conn., visiting friends.

Mr. and Miss Schipper and Mrs. Otto Arens, are at the Catskill Mountain House.

Mr. R. W. Anderson, the dentist, will spend the last week of August in New York State.

Miss Jennie, daughter of County Clerk Vosseller, and Miss Kittie Drayton are summering at the Catskill Mountains.

The Rev. K. P. Ketcham has returned from Beach Haven, and will occupy his own pulpit next Sunday and thereafter.

Mr. Samuel Manning, Treasurer of the N. J. State Agricultural Society, has returned from a western trip much improved in health.

Wm. H. Voorhees and family have returned from their Summer visit to Asbury Park. "Doc" wishes he was back there again these hot days.

Mr. Clark W. Evans has just composed the words and music of a rollicking song with a waltz chorus, that is bound to be popular. It is called "Down the Bay."

Mrs. Frank Drake, of St. Louis, Mo., who has been spending a portion of the Summer with Miss Marion Packard of this city, started for the former place on Tuesday last.

Mr. S. S. Lancaster and family of Le Grande avenue, is spending the Summer at Vevay, Switzerland, enjoying themselves and good health in a very satisfactory manner.

County Clerk Vosseller returned to his home in this city on Thursday night last. He has been very materially benefited in health by his trip to Minnesota and other portions of the West.

Mr. A. V. D. Taylor, of the Somerset Messenger and his charming wife, together with Mr. Stephen A. D. Smith, of the Hopewell Herald, and the Mrs. Smith that is to be, are ruralizing at Long Hill Morris county, for a few weeks.

Mr. Charles McCann, for many years in charge of the Central railroad section men in this locality, has resigned such position and accepted a more lucrative offer from another company. His many friends in this city congratulate him on his deserved good fortune.

Ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph was last week re-elected to the office of Treasurer of the Illinois Central Railroad Company in spite of his sincere desire to be allowed retirement and rest. The Directors insisted he should retain the care of their finances, but good health may demand an entire surrender of such important charge.

Councilman Robert Simpson and Street Commissioner John Meeker have returned from their visit to Morris county. During their sojourn at Chester they were most hospitably entertained at the residence of Mr. H. H. DeCamp, whose guests they were. The fish, however, at the lake, refused to bite at bare hooks, and as no bait could be procured wherewith to lure them from their native element, there has been no exaggerated fish stories told by the visitors since their return.

Veteran Teachers.

Union County has five school teachers who have taught over a quarter of a century. S. P. Mulford and S. M. Stiles, of Elizabeth, are the oldest, each having taught 32 years.

Don't You Forget It!

The Junior Bachelors and The merry Maidens are to hold a grand picnic in Wooden's Grove, during Thursday afternoon and evening of next week, to which all are invited even though they are married. The favorite Prof. Vose will lead the music, and all who attend will have a glorious time.

On The Other Foot.

The application was recently granted of the Plainfield Board of Education, through the efforts of its counsel, ex-Corporation Counsel C. W. Kimball, for a mandamus against the County Treasurer for some $2,000 of an amount of school moneys received by that official for the educational purposes of this city but retained by him and credited on Plainfield's quota of County tax. This time the shoe is on the other foot and we have the bulge on friend Sheridan.

Dr. J. H. Vincent on Prayer.

At Chautauqua, Sunday, Dr. J. H. Vincent preached the baccalaureate sermon to the members of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle. Six thousand persons were present. Dr. Vincent's text was from James iv., 3. The preacher said that all men everywhere pray. Man has an appetite for immortality. The largest, grandest, most opulent souls have been men of prayer. Prayer is one of the mightiest factors in acquiring true mental growth and cultivation; it gives power. He grows large who thinks much about God, the centre of all knowledge and power. Fellowship with God to-day is better than the miracles in Christ's time. The best things in science are founded on faith.

On Duty Again.

For the past two weeks Mr. J. B. Hurlburt, foreman of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST job rooms has been enjoying a vacation with his family among friends and acquaintances in Oneida and Lewis counties, New York state. For fifteen years Mr. H. has been a faithful servitor of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST establishment, and has seldom enjoyed even a short vacation, prefering rather to remain at his post of duty, where he has proven of invaluable service since his connection with the establishment. He returns from his trip refreshed and with renewed health, and reports that the crop of Democrats in the sections he has visited is very favorable to the campaign of 1884, and that the yield will be enormous, while the crop of dudes in the cities of Utica and Rome is somewhat subdued in consequence of extreme dampness of the weather. All other crops are in excellent condition and promise well.

Base Ball.

The Crescent Association of this city seems unable to stand a defeat, and in spite of a really successful season on the whole, has lost its vigor since the Elizabeth game of the 1st inst. No interest in the affairs of the Association is shown, and the active members of the nine—with two or three exceptions—play little and practice less. After some effort a game was arranged for Saturday last, at Bergen Point, with the Mystics of that place, but only three of the Crescent nine (Messrs. Cornwell, Gavett and Doane) took part. The vacant places were filled as effectively as possible on short notice, and as interesting a game was played as could be expected when is considered the entire lack of combined practice experienced by the team selected. Costly errors lost the game, but the defeat should be charged not to those who played but to those whose absence brought it about. The score by innings was:

Bergen Point—2 0 1 0 0 0 0 4 4—11

Plainfield—2 0 1 0 6 1 0 0 0—10

Two's-day.

Owing to the remarkably pleasant weather and splendid management of the affair throughout, the picnic of Tuesday last, in Wooden's Grove, by Plainfield Eng. and Hose Co's No. 2, was largely attended, thoroughly enjoyed and entirely successful. The grand march, which included 67 couples, led by Mr. Everett Marsh and lady, was really perfect; and the music during the whole evening was particularly good. Mayor Maxson opened the evening's pleasures with an address to the gathering, which was able, appropriate and enthusiastically received. Until early morning there was no interruption to the enjoyment, and everything passed off smoothly and satisfactorily. The officers were—General Director, Aaron T. Marsh; Floor Manager, Everett Marsh; Floor As'sts, Alexander Gee and Frank Krewson. We understand that financially, also, the event was most gratifying—as it deserved to be. Next comes their excursion, which will undoubtedly be more successful if possible.

Out-Door Festivities.

Tuesday, Aug. 28th.—Excursion of the First Presbyterian and Trinity Reformed Sunday Schools, to the Highlands of Navesink.

Thursday, August 30th—Grand Picnic by the Junior Bachelors' Social Club, in Wooden's Grove, during the afternoon and evening. First class music and every attraction that can be secured.

Thursday, Aug. 30th—Special Excursion by the Steamer City of Richmond, up the Hudson, giving 3 hours at West Point and 2 hours at Newburg. Train leaves Plainfield at 8:12 a. m. Tickets for the entire trip—Adults, $1.25; Children, 75 cents.

Wednesday, Sept. 5th—Annual Excursion of the Crescent avenue Sunday School to Long Branch, Ocean Grove and Asbury Park. Leaving Plainfield at 7:30 a. m.; Ocean Grove at 5 p. m. Tickets, $1.25.

Thursday, Sept. 6th—Water Excursion to Roton Point, Conn., including a magnificent sail up the Sound, by Plainfield Engine Co. No. 2. Tickets $1.—children 75 cents.

Fire at Scotch Plains.

Just as the church bells were ringing for Sunday School services at Scotch Plains last Sunday afternoon an alarm of fire was given caused by the discovery of flames issuing from a small barn belonging to Mr. Harvy Dean, and situated in the heart of the village among a nest of other barns and dwellings. The firemen promptly answered to the call and were soon at work battling the flames. Delay was caused in getting the alarm, as many people imagined the bells were ringing for the School services only. Excelsior Hook & Ladder Co. No. 1, soon had a line of buckets formed, passing water to the fire, while the new fire company, "Fanwood," quickly got their chemical engine at work.

In close proximity to the burning building was situated another large barn and the large ice house of Mr. Geo. Cook. Through the indefatigable efforts of the firemen these and other buildings were saved from destruction. The new engine worked satisfactorily and to both companies equal credit is due for the good work done in preventing the spread of the flames. About four tons of hay and some farming implements were destroyed. The fire was caused by a bolt of lightning striking the barn, a severe thunder shower prevailing at that time.

Appreciation.

In returning thanks to the firemen and citizens of Scotch Plains for their kindness in assisting to protect my property from fire last Saturday afternoon, I desire to express to the members of Fanwood Bucket & Engine Co. No. 1, my grateful appreciation of their kindness and good will; for to the promptness of this company with such a valuable engine as theirs has proven itself to be, is due the credit of saving my buildings. I also thank the members of Excelsior H. & L. Co. No. 1. JOHN G. COOK.

Scotch Plains, N. J., Aug. 21st 1883.

Next Tuesday's Excursion.

The only excursion of the season whereat you can have everything you want, is that of Tuesday next, by the First Presbyterian and Trinity Reformed Sunday Schools, to the Highlands of Navesink. You can bathe in still-water or in the surf; you can go sailing or rowing: you can fish or crab; or you can get off at East Long Branch (where the train will stop both ways) and spend the day among more aristocratic scenes. Ample accommodations for all will be found at the Highlands; where a new pavillion and bath-houses have recently been erected.

Don't miss this excursion. Besides the attractive features mentioned above, the view of the elegant summer cottages along the ocean from Long Branch to the Highlands and a visit to the celebrated twin-light-houses, are alone worth the price of a ticket—$1.25. If stormy the excursion will take place the next day—Wednesday, the 29th inst. Train leaves Plainfield at 7:30 a. m. Returning leave the Highlands at 6 p. m.

The Peach Crop.

Morris county gained a reputation for the peaches grown here years ago, when Morris County Whites were in universal demand for canning purposes. Bernardsville is just over the county line, but the soil is precisely the same and Morris and Somerset could make a close contest if one should be attempted. The New Jersey growers of peaches in this region devote their work to late peaches, as far as possible, and care more for quality than quantity. The shipments from this point began last week and are beginning to attain some importance. When the season reaches its height a daily "peach train" is run thence to New York, and when it reaches Hoboken there are sometimes from 1,200 to 2,000 baskets, representing an equal number of dollars at least. The variety now going into market is the Mountain Rose, as good a peach "all 'round" as they raise hereabout. The Old Mixons, a favorite variety comes in later and will sell this season for $1.50 a basket without difficulty. The Stump of the World is a favorite also and its abbreviated name "Stump" is familiar in the markets. The Malacatoons are much liked and sell remarkably well.

"It is a good peach year; not great, but full of promise. There are not so many peaches as to make gluts in the market probable, but there are enough to give the grower assurance of a fine profit in spite of the commission merchant, the one person the Morris and Somerset farmers never expect to see when they reach the Heaven to which most of them are confident they are travelling.—Iron Era.

A Model Mansion.

Dunellen at present is justly proud of the erection within its limits of probably the most complete private residence in the State. Every improvement of modern times and many entirely novel ones in the way of plumbing, ventilation, water service and sewerage have been included in this new home, which, when completed, will be an honor to its architect, a credit to its builders and the envy of the beholder.

This remodeled residence with its new stables, carriage and ice houses, is building for Christian Schepflin, Esq., senior member of the well-known firm of clothing manufacturers of this city. The house contains on the first floor, a parlor, dining room, library, billiard room, conservatory, lavatory, butler's pantry, kitchen and spacious hall; on the second floor, seven large bed rooms and two bath rooms, while the third story is a finished attic. Below the first floor provision is made for laundry, milk room, wine room, coal bins and ample storage rooms and cellars.

Solid brick walls on concrete footings support all partitions, and the cellar floors are of stone and concrete, eight inches in thickness. The studding of all outside walls are filled in with brick, and double floors laid throughout the first and second stories. The rooms are finished in cherry and pine; conservatory and vestibule floors and hearths of illuminated tiling; hard-wood mantels in parlor and dining room, and hard-wood wainscoting four feet in height around billiard and dining rooms.

The plumbing work is very complete, and the material used is of the best. Water is supplied to all house fixtures (from a tank located in stable building) through glass lined iron pipe so as to keep it perfectly pure, as it comes from a well which has been drilled through rock to the depth of sixty feet, tapping a large vein of pure cold water. The stable buildings and grounds are also provided with a complete system of iron pipes for distributing water at desirable and convenient points. A thorough system of ventilation is provided for all waste pipes of the house which discharge the sewerage into a system of flush tanks and sub-surface drainage pipes, put in under the supervision of Mr. Olcott, a sanitary engineer of Orange, N. J. By such arrangements the old system of cess-pools is disposed with and all danger from sewer gases, &c., avoided.

The heating arrangements consist of one of Gold's wrought-iron heaters, provided with hot water attachment for warming the conservatory. There are also open fire-places and grates in all the principal rooms on first and second stories.

The stable buildings are built in the same substantial manner, and a system of electric bells and speaking tubes provide for any desired communication with the house. These outbuildings are all finished in yellow pine, thoroughly seasoned and oiled. The ice house has a capacity of sixty tons; its walls filled in with mineral wool and its floor of concrete. A Springfield gas machine supplies all the buildings and grounds.

The grounds are very extensive and handsomely laid out. Broad macadamized drives extend everywhere, and an elegant stone bridge will span the brook where it runs through the premises. The owner has not confined the spirit of improvement within his own private possessions, but has shown his desire to benefit the community by flagging and curbing the entire frontage of his property—some 400 feet.

The mason work of all the improvements was executed by F. H. Gise, of Dunellen; carpenter work of house by John Bodine, of this city; carpenter work of stable buildings by John Chandler, of this city; painting of house by Wm. Alpaugh and of stable buildings by Chas. R. Hobby, both of this city. The entire system of plumbing work, &c., on the premises was executed by Berry & Thorn, of Front street. The grading work of premises was performed by S. R. Pope, of Dunellen. The entire improvements were carried out from the drawings and under the personal supervision of Charles E. Jacques, architect, of this city, and 208 Broadway, New York.

The Game Laws.

As so many erroneous statements regarding the correct time for killing or taking of game birds and fishes in this State have appeared in the columns of the press recently, we have taken the trouble to make a correct compilation of the game laws regarding the time of "open" seasons, with amount of penalty attached for infringement of the law: It is therefore only legal to kill

FIRE MATTERS.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met in adjourned meeting, Tuesday evening, in the house of Zephyr H. & L. Co. All present excepting Mr. Depew. A number of bills were ordered paid, and the election of several new members endorsed by the Board. Messrs Jones, Fisig and Van Winkle were appointed a committee to superintend the repairing of Warren Eng. House, at a cost not to exceed $800. On motion of Mr. Jones, the Secretary was requested to notify the Treasurer to report; on motion of Mr. Morris, certain painting and kalsomining was directed for the Truck house, and a heater ordered for No. 2. The Com. on Supplies was instructed to investigate the matter of furnishing badges and by-laws to members, and examine into the project of a telegraphic fire-alarm system. A shut off nozzle was ordered on thirty day's trial, and the Board adjourned.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Aug. 20, 1883.

ANDREW L. CARNEY, Esq., Chief Engineer, Plainfield Fire Department.

RESPECTED SIR:—

Having, at your request, represented you, in accepting an invitation from Empire Engine Co. No. 2, of Westfield, N. J., to examine into the workings of their Chemical Engine, as to its details and capabilities in the extinguishing of fires, I would most respectfully report as follows, viz.:

That on Friday, the 17th inst, the time appointed by the company for the exhibition, I visited their house at Westfield, where every courtesy was extended to me. The apparatus consists of two tanks, with the necessary hose, pipes, cut-offs, etc. The tanks are of polished brass, having a capacity of 50 gallons each, with guage for each tank, rated for a pressure of 200 pounds per square inch. They are filled with water by a double acting force pump, attached to the rear of the apparatus, taking suction from brook, well or cistern, which is used when the fire is under control, for washing same down, thus saving their tank. It is capable of throwing a stream through 50 feet of ¾ inch hose, with a ¼ inch nozzel 65 feet. In the top of each tank is a glass ball which is controlled by a crank and filled with 4 pounds of vitrol. When the engine is put in action this ball is upset by the crank and the acid is dropped into the water, which contains 25 pounds of soda. By the same crank the ball is returned to its proper place—the tank is then ready for action. Upon arriving at the place designated for the experiment, I found a fire already started, consisting of light brush, shavings, straw, five kerosene barrels, with about fifteen flour barrels, on which had had been thrown five gallons of kerosene. After the same had been thoroughly ignited I requested the Foreman (who placed the management under my control) to get his Extinguisher ready for action. In one minute from the time the acid was dropped into the water and the agitator started which mixes the compound, there was 180 pounds pressure in tank No. 1, No. 2 being held in reserve. The fire at this time was burning fiercely. I then asked him to start his engine, which he did and in two minutes and sixteen seconds the fire was under perfect control. I desired him to shut down, and on examining tank No 1, found she had a pressure of eighty pounds. The fire was then allowed to gain headway and was much fiercer than on first experiment, with eighty pounds remaining in tank, was in six minutes again under control, with a pressure still left of 40 pounds. Upon examining tank No. 2, I found it had no connection with tank No. 1, so requested the Foreman to connect with No. 2, to ascertain the time necessary for change, which was just twenty seconds, when tank No. 2 was ready for use, with 120 pounds pressure. The fire in the mean time having obtained considerable headway, Tank No. 2 was set to work and in one minute and seventeen seconds the fire was for the third time controlled. I then suggested disconnecting the pipe line from the tanks, placing same on pumps and washing the fire down, which was done and the fire entirely extinguished in five minutes. In both experiments there were in use two lengths of hose of fifty feet each, or one hundred feet in all, with a ¼ inch nozzel, which by a spring cap controlled the stream so that the pipeman could put it on or shut it off at his discretion without any notice to the engineer. While tank No. 2 was in operation tank No. 1 was refilled and gotten ready for action, which consumed about two minutes, so that before No. 2 was exhausted, tank No. 1 was ready for use, with three minutes to spare. The apparatus worked perfectly and in every way a success. I would respectfully request you to suggest to the Hon. Board of Fire Commissioners the expediency of purchasing a similar one for our city, and I desire, through you, to thank the officers and members of Empire Engine Co. No. 2, for the courtesy and consideration extended to me, trusting before long, we may have them meet us with their Engine, in order that the Board and yourself may see the practicability and usefulness of such an apparatus for our Department.

Respectfully Yours,
BENJ. A. MUMFORD.

Our Public Library.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Did you read the report of the Directors of this institution?

It seems to me that said report does not make a very good showing for the tax payer. I am in favor of education and accommodating the public, but it seems to me that this report shows a large outlay of expense for the benefits derived.

This report shows that our library consists of 30 books and 25 periodicals, the books having been donated to the institution. The expense to run these 30 books and 25 periodicals for the year past, stands thus, viz:

Printing, postage, box rent and circulars	$ 60 41
Furniture and fixtures	249 12
Librarian and Janitor	162 50
Supplies, coal, oil, &c	42 97
Papers and periodicals	118 72
Rent	150 00
Total expenditures	$783 72

Now it seems to me that this is paying out altogether too much money to run an institution containing only 30 books and 25 periodicals. The report shows that they have received since the institution was organized, $1,568.67. The report shows expenditures for the past year to be $783.72, but does not show that a single dollar has ever been paid out for books or what has become of the balance received. I understand that we really raise only about $800 annually. Deducting $783.72 and we have a surplus above running expenses of $16.28. Do we not need a prudential committee to look after this matter? It may be fun for those that receive the money, but "death to the tax payer." If the Board of Directors cannot explain and make a better showing than this report, the institution had better be closed up for the time being, the 30 books boxed up or loaned to the Y. M. C. A. or some other institution of public benefit, until we have saved money enough to purchase a respectable library out of the taxation under the law. I believe in something for something when we are using the public's money. If I mistake not our city has been taxed for school purposes since 1870 over $306,000. I have paid my share of this as well as my taxes for our library; but, sir, I do not mind the taxation if the money is judiciously expended, for I believe in the education of the people and that the property of the public should educate its subjects, but I do not believe in extravagance or supporting institutions for the sake of place or support of individuals at the expense of public funds. Perhaps some one can give light on this library showing. TAX-PAYER.

A BATCH OF NEWSY HUMOROSITIES.

Magnanimous Moses—A Good Business—Creme de la Creme—The Advantage—What to Give Him—Not Difficult to Satisfy Him—A Safe Risk—The First Victim.

MAGNANIMOUS MOSES.

Moses Variolold was up before the police court for abusing his wife—beating her over the head, kicking her out of the house, accompanied by similar other little playful eccentricities, at the conclusion of which his wife fled to the home of her parents, in another town. Moses was promptly fined $10 and costs, which he paid.

"An' now, your Honor," he said, pleadingly, "would you min' writin' a letter to my wife?"

"What shall I say for you in a letter to your wife?" inquired the judge.

"You might say, sir, that if she will come back to me all will be forgiven."

A GOOD BUSINESS.

The late Mayo Watkins, of Virginia, was somewhat noted for his quaint wit. On one occasion a pompous young man, with very high notions of his own importance, consulted him in regard to choosing a vocation for life. He said: "Mr. Watkins, as you have been a very successful man, I am sure you are capable of giving excellent advice to a young man just starting in life. What business would you advise me to engage in?"

"Shoemaking," was the sententious reply.

The young man gazed at him in blank amazement for several seconds, but seeing that he was apparently in deep earnest, he inquired his reason for recommending such an humble occupation.

Without cracking a smile, Mr. Watkins replied: "Shoemaking is a good business, a very good business, and it will always remain a good business as long as babies are born barefooted."

CREME DE LA CREME.

"Dear me!" exclaimed a city girl who visited the dairy for the first time, "what queer looking stuff this is! It looks just like yellow paint. What is it?"

"Why, that's cream on top of the milk, sis," said the dairyman.

"Is that so?" she asked in astonishment. "Why, the cream I use always comes in boxes and has a label, so we can tell what it is."

The farmer sat right down on the stone floor and fanned himself with a milk pan.

THE ADVANTAGE.

"You have the advantage of me," said the cashier, blandly. "You will have to get some one to identify you."

"Identify me? Why, I am your son, just back from college for the summer vacation."

"May be, may be," answered the cashier, "but my son did not look like a fool, wear a cockney hat, monkey-tail coat, skin-tight breeches, tooth-pick shoes, nor did he suck cane handles. When my wife returns from Europe, in September, you might present your claims to her, and if she decides that you are our offspring I shall be happy to bid you an affectionate good bye on your return to college. In the meantime I would suggest that you earn your living hiring yourself out for a tailor sign. Good-day, sir."

WHAT TO GIVE HIM.

It is said that the postmaster of New York keeps a file of all the foolish letters he receives. If the newspapers throughout the country were to act in like manner, special store-room would be necessary. It seems that when the foolishly-inclined man has nothing else to do, he writes a silly letter to an editor. The other day the editor of this paper received the following from a Tennessee postmaster: "There's a sick man in this town who claims to be from Arkansaw. What shall we do with him as he is without means?" There was but one natural reply: "Give him medicine!"

NOT DIFFICULT TO SATISFY HIM.

"Now you see if I was rich I wouldn't slave myself at work this hot weather," said Job Shuttle, reflectively.

"Ah, yes, you would," exclaimed Patience, with a smile. "You always would work. I should like to know when you would call yourself rich enough to stop work?"

"Well, Patience, my dear, if I was rich enough to keep a coupon cutter running by steam, I would take it easy for a fortnight, right in the heat of the weather."

A SAFE RISK.

"I want to get my life insured for $10,000," said a Southern editor to an insurance agent, "but to be frank with you, I have accepted a challenge to fight a duel, next week. If you care to take the chances you can make out the policy at once."

"Who is the other man?" asked the agent, as he handed over the papers and pocketed the premium. He was told, and when he went to bed that night he felt that the two policies issued that day were the safest risks he had ever accomplished.

THE FIRST VICTIM.

"Didn't you say you never knew that dog to bite?" cried the lightning rod agent as he climbed up a maple tree and left a large section of the west end of his pantaloons in the dog's mouth.

"Yes, I did," said the farmer, "and I told the truth. You are the first man I ever saw that dog bite. You see, I bought him conditionally. The man I got him of guaranteed him. If he bit the first lightning rod agent that came fooling around the premises, I was to pay $5 for him, and if he didn't, I was to send him back. I am satisfied with him. I wouldn't sell him now for $15. Wait till he comes down, Towser."

MARRYING THE FAMILY.

"I am not marrying the whole family, mother!" It was I, Ruth Grant, who spoke, with all the sententious wisdom of eighteen, in answer to some objections my mother had seen fit to make to my engagement to William Thorpe.

My mother was a widow, left with a moderate income, and an only child to grow up as wilful a girl as there was to be found in the village in which we lived, and whose only redeeming trait was a loving heart. William Thorpe was the son of a neighboring farmer of large means, but whose peculiarities were well known in the neighborhood. It was, therefore, with a great deal of anxiety that mother saw the growing intimacy between the young man and myself. Vainly had she thought to dissuade me from the match; but what girl of eighteen, in love with a handsome young fellow, is willing to reject him because his father has the gout or other disagreeable ailments, whether mental or physical, and every separate member of his family, clear back to the forty-second cousin, some peculiarity that may clash with her own temper? Of course, that was out of the question; so mother's warnings were useless, my refuge being the indisputable fact that I was not marrying the family, Will being free from fault or blemish.

"Figuratively speaking, my dear child, you may find you have married the largest part of it," replied mother. "You are, no doubt, prepared to yield obedience to one master, but how will it answer when a dozen will command?"

"Will can never allow that!" I exclaimed, indignantly.

"I am not so sure of that. William Thorpe loves you, no doubt, but he is sensitive to ridicule, and I fear lacks the moral courage to shield you from the thousand and one annoyances that will beset you, and which, after all, make up the sum total of a happy or miserable life. Great trials we grapple with and by the very energy invoked we master them; but a mind is superior, indeed, that can calmly withstand the constant drip, drip of fault-finding and cowardly innuendoes. If Mrs. Thorpe was living, I should not feel so badly, for she was another victim to marrying a family. Some men can and do shield their wives by bearing the brunt of the battle themselves, but I fear William Thorpe is not one them.

A girl less accustomed to her own way might have hesitated to take a step fraught with the dangers so dispassionately pointed out by her mother, but I had too long held my own gait to be frightened by what I considered imaginary troubles, and six months afterwards I was installed as the mistress of a pretty cottage, as happy a bride as ever sun shone upon. I had urged mother to live with us, but she had remained inflexible to pouting and coaxing alike, declaring she would at least save me that source of trouble.

Ten years have slipped slowly by since then, and I discovered that I had indeed married the family. It is a many headed hydra, to which I have sacrificed my best feelings. First comes Father Thorpe. He was a little, shriveled-up old man, with a keen, black eye, cold and unmerciful, and a sharp nose that seemed eternally bent upon ferreting out some flaw in words or deed. Affection, he had none for himself, and looked with suspicion on all who approached him with a show of feeling. A perfect tyrant, he allowed no opinion that clashed with his own, and the fear with which his children looked upon him was the only controlling influence that could hold the heterogeneous mass under control.

Next came Aunt Tabitha Green, tall, thin and angular, a perfect epitome of household virtues, whose fingers had forgotten how to relax, so constant was their grasp of broom, dust-pan, brush or knitting-needles, and, in whose opinion, rest or recreation should have been included as one of the deadly sins. Having little scope for the exercise of her powers at home, I was a God-send to the old lady.

Then how shall I depict the quartette, Belinda, the languishing; Mary Ann, the domestic; Sophia, the blue stocking, and Catherine, the fast young woman, each a devotee to her own peculiarities, and unanimous only on one subject, viz., that I should have resembled each to have been the suitable wife of their brother; for I was given to no specialty, being only a plain girl with a fair share of faults and good qualities, and who seemed what she was.

There were two others in the family group; saucy, rollicking Tom, who, from the first, was my champion, and dear little Nell, to whom my heart went out as it did to no other, and for whose dear sake, long after the curly head was laid under the violets, I forgave much, and tried to be what each and all required.

I had been married just one week when the first shock came. Tom and Nell had been spending the day with me, bringing with them the new feeling of having brothers and sisters, which imparted a keen pleasure to one so little used to such ties. The dignity of wifehood was too recent to weigh very heavily upon me, and I had gone down on the floor with the children to be initiated into the mysteries of kite-making by Tom, while I played mantuamaker to a doll I had purchased for Nell. Will had come in and was enjoying the frolic as much as the children, when suddenly Aunt Tabitha and Belinda made their appearance. I sprang up to meet them, laughingly, shaking out a lapful of chips, paper and rags on the floor.

"Lord have mercy on us! Ruthy Ann, what are you a-doing? Take the brush right away and brush them up. What sort of raising kin you have had, anyhow?" was the greeting I received from one, while the other pursed up her lips, elevated her eye brows and drawled out: "I should suppose, Will, you would admire a little more dignity in your wife! Such pursuits are beneath the dignity of anything but a hoyden!"

I looked to my husband to defend me. The face that so shortly had been so smiling was now dark with frowns, and when at last they were gone, he begged I should never let his aunt and sister catch me in the like predicament. Had I, then, done wrong, or was mother right? That night there was a tear-stained pillow and a firm resolve that I would try to please them all. Did I succeed? Ask any other woman who has undertaken the herculean task.

If Aunt Tabitha came there was sure to be a flaw in my household arrangements, or else I was reading while there were still underned stockings in my work-basket. On the other hand I was sure to be deeply immersed in household cleaning, darning or cake-baking when Sophia came to discuss some literary gem, and Will assured me I gave just cause for the remarks that my soul soared no higher than a baking-pan. So, therefore, I dropped everything to hasten to Sophia, who was really a companionable girl, until two or three visits from Aunt Tabitha, when everything was topsy-turvey, had been duly repeated with appropriate remarks, and Mary Ann assured me that I should certainly ruin Will, that I began to fear that whichever horn of the dilemma I took it was sure to be the wrong one.

If, to please Catherine, I bought a more jaunty hat or brighter colors, I was soon made aware that such things did well enough for a girl like Catherine, but was positively disreputable in a married woman. Or, when rushing to the other extreme, I wore clothes almost Quaker-like in their simplicity, I heard of the Thorpe pride that would not be disgraced by my penuriousness.

Economy being Mary Ann's hobby, I was taken to task concerning my household expenses. If, at Belinda's urging I bought a knot of ribbon, or a book of poems to please Sophia, I must render an account of money expended, and was then told that I could have purchased it somewhere else for half the sum.

Thus have I been everything to everybody with equal results. I have been pensive and sentimental with Belinda; loud and boisterous with Catherine; economical for Mary Ann's sake; a perfect bookworm to please Sophia; a pattern housekeeper in Aunt Tabitha's presence; and, above all, an object of contempt to myself when I had discovered that I had lost my husband's regard by marrying his family!

Tom has grown up and taken to himself a wife, a large-hearted, whole-souled little woman, just the one I knew Tom would choose. She has asserted her independence, and shielded by her husband, has taught me that my ideal home may be realised, and that a woman may marry without including the family in her promise to "love, honor and obey."

FASHION NOTES.

The fever for white hats continues.

Buttons imitating buckles are in use.

Gray is the favored color for riding habits.

White plumes and tips are in constant demand.

Plaited lace in all widths is used in great abundance.

Leafless roses are extravagantly used as bonnet garniture.

Flower epaulets vie with ribbon bows for the shoulder.

Low shoes, tied across the instep, are worn with black stockings.

Very handsome French jet is again in favor for rich costumes.

Large sailor hats are considered in keeping with blouse waists.

Short pelerines with long tab-like ends in front, are much worn.

Overdresses of Persian material are in good taste and much admired.

Embroidered gauze is employed for trimming handsome morning and mountain hats.

Most of the white dresses for morning wear are made with baby waists and sash backs.

Little gypsy hats of dark blue or deep yellow straw, trimmed with a cluster of wild flowers, are very pretty for morning wear.

Swallows are fashion's favorites in Paris. They adorn bonnets by twos and threes; they are embroidered on dresses and parasols, painted on ornaments and stamped on buttons.

Flower necklets or dog collars of small roses, apple blossoms, forget-me-nots, pansies or daisies make a pretty and tasteful heading for a deep lace frill or collarette, but they are suitable only for evening wear.

India mull is the bride's dress of this season. The trains are made to fall in a Watteau plait from the shoulders, and the veil is of tulle, the wreath and garnitures of orange blossoms, buds and much green foliage.

The traveling cloak for young ladies' summer journeys is a cheviot Newmarket, closely fitted from neck to foot, with checks of mingled ecru, garnet, brown and olive. There is a pointed hood with garnet silk lining.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11, 1880.

MESSRS. SEABURY & JOHNSON:—I am slow to pin my faith in any new curative agent. Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster has won my good opinion. I find it an exceptionally cleanly plaster to use and rapid in its action. Many tests of its qualities in my own family, and among my patients, have convinced me that there is no other single article so valuable for popular use, none so helpful in cases of Lame Back, Local Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Congestion of the Bronchial Tubes and Lungs and Lumbago. POETRY.

THE EDITOR.

BEFORE.

Who in his sanctum sits up late
And strives, with sentences of weight,
To set to right affairs of State?
The editor—admire him!

Who deftly molds the public thought?
For money who can ne'er be bought?
Who always for the right has fought?
The editor—respect him!

Who knows what great men do and say,
And files obituaries away,
When they shall die to print next day?
The editor—revere him!

Who gives us cure for cough or cold?
Who suffers patiently and long,
And wisdom uses language strong?
The editor—don't chide him!

Who ignorance must ne'er confess?
Who knows of all things more or less—
Or what he don't know sure can guess?
The editor—consult him!

When youthful talent seeks to rise,
Who views its growth with friendly eyes,
Its merits quick to recognize?
The editor—oh, bless him!

AFTER.

Who doth good judgment sadly lack?
Who hath of taste not e'en a smack?
Who sent my little poem back?
The editor—confound him!

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

LA TARPIAUDE

An Interesting and Thrilling Love Story of a Convict.

'I really do no know,' said Jairas, 'why I should tell you these things, for you will probably not believe me, and nevertheless it would be easy for you to find out that I have not changed one word of the story, which everybody has heard, and which I first related to the judges.'

I am from Bordeaux—a foundling—brought up anywhere and anyhow. My first recollections are about a mother who used to kiss me, and a father who beat me as if I were without feeling.

Then I don't remember anything more. Mother was dead and father had gone away somewhere.

Some charitable folks put me in a Brothers' school, where they taught me to read and write. That was all. I was thick-headed, but I grew up solidly. When I left school I was strong and muscular.

I became a boatman; then I hired myself out as a laborer on those great flatboats which unloaded the merchant vessels along the Gironde.

Rolling hogsheads and casks, carrying heavy packages—that was my trade, and a hard one; but it pays well.

I spent my life at it. A brutal sort of a life, if you like, but an honest one. I never injured anyone. I earned my bread and spent my money as fast as I made it. Perhaps I was a little too ready to strike, for I am quick tempered, but I had an open heart and hand. And even if I did fight sometimes for a mere trifle, I did so without any real hatred, and never refused to do a favor for a friend.

I must confess that I like to drink a little once in a while, but not too much. No one ever saw me to do as some men do—staggar from one cabaret to another, and lie down to sleep it off in all sorts of disreputable places. But I like to have a little spree with friends, and I like the company of young girls who served the mild wine, and whose eyes were soft and gentle. I was just twenty-three; and was no more afraid of work than I was of fun.

Well, there came a hard winter that year. Even at Bordeaux the snow fell thick and fast; and the wind lashed one's face like a whip.

As I was going along close beside a wall, my foot struck a heap of rags—regular tatters, and a cry came out the rags.

So I stooped down and picked the bundle up. It was one of the good God's own creatures, freezing to death there in the snow. I carried the thing under a gas lamp and looked at it. It was a little girl about twelve or fourteen years old, and as pretty—as pretty as love.

She had lost her consciousness. I carried her into a drinking place, and started to rub her, and make her swallow a few mouthfuls of hot wine.

Well, sir, when she opened her eyes—when she looked me with those great pupils of hers, black as tar and soft as velvet, it was all up with me. I belonged to her, body and soul.

I secured a room for her in the lodging house where I lived. The little one made me afraid of her, somehow—she made me feel in a way I had never felt before. It was just like when one begins to go mad.

Well, next day, when she had had a good sleep, I saw her again and talked to her. Where did she come from? She had come from everywhere; she had been traveling with a band of gypsies—Southern folks—who went through the country giving gymnastic exhibitions. One day she ran away because the man who called himself her father had threatened her terribly.

She had been wandering all through Bordeaux, hiding here, begging there, perishing with hunger and cold. In short, she was nobody's child. She was simply a little creature that kind Providence had sent to me to take care of. At least I thought so then; now I think it was the devil himself who placed her in my path.

Well, I felt queer about her all the time, but I soon made up my mind what to do. I rang the bell of a convent of Gray Sisters, which was beside the Saint Andre hospital, right back of the Place d'Armes. I saw the Mother Superior, and told her all about my adventure.

'I can't possibly keep the child,' I said; 'you'll have to take care of it, Sister. As for the money, I'll settle all that with you.'

So we struck a bargain, and I told the little one. I don't think it quite pleased her. But, anyhow, she was locked up, and I felt relieved.

Then, I tell you, I became steady enough—no more sprees, no more fights. I thought of nothing but the little one. I worked like four men, and every Sunday I went to see her.

They were not at all pleased with her. She was always making the Sisters mad, and turning the convent upside down. Then, when we would be alone, she would fling her arms around my neck, and look into my eyes, so that it seemed to me I saw millions of stars. And she would say to me between two kisses:

'Take me away from here! I want to live with you. I don't like it here.'

It was hard to refuse her; for I belonged to her, body and soul, the little wretch, and she knew it. Still I remained firm.

'When you can read, write and count well,' I said, 'you can leave here—not before.'

'Where shall I go, then?'

'Just where you like.'

And she would always answer:

'I want to go with you, and to your home; I want to be your wife.'

She was there three years. At last one morning the superioress sent for me. She said they could not keep the little one any longer. She was insolent to everybody, passionate as a cat, and incurable as the itch.

And when I told the superioress that I was going to marry the girl, she lifted her eyes to heaven and cried:

'May God help you!—may God watch over you!'

The little one did not know much—she would never study. But she had grown tall and beautiful. At that hour she was as lovely as an angel. And I—great clumsy brute that I was—I was crazy about her.

I married her, and I was happy—madly happy. Even now, in spite of all she has done, when I think of that bliss it makes me tremble in every limb. I had worked so hard, so constantly, that even while paying her board I had been able to lay something aside. I had no high living in those days, and I ate more bread than anything else. When she left the church she found waiting for her a complete housekeeping set—a neat, clean cheerful home. I had done the best I could.

And when we went out on Sundays, she leaning on my arm—Lord! how proud of her I was! How everybody turned around to look at us! But then, you have no idea how beautiful she was! Ah, she was a wonder—a marvel of God's creation—I could not describe her.

My friends knew of her beauty while she was with the sisters. I could not keep my adventure to myself—I told everybody like the big fool I was.

She had kept her gypsy name. Her skin was golden as mandarins. Some fools called her black. Then they ended by nicknaming her La Tarpiaude, on account of her brown skin; and she was the first to laugh when my friends called her by that name.

How happy I was.

But I tell you I paid dearly for that happiness, for I had a terrible time of it afterwards. Need I tell you that I kept on working as hard as ever—yes, working beyod my strength—in order to pet her, to get her everything she wanted.

There was one thing which always fretted me in the midst of my joy. She was lazy as a doormouse—had no idea of putting her ten fingers to the least good use—doing nothing all day but reading trashy books, without even taking the trouble to mend her dresses.

And greedy!—and a liar! It was no use trying not to see it—no use having a web over my eyes! Though I was really drunk with love—blind drunk—though she could make me see stars at midday, still I could not help seeing how disorderly her life was. But I used to say to myself; 'She will change for the better as she grows older.' And I used to think that if the good God should send us a child she would have to take care of it, and that would make her a better woman. Luckily for me, we never had a child! What would such a child have been? O, misery!

That happiness lasted two years—two years that passed as two days. Now it is the hours that drag along so slowly as if they were years.

Already several times, when I came home, I had not found her there, no dinner ready, the house all dismal and empty and cold. It was very trying. A moment later she would come in all out of breath, and excuse herself by saying that she had been taking a walk with some of her girl friends. Still I didn't say anything.

You see, whenever I found fault with her, she would pout, and then it was I who was in the wrong and had to beg pardon.

But one evening she was out much later than usual, and I was at the window watching for her to come. At last I saw her shape at the corner of the street, but at the same time I fancied she was not alone. I thought I saw a man with her. I knew the man. A man they called Dalto, a Calabrian—handsome fellow he was—who used to work at the wharf with me. It was only for a moment—like a flash! The shadow of the man disappeared, and La Tarpiaude, bursting into the room like a summer breeze, flung her arms about my neck. I must have been mistaken. Men like me are made to make mistakes, it seems, and to be deceived, when they love anybody.

Next day when I went down to the port I fancied that Dalto shunned me; anyhow, whenever I looked at him he turned his head away and seemed embarrassed. And the same evening he quit work before the rest of us. My blood had been boiling all day; my mind was full of suspicions. The mere sight of Dalto filled me with silent rage. I felt like leaping upon him and strangling him with my hands. It seemed as if he knew how I felt, for he kept at a distance from me. When I saw him going away I could not stand it any longer. I quit work also, and followed him. I had to be cautious about it, for he seemed to be afraid of something, and every now and then stopped to look behind him. I crept along, edging to the houses. It was spring time, but the sun sank rapidly, and it was soon dark. Dalto kept on, quickening his pace; I followed him and came closer to him.

And all the while I was blaming myself. It seemed to me that I was doing wrong in spying the woman I loved—the child I picked up and made my wife.

Misere de Dieu! Dalto stopped and a creature came to him. It was she. It was La Tarpiaude!

And she threw her arms about his neck, just as she had done with me only the evening before, when she came in late.

I was about to spring forward, but contained myself by a tremendous effort. I wanted to know all.

She had taken his arm and was walking along with him, lolling upon him, laying her cheek upon his shoulder.

Just as with me! just the same thing!

It was at the Quinconces—among the trees and flowers. The promenade was deserted, for the weather was still cool; the trees which overshadowed the walks gave me a good chance to follow them closely. I never lost a single movement. Every moment they kissed each other, and the sound of their kisses felt to me as if something burned me to the very marrow of my bones. I bit my lips; I burried my finger nails in my breast. But I still followed them. They sat down upon a bench, and I hid behind a great chestnut tree to listen. I heard him say:

'No, no! We must not remain longer together this evening. I am sure Jairas suspects something; he never took his eyes off me all day. We were foolish to remain together so long yesterday evening. He suspects us.'

She burst out laughing.

"Ha! pecaire! ah, the poor fool! You do not know him! I could make him eat dandelions, believing they were asparagus. Why, whenever I let him kiss me he sees stars and all sorts of things, and goes crazy—really crazy!"

Yes, she was right. I was crazy, mad, frenzied. I leaped upon them with the roar of a wild beast. "Curse you," I cried; "curse you, I shall kill you both."

But I still controlled myself.

"Here!" I said to Dalto, striving to keep myself from leaping at his throat, "I do not wish to murder you. You have your knife. I have mine. Defend yourself, and remember, we fight to the death."

And I put myself on my guard, my knife in my hand. He also flung off his jacket and rolled it about his left arm.

I had a narrow escape, for as I was on the point of burying my knife in his heart, I stumbled forward, stung by an atrocious pain. La Tarpiaude, crawling upon the the ground, had got behind me and bit my legs in the hope of making me fall. I knocked her down with a heavy blow; and, as Dalto rushed forward, we grappled. His knife grazed my cheek, but at the same moment I buried mine in his chest.

It was time! La Tarpiaude had attacked me again, and bit me a second time.

When she saw her lover fall she uttered a smothered cry and fled. Ah! I never thought of running after he.. I had killed a man loyally, however, in staking my life against his. And if La Tarpiaude, the wicked thing, had succeeded in making me fall, they would both have murdered me.

When you, fashionable folks, have cause for offence—when your honor is outraged—you fight with pistol or sword. But we others—workingmen, men of the people—we have only our fists to resent an insult, and our knives when we fight a duel to the death.

I did not think of running away. I remained right there—my teeth chattering—repeating to myself all the while: "I have killed a man! I have killed a man!"

People passing by saw Dalto lying stiff and dead, and shouted, "Murder! murder!" The police easily captured me, for I made no effort to resist them.

The police commissary questioned me. When I told him my story he only laughed in my face. He declared that I had had a quarrel with Dalto, and had lured him to the Quinconces in order to murder him. He did not believe in the duel story for a very good reason. When I was arrested I still had my knife in my hand, but the dead man's knife could not be found.

Then I remembered having seen La Tarpiaude stoop down just before she ran away. I had thought it was to see whether her lover still breathed. It was not; it was in order to get the knife. It was in order to make a murderer of me. La Tarpiaude had revenged herself well.

What use my explanations to the judges? They only shrugged their shoulders and looked at each other, smiling with incredulity. They believed me to be a common assassin, nothing more.

La Tarpiaude had shrewdly guessed the whole force of the blow she was able to deal me.

Worse than that! Because they were never able to find her, I was accused of having murdered her also and hidden the body away.

And then I was condemned to the galleys, or to hard labor for life, as they call it in these days.

THE CANNING SEASON.

Putting up Fruit and Vegetables, and How the work should be done.

The processes of preserving fruit now so well understood make it possible for the housekeeper to supply her table with the products of every climate and the range of fruits that ripen from May to October. The later berries and fruits are still to be put up, and vegetables are just now in full season.

In preserving fruits whose relish depends somewhat on their appearance, as pears and quinces, says the Tribune, it is well to remember that a little done at a time gives better results than large quantities done at once. One can or two cans at most are quickly prepared, and may be "sealed up" almost before the fruit finds out that it is deprived of its peeling, and before the air has time to darken it, certainly before it has time to lose its flavor. This last depends, too, on the freshness and perfection of the fruit when canned. If possible, peaches should be in their cans and sealed up immediately after they are picked from the tree, and while the dew of the morning is still on them. The same is true of other fruits and vegetables.

The difference between corn just from field and corn that has lain in the pantry or storeroom is very marked, and the same is true of peas. Of course those who live at a distance from the source of supplies, and must take their fruits and vegetables one, two and three days old, have no choice but to make the best of what they can get, but they will never be able to accomplish as fine results as those who can pick their fruit and vegetables when just ripe for canning, and imprison them "in their own juice" before they have lost a particle of their aroma. Over-ripe fruit is equally to be avoided with under-ripe fruit, as it ferments readily and spoils. It is not necessary to its preservation to put any sugar into fruits when canned, but peaches, plums and crab-apples are better to have a little sugar cooked with them when put up. A lady very skillful in this line of industry makes a syrup of three pounds of sugar to a gallon of water, boils it twenty minutes and sets it away for future use.

The fruit is prepared, packed nicely in the cans, covered with this syrup, and set uncovered in a covered kettle two-thirds full of water and cooked till the fruit is soft. Then the can is filled to overflowing with boiling syrup and sealed at once. When a little cooled another turn is given to the screw ring. Berries and small fruits may be cooked in quantity and put up without sugar, this being added when they are brought to table. If a silver spoon is put into the can boiling hot fruit may be poured into it without breaking. Or if the can is put on a very wet cloth, it will not break when the hot fruit is put in it. A tin funnel just large enough to fit the mouth of the can facilitates the process of filling it and prevents waste.

Tomatoes when canned should be perfectly ripe. Dip them for a moment in boiling water. Remove all the inedible parts, and cook them till just done, not any longer or the seeds will give them a bitter flavor; put into cans and seal. It is well to pour off part of the tomato liquor, and use it as a basis for catsup.

Corn is cut from the cob, packed closely in tin cans, the covers soldered on and a perforation left in the top for the steam to escape. The cans are then put in a boiler filled nearly to the tops of the cans with water, covered closely and boiled three hours. The perforation is then closed with a drop of solder and the cans are cooled and packed away. Beans and peas are canned like corn.

If corn after being boiled fifteen minutes is cut from the cob and immediately dried, it retains its flavor well, and when soaked and heated through is almost as good as when fresh. Its excellence depends on the freshness of the corn and the speediness with which it is dried.

Pumpkin may be dried and ground so that when made into pies it can hardly be told from the fresh article. Of course it requires soaking and cooking before it is used.

There are some housekeepers who cherish a fondness for preserves, and are not quite satisfied unless they have a store of sweetmeats put away. For these the old rule of a pound of sugar for a pound of fruit is still in order. For jams, three-quarters of a pound of sugar for every pound of fruit. If children will have sweets, a little nicely made preserves or jam is far better for them than boughten candies, and for roly-poly puddings nothing is better than nicely made jam.

Democratic Gubernatorial Convention.

The Democratic voters of the state of New Jersey are requested to meet at such times and places as may be designated by the several county executive committees to elect delegates to the state convention, to be held at TAYLOR'S OPERA HOUSE, in the city of Trenton, on Thursday, September 13th, at 12 o'clock m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Governor of the State. The basis of representation will be one delegate for each two hundred democratic votes, and one for each fraction thereof exceeding one hundred votes polled at the last gubernatorial election in each township, town or ward; provided that every township, town and ward shall have at least one delegate. If any township, town or ward has been created since the last gubernatorial election, the representation from the county shall not be increased thereby, but the delegates shall be appointed among existing townships, by the county committee according to the votes cast at the last gubernatorial convention.

JOHN R. MCPHERSON, Chairman.
RICHARD F. STEVENS, Secretary.

*The city of Plainfield having been divided into wards since the last Gubernatorial election, this Committee has no means of fixing their proportionate ward representation, and therefore the delegates from Plainfield will be elected at a general primary to be called by their City Executive Committee. By order of the COUNTY DEMOCRATIC EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Dated August 29th, 1883.

Somerset County Democratic Call.

According to the printed official returns of the Gubernatorial election of 1880, compiled by the Secretary of State, Somerset County is entitled to the following representation in the coming Gubernatorial Convention.

Bridgewater	4 votes.
Bedminster	2 "
Bernards	2 "
Branchburgh	1 "
Franklin	2 "
Hillsborough	2 "
Montgomery	1 "
North Plainfield	2 "
Warren	1 "
	17 votes.

The chairman of the County Executive Committee recommends that in the townships of Somerset county, where delegates may not have been chosen already, the Democratic voters meet at the usual places for holding such meetings,

ON SATURDAY, SEPT. 8TH,

at 2 p. m., and appoint delegates to represent said townships at the State Convention at Trenton on the 13th, in accordance with the call of the State Central Committee.

W. V. STEELE, Chairman.

The Democratic State Committee of New York has decided to call the State Convention at Buffalo, on Sept. 28th.

The Michigan prohibitionists resolved some time since to raise $100,000 for the campaign. At last accounts they had raised all but $99,999.75. They ought to get up a business men scare like the Republican party did in 1880.

Ex-Governor Joel Parker refuses to be a candidate at the coming Democratic State Convention, and Andrew Albright of Essex and Leon Abbett of Hudson are the leading candidates at present. Either would make a good Governor.

"I don't blame Mr. Dorsey for getting mad," says an eminent Republican, "but I don't think he ought to have given it away that we paid as high as $20 and $75 for men's votes in 1880. Darn if it won't empty the United States Treasury in '84 if our voters hear of such prices?"

The Trenton True American truthfully says:—"Some of our Democratic contemporaries in this State are earning the everlasting gratitude of the Republican press by the industry with which they aid in the circulation of all their silly inventions and reports about Democratic candidates."

When Robeson left Congress he was rich; when Blaine left he was a millionaire, and Garfield was the possessor of a cool hundred thousand dollars, but when Judge Black left Congress in 1861 he was $7,000 in debt. That's the difference between Democracy and Republicanism.—Elizabeth Herald.

At the head of our editorial page will be found the Democratic call for a State Convention. This is the same Convention the Republican press has been so anxious about the past three weeks, so anxious even that they have failed to issue a regular call for their own State Convention. Now that their anxiety is settled, we presume they will settle on what lamb they shall lead to the slaughter.

The Secretary of State has sent out official notices to the several County Clerks, in conformity with the provisions of an act of the Legislature, approved April 18, 1876, to the effect that the time of service of Hon. George C. Ludlow, Governor of the State of New Jersey, will expire in the month of January, 1884, and that a Governor for said State is to be elected at the next annual election to fill said vacancy.

Secretary Chandler, who retired in bad order, as well as odor, after the senatorial fight in New Hampshire, and had not been heard from, turned up suddenly at Portsmouth on Monday, and, as the despatch reads, "took the Tallapoosa in the afternoon for a summer trip, extending it at his pleasure." To prevent any misapprehension, it may be well to state that the Tallapoosa is not a private yacht, but a United States man-of-war, built and maintained for the public service.

James Malley has sued the New York Staats Zeitung for libelling him during the Jennie Cramer trial in New Haven.

The Comte de Chambord is dead. He died at Frohsdorf, Austria, at 7.15 o'clock, Thursday morning of last week. He was the Bourbon aspirant for the French throne.

The side-wheel river steamer Riverdale, exploded her boiler on the North river, opposite Harrison street, N. Y. city, on Tuesday. Five persons were killed and fifteen injured.

Captain John Hall, a well-known resident of New Brunswick, N. J., captain of a local military organization and Superintendent of Construction on the Pennsylvania Railroad, has been missing for several days.

Levi D. Jarrard was brought before County Judge Baxter, at Welland, Ont. Nine depositions, charging him with forgery, were read. As it now stands, the case looks dark for Jarrard. No decision has yet been reached.

Captain Webb left an invention, by the use of which steamers are expected to reach Europe in four days. The idea is to cover the hull of a steamer with a thick sheathing made from fishy matter. It will prevent friction and make a steamer go through the water like a porpoise. Captain Webb tried it successfully on small boats.

A most pleasant feature of the Swiss National Exhibition, now being held in Zurich, was the recent Journalists' Congress. Over 200 continental newspaper men were there, a Swiss Journalist Union was organized, and many a quarrel peculiar to the personal journalism of Europe was healed forever. The exhibition in itself is in the most beautiful natural surroundings, and in all its details is pronounced a marvelous success.

Harry Packer, one of the employes of Barnum's circus, was killed at Cincinnati on Monday last by the elephant Queen. The elephant was standing beside one of the circus wagons, and Packer undertook to pass between her and the wagon. As he did so the brute leaned over toward the wagon so heavily as to nearly upset it. The pressure broke several of Packer's ribs and flattened him out almost as thin as a board. He was taken to the City Hospital, where he died within an hour. The elephant keeper says he is quite positive the man was crushed by Queen purposely. She has been in bad humor for two or three days, and is one of the most vicious of the Barnum drove of elephants. The keeper says she is very adroit in her meanness, and quite capable of killing a man without apparently intending to do so.

Vice Chancellor Bird has been delivering a sermon. He filed an opinion in the case of Frank Conover against his wife, granting an absolute divorce and the care of all the children to the father. The Conovers during the past two years have taken up their abode in one of the most aristocratic sections of Newark. Among other things the Vice Chancellor says:—"The way to hell is down hill, and the descent is inconceivably quick. When lust has the reins, judgment, reason, honor and affection have no voice. Mrs. Conover's own admissions as to her interviews between herself and Mrs. Smith, show that her tongue was unhappily most unchaste and polluted. These things come from the heart, out of which are the issues of life."

The Kaaterskill (newspaper) says: "General George B. McClellan, the hero of the earliest and most critical part of the war, to whom future history will do credit as the ablest general of his time, has arrived at the Hotel Kaaterskill for a stay of a few weeks, accompanied by Mrs. McClellan and his son, George B. McClellan, Jr. He will be joined next week by his accomplished daughter, who will an addition to the attractive personnel of the ladies now in the house. It was peculiarly gratifying to Captain Gillett whose battery in the First Connecticut Artillery formed the earliest train in the peninsular campaign, to welcome, under such changed and happy conditions, his old commander of the Army of the Potomac. To every surviving soldier of that brave legion there remains to this day something even in the name of 'Little Mac,' but much more in his magnetic presence, that kindles their ardor and recalls all the enthusiasm and fervor of the times when the only moments the firing ceased in front was when it gave place to cheers as he passed shouting encouragement along the line. The firing has long since ceased; others have done the work McClellan so well begun, and he may well rest upon the tribute of posterity. He looks a young man to have such a past behind him, and still possess a fine physique."

SENSIBLE COLORED MEN.

The Orange Monitor says that at a meeting of colored citizens in Newark on Monday evening last, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, The representative colored men throughout the United States, not excepting two colored conventions, have proclaimed the dissatisfaction of their race with the treatment they have received from their professed benefactor, the Republican party, therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the Independent Club of Newark, New Jersey, realizing that our welfare and interest have suffered from being ignored in our rights as citizens to some recognition, after twenty years of faithful adherence to party dictation, declare that the time is ripe for us to liberate ourselves from the yoke of an injurious servitude to a political party that values us only for our votes; and, be it further

Resolved, That we consider it impolitic and unwise to affiliate and band together for the sole interest of one political party, and hereby declare that we will exercise our rights as citizens by voting for those who will promote our general welfare.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

It is legal to shoot squirrels during the month of September.

The black bass will take the artificial fly during September. Do you know how to cast the seductive fly?

Quail have not been so plentiful in this region for years as at the present time. This is mainly due to the re-stocking and protection afforded the birds by the Game Protective Societies.

Streams in this section stocked with black bass a few years since by the New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society are now yielding a bountiful harvest of fish and sport for the angler.

The shooting match on the grounds of the Long Branch Gun Club at Deal Beach last Saturday was largely attended. Edgar Murphy, of New York, killed 44 birds; Mr. Edmunds, of Philadelphia, 41, and Walter G. Murphy, of New York, 40.

The flight of Golden Plover have gone by and these birds are now scarce. During the past few weeks great sport has been experienced by sportsmen in Middlesex and Somerset counties in hunting them, and many large bags have been made.

The largest Oswego bass ever caught in Greenwood Lake was taken by Andrew Dickinson of Paterson on Friday of last week. It gave him amusement for more than half an hour after he hooked him before he could land him. It weighed a trifle over eight pounds.

A great many sportsmen are opposed to the law which prohibits shooting squirrel until September first. They claim that the rodent is only fit to eat during August. Why the law was changed we do not know. An effort will be made to amend the law at the next session of the Legislature so to allow the frisky squirrel to be shot during August.

A little boy, only about twelve years of age, son of Mr. Albert Darling, of Newark, had the pleasure of distinguishing himself on Friday of last week as the champion fisherman of Budd's Lake for the year, if not for the whole of this vicinity. While out trawling for bass, he hooked a fine one, and after a desperate struggle succeeded in putting him in the boat. The fish was kept alive for a time, and was a beautiful specimen to look at. He weighed just 5¼ pounds. The boy was very proud of his conquest, as he had a good right to be.

Very True, Indeed.

The Metuchen Inquirer says: "If the Union and Middlesex County Agricultural Society would spend a few more dollars in printer's ink (in other words, advertising); their fairs would be more profitable and much greater interest would be taken in them. John Dernett, than whom there is no better, more accommodating or safer man to escort them to the favorite fishing spots.

A Light-House Keeper Missing.

John E. Johnson, a resident of Tottenville, Staten Island, and keeper of the Great Beds Light-house, has mysteriously disappeared. Johnson was last seen on Saturday night, Aug. 18, when he was on duty at the light-house. His boat was found moored at the light-house. His coat was in the boat. The keys were found inside of the light-house on a table. Some think that Johnson drowned himself by jumping into the bay, while others think he has disappeared for a reason. He has a wife and four children. A former keeper of the same light-house disappeared last Winter and his body was afterward found in the Sound.

Prompt Settlement.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST stated the week following the accident to Mr. Geo. Reighton and wife, whereby they narrowly escaped death by the cars at Metuchin, that the railroad Company had settled with them. The Metuchen Enquirer of last week contains the following in relation thereto:

"The Lehigh Valley Railroad company are to be credited for their prompt action in the Reighton accident case. Immediately after the accident an investigation was made by the company. Lawyer O. P. Browning took charge of the matter for Mr. Reighton, and it was through him that an amicable settlement was brought about so promptly. While Mr. Browning was instrumental in bringing about a settlement, there is this to be said, that the Lehigh Valley Railroad company acted nobly in the matter, and, though not officially informed, we gain from good authority that the company paid Mr. Reighton $1,000, which is considered a fair settlement."

Serious Accident.

Last Thursday was a great day among the colored people, and there was a large attendance at Florida Grove, on the Raritan River, near Perth Amboy, from this city. During the afternoon the well-known colored barber of Park avenue, William Doyle, who was one of the party, while bathing, dove head foremost into the waters of the river from the end of the dock, supposing the water at that point was deep, but which in reality was but about four feet in depth. His companions saw, as his inanimate person came to the surface that he was injured, and immediately rescued him from a watery grave. His unconscious form was placed on a mattress and brought to his home in this city, and Drs Tomlinson, Probasco and Long summoned. They gave it as their opinion that Doyle's spinal cord had sustained such injuries from his head coming in contact with some object in the water, as to preclude any hopes of his ultimate recovery. He has lingered along since, and at this writing is still alive, with but slight hopes of his ultimate recovery.

New Jersey Fairs.

The State Fair is to be held, as usual, at Waverly this year, commencing on September 17th and ending on the 21st. The county fairs will be as follows:

Soon to Begin Work.

The plans of the Stillman Music Hall are now almost completed, and estimates for doing the work will be called for in a very few days. It will be but a short time before a commencement will be made, and if a mild Fall and open Winter can be depended on, the building will be ready for occupancy early in 1884.

Railroad Accident.

An ore train ran into a construction train on the High Bridge Branch of the New Jersey Central Railroad Tuesday afternoon, near Middle Valley. Both engines were badly wrecked and a number of cars were damaged. Fifty men were on the construction train at the time of the accident, but no one was killed or injured. The wreck was not cleared away till after midnight.

To be Tested.

Next Tuesday evening, per invitation of Zephyr H. & L. Co. No. 1, the members of Empire Eng. Co. No. 2 of Westfield, will visit this city, bringing their new chemical engine with them. A public test of the merits of the engine will be given the public on Park avenue near the Cedar Brook bridge. The Empires will afterward be entertained by the Zephyrs.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The General Secretary is expected to return the last of the week and will lead the young men's prayer meeting on next Monday evening. Topic—"What will you reap?" Col. 3:1-4.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Directors will be held on Thursday, September 6th. All are requested to be present as important business will be transacted.

Artistic Work.

Mr. Chas. Austin, of North Plainfield has just completed a piece of mosaic work that is a marvel of skill and patience. It is the lid of a writing desk inlaid with 1,725 pieces of wood, comprising 30 or 40 different varieties, the colors blending harmoniously, and resembling real mosaic stone. He is also engaged on a work box, which will be inlaid with 9,300 pieces of wood.

He Got His Deserts.

A magnificent gold watch, on the outside of which was the monogram "S. V. W.," and on the inside these words engraved—"To Samuel V. Woodruff, by the guests of the Hotel Netherwood, Aug. 29th, 1883"—was presented to that popular host by his many friends, Wednesday, evening. Attorney General Steele of Louisanna made the presentation speech, and enjoyable festivities followed.

At the Netherwood.

Forty excursion tickets for Netherwood were sold at this station last Saturday evening, and the customary hop at the hotel was in consequence well attended. A very efficient parlor orchestra was engaged and its services resulted in the gratification of all. Manager Woodruff's courtesy to the public is certainly a source of much pleasure, as apart from the entertainment his generosity affords, Plainfield is without evening attractions.

Last Call.

The excursion of the Crescent avenue Presbyterians, next Wednesday, to Long Branch and Ocean Grove, is the last of the season, and affords all an opportunity to make a farewell visit to those resorts during the most enjoyable month of the year. The excursions under this management have always the reputation of being the quickest trips, so that no time is tediously spent on the road, and all may be home in time for supper. The train leaves Plainfield at 7:30 a. m., and will be back about 7 p. m.

Third and Best.

The grand excursion on Thursday next to Roton Point, under the auspices of No. 2 engine and hose companies, promises to be a most enjoyable affair. The magnificent palace steamboat "Long Branch" has been engaged with the barge "Walter Sands," affording accommodation for over 2,500 persons, so that the comfort of all is assured. The sail will afford a view of hundreds of points of interest, including the Brooklyn bridge lighted by electricity. Prof. Bannan's orchestra will enliven the trip, and a well-known caterer will furnish the delicacies of the season. Read the small bills carefully. Don't fail to go.

Didn't Know It Was Stone.

Mr. Jacob Apgar of Martinville, while engaged in digging a cellar for the extension to be made to Warren engine house, was severely hurt, last Thursday, in a most unusual way. He had dug away from what was supposed to be a board standing on edge against the building, but which proved to be a heavy flagging. Apgar was stooping over with his back towards it when it fell, striking him in the upper part of the calf and tearing the flesh down to the heel. The unfortunate man was removed to the residence of Mr. John Whitlock, and from thence to his home. He is able to be about by the use of crutches.

He Still Lives.

The Middlesex County Democrat of Aug. 25th, contains the following item:

"Edward Maynard, a colored barber of Plainfield, while bathing at Florida Grove, Thursday, dove from the end of the pier, and struck his head on the sand with such force that he dislocated his spinal column. The physicians arrived, but could do nothing for him, and advised his friends to take him home. Maynard died on the way. He leaves a wife and six children."

As Maynard is the tonsorial artist next to THE CONSTITUTIONALIST office, we stepped in there after reading the notice to see how he looked after being thus treated, and found him at work as usual. He insists he is not dead, and don't desire his numerous customers to think so either. The item undoubtedly alludes to poor Doyle who was injured as above stated.

All Were Satisfied.

Messrs. Swalm, Baker, Woodruff and Pope of the Trinity Reformed and First Presbyterian Sunday schools, conducted the 300 little ones and 300 big ones intrusted to their care, through a long day of enjoyment at the Highlands, Tuesday, without an accident. The trip down and back was unusually long, owing to an especial amount of passenger traffic "to the races" and elsewhere; but the pleasing prospect in the morning and the gratified remembrance in the evening of the day's enjoyment, shortened the hours. The "lights" were visited by those persevering enough to climb so high, while others sought such pleasure as the water grants. Rowing, sailing, fishing, bathing, swimming, and rambling through the groves were a few of the means that resulted in satisfying all and causing the remembrance of that particular excursion to live forever.

FATAL SHOOTING AFFAIR.

A young lad found dying from a gun shot wound.—A mystery surrounding the case. —Was it an accident?—Verdict of the Coroner's Jury.

Last Monday evening about six o'clock, as Messrs Lawrence Myers and Geo. F. Dupee, were riding along Green Brook road, North Plainfield, near the residence of R. V. Cadmus, they observed the form of a boy lying near the road, who appeared to be suffering greatly. An investigation showed that the lad had received a gun-shot wound. They gave an alarm and those who came to the scene recognized the boy as Walter F. Scribner, the 12 year old son of Sylvester B. Scribner, residing near by. He was at once removed to his parent's home, and Dr. Lowrie summoned. Nothing could be done however, to alleviate the lad's excruciating sufferings and about half-past nine o'clock the same evening he expired, without leaving any clue as to how he received his wound. From incoherent sentences uttered during semi-conscious moments it was inferred that he must have had a companion with him at the time of the shooting. It subsequently transpired that Henry Myers, a young lad in the employ of Mr. Cadmus, had seen a boy, carrying a gun, run by him about the time Scribner was shot, whom he recognized as Peter Ritter, a thirteen-year old boy, residing near the dead lad's home. The wound was a frightful one, the charge entering at the wrist of the left arm, following that member upward and stripping the flesh therefrom, finally entering the left breast. The whole charge of shot, with wadding, was found just beneath the skin at the back. Tuesday morning, County Physician Henry G. Wagoner, of Somerville, was summoned to the scene, who at once ordered an inquest and empanelled a coroner's jury, composed of the following gentlemen—Jos. N. Randolph, (foreman) James Voorhees, John Allen, John V. Whitlock, Daniel I. Smalley, A. D. Godown, John W. Hughes, Jacob Apgar, P. M. French, Rutgers Cadmus. Constable P. Weaver took charge of the jury and the inquest was held at the residence of Mr. S. B. Scribner, the dead boy's father. The first witness called was Dr. Lowrie, who testified as to making an autopsy of the body and describing the nature of the wound which caused the lad's death.

Mrs. Adelaide Julia Ritter, mother of the boy Peter, was then called, who testified that about two o'clock on Monday afternoon last her son Peter was sent by her to this city on an errand. He returned about four o'clock, and then in company with young Scribner went out to play. He returned again alone about six o'clock. She did not see him have a gun that day, although he sometimes went out with a gun to shoot birds.

Peter Ritter was then called, who told so many conflicting stories, contradicting himself and prevaricating in such an outrageous manner, that the jury did not desire him sworn. From statements made by him the following was elicited: He, in company with young Scribner had gone along Green Brook Monday afternoon, taking with them a gun from Ritter's house. The latter had just shot at a bird, and Walter wanted to load the gun. This he was in the act of doing, when the gun was discharged with the ramrod in the barrel. Seeing his companion fall, Ritter says he grabbed up the gun, went into a field, picked up the ramrod, put it in its place in the stock and ran home, being afraid to speak of the accident. He said his mother then took the gun away from him and gave him a whipping.

His story is so out of all reason that it was not deemed advisable for him to continue lying before the jury and he was released for the time being. It would simply be impossible for his story about the ramrod to be true, as, if it had been discharged from the gun it would certainly have passed through Scribner's body, and possibly not afterward found. Again, young Scribner was right-handed, and the wound was in the left arm and breast, and therefore could not have been caused while loading the gun, which was a foot and a half taller than either lad. The supposition is that there was a scuffle between the two boys for the possession of the gun, and while Scribner had hold of the barrel and Ritter the stock, the weapon was discharged. His story about being whipped by his mother is also untrue, as she so testified. The jury finally rendered a verdict "that Walter F. Scribner came to his death by an accidental shot from a gun in the hands of one or both boys."

John H. Jackson, Esq., of this city, Counsel for the Township of North Plainfield, acted for the prosecution in the absence of the County Prosecutor.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

THURSDAY EVENING, AUG. 23d.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—President Livingston and Messrs Beguelin, Coriell, Marsh, Polak, Ross, Serrell, J. Simpson—8.

Absent—Messrs Gardner, Jones, R. Simpson—3.

On motion, the rules were suspended and Mr. Marsh, from the Special Committee appointed to examine the assessor's duplicate, reported as follows:

Your Committee to whom was referred the examination of the Assessor's list of assessments for taxation for the present year, respectfully report that they have carefully examined the same and they find that the Assessor has done his work faithfully, and that there is probably as little room for criticism as can be expected in a matter requiring so much personal attention and hard labor, and the exercise of judgment.

The Committee think that a fair average of valuation has been reached in the most of the cases and that there can be but little ground of complaint, though it would be impossible to please every one under any circumstances.

The object of a revision by the Common Council undoubtedly is to enable the Assessor to have a complete and proper list to present at the meeting of all the Assessors of the County, when the proportion of each City and Township of the State and County tax is fixed. By the law directing the revision of the Common Council the meeting of the Assessors is fixed for a period subsequent to the revision by the Common Council, but by practice of the Assessors pretended to be justified under an amendment to the Charter of the City of Elizabeth, the meeting of the Assessors was held this year as on prior years, in July, and the Committee find themselves embarrassed by that fact, for while they think that there are a few cases where in their judgment there might be some reduction in the valuation, it would be of no avail to reduce the same, as the city stands charged with the same at the present valuation in its proportion of the State and County tax fixed by the meeting of the Assessors. The committee think that some legislation should be had which would remedy this evil as it now exists, and that in any event it would be a judicious thing for the next Common Council to appoint a Committee to consult with the Assessor prior to the meeting of the Assessors of the county, so that the Assessor might in making up the list have the benefit of the opinion of the Committee.

One or two cases of under valuation seem apparent to the Committee and they recommend that the list be revised in that respect. The Plainfield Gas Light Co. are located upon their entire plant, on a valuation of $20,000. That the Committee recommend should be raised to $25,000. Andrew Vanderbeek's store building, corner of Park and North avenues, is put down for taxation at a value of only $5,000. This to equal valuation for the property in that vicinity should be made at least $6,000. The property of W. S. Darling, on the Rahway road, is assessed at a valuation of $4,500, which Committee think should be $5,000. The foregoing are in the minds of the Committee the most prominent instances of undervaluation and should be revised accordingly.

We find no taxation upon the telephones belonging to the Bell Telephone Company. These are proper subjects of taxation and should be added to the list of taxable property, that a valuation of $500 be put upon said telephones.

We also find that in a good many instances there is an insufficient description of the real estate taxed, and recommended that the Assessor be directed to add a more complete description of the real estate indicating, where there are no numbers, on the side of the street the property is on, and the cross streets to which they are adjacent.

The following are the rates of taxation fixed for 1883: State school, 26c. on the $100; county, 54c.; school and bonds, 45c.; city, 23½c.; poor, 8c.; library, 1½c.; making in all $1.56 as against $1.63 of last year.

Respectfully submitted,
FRANK E. MARSH,
B. F. CORIELL,
JOHN SIMPSON,
Committee.

August 24th, 1883.

On motion the report was received, the recommendations of the committee were adopted and the duplicate as revised accepted.

The Council then adjourned.

Now for good roads. Several of our enterprising citizens have started a subscription for the purchase of broken and crushed stone to be put upon our roads in the village. The list is so far advanced that they have already purchased for delivery next week 500 tons of stone. This is a matter that every property owner in the town is, or ought to interested in, as good substantial roads must and will advance the price of real estate. Any of our citizens wishing to contribute towards this improvement of our roads can do so. Freeholder Pierson has one of the lists.

THE BAD BOY.

"I am thy father's ghost," said a sheeted form in the doorway of the grocery, one evening, and the grocery man got behind the cheese box, while the ghost continued in a sepulchral voice, "doomed for a certain time to walk the night," and, waving a chair round, the ghost strode up to the grocery man, and with the other ghostly hand reached into a box of figs.

"No, you ain't no ghost," said the grocery man, recognizing the bad boy. "Ghosts do not go prowling around groceries stealing wormy figs. What do you mean by this awful masquerade business? My father never had no ghost."

"O, we have struck it now," said the bad boy, as he pulled off his mask and rolled up the sheet he had worn around him. "We are going to have amateur theatricals to raise money to have the church carpeted, and I am going to boss the job."

"You don't say," answered the grocery man, as he thought how much he could sell to the church people for a strawberry and ice cream festival, and how little he could sell for amateur theatricals. "Who is going into it and what are you going to play?"

"Pa and ma, and me, and the minister, and three choir singers, and my chum, and the minister's wife, and two deacons, and an old maid are rehearsing, but we have not decided what to play yet. They all want to play different plays, and I am fixing it so they can all be satisfied. The minister wants to play Hamlet, pa wants to play Rip Van Winkle, ma wants to play Mary Anderson, the old maid wants to play a boarding school play, and the choir singers want an opera, and the minister's wife wants to play Lady Macbeth, and my chum and me want to play a double song and dance, and I am going to give them all a show. We had a rehearsal last night, and I am the only one able to be around to-day. You see they have all been studying different plays, and they all wanted to talk at once. We let the minister sail in first. He had on a pair of his wife's black stockings, and a mantle made of a linen buggy lap blanket, and he wore a mason's cheese knife such as these fellows with poke bonnets and white feathers wear when they get an invitation to a funeral or excursion. Well, you never saw Hamlet murdered the way he did it. His interpretation of the character was that Hamlet was a dude that talked through his nose, and while he was repeating Hamlet's soliloquy, pa, who had come in with an old hunting suit on, as Rip Van Winkle, went to sleep, and he didn't wake up till Lady Macbeth came in, in the sleep-walking scene. She couldn't find a knife, so I took a slice of watermelon and sharpened it for her, and she made a mistake in the one she was to stab, and she stabbed Hamlet in the neck with a slice of watermelon, and the core of the melon fell on pa's face, as he lay asleep as Rip, and when Lady Macbeth said, 'Out damned spot,' pa woke up and felt the gob of watermelon on his face and he thought he had been murdered, and ma came in on a hop, skip and jump, as 'Parthenia,' and threw her arms around a deacon who was going to play the grave digger, and began to call him pet names, and pa was mad, and the choir singers they began to sing, 'In the North Sea lived a whale,' and then they quit acting. You'd a died to see Hamlet. The piece of watermelon went down his neck, and Lady Macbeth went off and left it in the wound under his collar, and ma had to pull it out, and Hamlet said the seeds and the juice was running down inside his shirt, and he said he wouldn't play if he was going to be stabbed with a slice of melon, so while his wife was getting the melon seed out of his neck, and drying the juice on his shirt, I sharpened a cucumber for Lady Macbeth to use for a dagger, but Hamlet kicked on cucumbers, too, and I had more trouble than any stage manager ever had. Then pa wanted to rehearse the drunken scene in Rip Van Winkle, where he hugs Grechten and drinks out of a flask behind her back, and he got one of the choir singers to act as Grechten, and I guess he would have been hugging her till this time, and have swallowed the flask if ma had not took him by the ear and said a little of that would go a good ways in an entertainment for the church. Pa said he didn't know as it was any worse than her prancing up to a grave digger and hugging him till the filling came out of his teeth, and then the minister decided that we wouldn't have any hugging at all in the play, and the choir girls said, they wouldn't play, and the old maid struck, and the play come to a stand still."

"Well, that beats anything I ever heard tell of. It's a shame for people outside the profession to do play acting, and I won't go to the entertainment unless I get a pass," said the grocery man. "Did you rehearse any more?"

"Yes, the minister wanted to try the ghost scene," said the boy, "and he wanted me to be the ghost. Well, they have two 'Markses' and two 'Topsies' in Uncle Tom's Cabin, and I thought two ghosts in Hamlet would about fill the bill for amateurs, so I got my chum to act as one ghost. We broke them all up. I wanted to have something new in ghosts, so my chum and me got two pair of ma's long stockings, one pair red and one pair blue, and I put on a red one and a blue one, and my chum did the same. Then we got some ruffled clothes belonging to ma, with flounces and things on, and put them on so they came most down to our knees, and we put sheets over us, that came clear to our feet, and when Hamlet got to yearning for his father's ghost, I came in out of the bath room with the sheet over me, and said I was the huckleberry he was looking for, and my chum followed me out and said he was a twin ghost, also, and then Hamlet got on his ear and said he wouldn't play with two ghosts, and he went off pouting, and then my chum and me pulled off the sheets and danced a clog dance. Well, when the rest of the troupe saw our make-up, it nearly killed them. Most of them had seen ballet dancers, but they never saw them with different colored socks. The minister said this benefit was rapidly becoming a 'farce,' and before we had danced half a minute ma she recognized her socks, and she came for me with a hot box, and made me take 'em off, and pa was mad and said the dancing was the only thing that was worth the price of admission, and he sailed ma, and the choir girls sided with pa, and just then my chum caught his toe in the carpet and fell down, and that loosened the plaster overhead and about a bushel fell on the crowd. Pa thought lightning had struck the house, the minister thought it was a judgment on them all for play acting, and he began to shed his Hamlet costume with one hand and pick the plaster out of his hair with the other. The women screamed and tried to get the plaster out of their necks, and while pa was brushing off the choir singers ma said the rehearsal was adjourned, and they all went home, but we are going to rehearse again on Friday night. The play cannot be considered a success, but we will bring it out all right by the time the entertainment is to come off."

"By gum," said the grocery man, "I would like to have seen that minister as Hamlet. Didn't he look funny?"

"Funny! Well, I should remark. He seemed to predominate. That is, he was too fresh, too numerous, as it were. But at the next rehearsal I am going to work in an act from Richard the Third, and my chum is going to play the Chinaman of the Danites, and I guess we will take the cake. Say, I want to work in an idiot somewhere. How would you like to play the idiot. You wouldn't have to rehearse, or anything—"

At this point the bad boy was seen to go out of the grocery real spry, followed by a box of wooden clothes pins that the grocery man had thrown after him.—Peck's Sun.

'Felt like a beefsteak.'

'Like a beefsteak?'

'Yes, smothered in onions.'

FARM AND GARDEN NOTES.

Give pigs a grass-run if you can. It will do them great good.

Deep, rich soils and top-dressing are the remedies for drought.

Bagging grapes has numerous advocates among the best farmers and fruit growers.

Do not forget that all kinds of stock enjoy a relish of salt and that it is beneficial to them.

Remember that while the ponds and swamps are dried up, muck can be obtained with little labor.

Do not let the carrots get overrun with weeds. Take them in hand early and thin them to six inches.

Give all the stock of the farm at this season plenty of fresh water. Do not forget that poultry requires this care.

Watch closely mildew on grapevines, the greatest enemy of the grape grower. Apply sulphur with a bellows on a still day.

Everybody does not know that neatsfoot oil is one of the best applications for leather belting. Applied often enough it makes it soft and pliable.

A practical farmer advises the growing of two crops of buckwheat in succession as a means of exterminating vine worms. He argues that they will not eat the buckwheat and are starved to death.

Do not leave any unoccupied land to grow a crop of weeds. When an early crop is removed sow at once any crop that will keep them down. Buckwheat or peas are good and may be turned under before frost.

Mix chopped onions with the food once a day for several days and ground ginger two or three times a week and you may check early symptoms of cholera in poultry. Afterward give both once a week.

About the most remarkable sentence imposed upon a prisoner in New Jersey, is the one pronounced by Judge Reed, of Camden, in the Court of Sessions, recently. A man named Adams had been tried and convicted of an attempt at burglary, and being brought before the Court for sentence, his Honor, after delivering a lecture to the prisoner on the enormity of his offence, said: "The sentence of the court in your case is that you can be committed to the State Prison for three years if you are ever found in Camden again, and any officer will have the power to arrest and lock you up in the county prison and then you will be sent to Trenton to serve out your sentence of three years. Sheriff, you may now liberate the prisoner, and the prisoner may immediately start west toward the ferry." The prisoner waited not upon the order of his going, but crossed over to Philadelphia at once.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Fish Warden James S. Hannah, of Salem county, reports that there has been general obedience to the law and that the use of small mesh nets for shore fishing by small parties which in the past has destroyed many young shad has been abandoned. There is one small shore fishery and 175 gilling nets belonging to residents, besides 25 gilling nets belonging to non-residents used in the waters of the county. The catch of shad this season was 283,000 and the average price $20 per 100. There are ten firms engaged in sturgeon fishing, employing 300 men, 100 boats and nets and 10 sloops and schooners. The cash results this season, which was a poor one, was about $75,000. There is no law to protect sturgeon, and they are getting scarce. The Warden advises a close season for sturgeon from the time they begin to spawn about June 20th to March and says if it's not done the fish will become extinct in our waters.

THE ELM BEETLE.

Professor Lockwood, of Freehold, is recognized as the most able etomologist in New Jersey. The following, written by him to the Monmouth Democrat, is worthy of note in this section just now.

"Our village elms, after being defoliated by this scourage, (the beetle) have put forth a second crop of leaves. Of course these leaves have a puny sort of appearance, only a half growth. The terrible truth is that the beetles have appeared in a second brood. They are already laying a new set of eggs on young leaves, so that the new foliage will be eaten up, and the vigor of the trees severely taxed. After denuding the trees of their first crop of leaves the little worms descended the tree to find hiding places in which to enter the pupal state. Hence the crevices, cracks, and flakes of the bark of the trees were crowded with the yellow pupa, and from these hiding spots the new beetles have been appearing for some days.

THREE CHEAP MARRIAGES.

On the fourth of July last, while three young couples were at a picnic in this city, one of the three suggested that they all go and get married. The suggestion seemed to suit and it was decided that they should go to New York and get hitched, as one of the couple was a resident of that city. A start was at once made with much laughing, all thinking it was a good joke. Arriving in New York they sought a justice, which dignitary spliced them for a quarter of a dollar each. After the brief ceremony the three couples separated, the couple living in New York remaining and the two couples residing in this city returning. The two couples at once separated and went their several ways, keeping the event a profound secret, and only seeing each other on the usual night, but fate was against them and the secret was divulged in a way that may yet make trouble for their rashness. On Saturday morning last the New York couple were found enjoying the nuptial couch together by the parent of the girl. Explanations were demanded and given, but it was a long time before the irate guardian could be convinced of the sincerity of their story, and it was not until the two couples' relations to each other of this city were exposed that the old folks could be convinced. The parents of the two married pairs here were, of course, at once notified of the condition of things, and at the present time a lively breeze is blowing over the heads of the foolish pairs. All sorts of punishments are promised them, among which being legal proceedings. The couples in turn promise never to do it again, but the ire of their parents continues and there is fun ahead.—Elizabeth Herald.

POSTAL NOTES.

It is only a month before the public will have the new postal notes, the limit of their preparation being September 3. They will prove to be a great convenience, as the sender can transmit any sum from one cent to five dollars. The convenience of the new arrangement is that a lady living out of town who wants to send $3.79 to a dry goods store in New York will hand that sum, and 3 cents fee, to the postmaster. He will give her an order with the figure 3 punched in the dollar column, the figure 7 in the column of dimes, and the figure 9 in the column of cents. This is simple and easy, and offers no chance for fraud.

THE GRAPE VINE IN AUGUST.

While grape vines have more enemies than almost any other fruit-bearing plant, they are, with the exception of a understood "rot," easily managed if taken in time. Mildew is unusually prevalent this month. If neglected, but little fruit can be hoped for. Mildew is easily kept in subjection, if sulphur be applied in time, as directed last month. If rain falls soon after sulphur has been used, the application should be repeated. If the vines are kept well dusted with sulphur, the trouble will make but little headway. The insects that infest the vine at this season are mainly large and solitary caterpillars and beetles destructive enough but so scattered that handpicking is the only remedy that can be applied. Where droppings are seen on the grounds beneath the vines, search for the caterpillar that makes them. On old vines there will often appear vigorous shoots from the base, or at the root, and anywhere upon the old stem. These, as a general thing, are not needed, and should be removed as soon as noticed. If the laterals continue to push out, the new growth should be pinched back, leaving the lower leaf. Where vines, trained to a trellis, have been shortened, the uppermost bud will often start into growth. This should be treated like a lateral, pinching it back to the lower leaf, and repeating the operation as often as a new shoot starts. Those who grow grapes to compete for prizes at the various exhibitions, sometimes thin the berries in the cluster, that the remaining fruit may attain a large size.—American Agriculturist for August.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Wheelman for September, the closing number of the first year, is one of the most entertaining of the magazines of the month. The first article, containing over a dozen fine illustrations, describes the academic village of Andover, Mass. There is a well-written article on "Athletics and Gymnastics at Harvard." A comprehensive history of Lawn Tennis in America, by A. B. Starey, is some indication of the catholicity of the magazine. Readers of President Bates' stories will be delighted to find one of his inimitable tales, "Sprague's Big Coon," in this volume. "Minimum," contributes five chapters of a story, "Trailing-Arbutus." "The Care of Machinel" is ably discussed. Three more chapters of "A Shadow Love" still leave the finale undecided. The story increases in absorbing interest. "Health as a Pulpit Force" will be found of great interest to ministers.

The Art Amateur for September contains forty capital rosette designs for wood carving by Benn Pitman of Cincinnati, a profusion of monograms and jewelry designs, several flower and figure designs for china painting, and two handsome designs for South Kensington embroidery. Fourteen notable pictures in the Munich and Amsterdam exhibitions are illustrated, and some striking illustrations accompany a long and valuable account of the "Processes of Sculpture." An article on "Firing," by Miss Louise McLaughlin, should be read by every amateur china painter. There are also articles of particular interest on "French Picture Counterfeiters," Errors and Anachronisms in Art," "Painted Woodwork," "Haunts of Collectors," "Antique Ivory Carvings," and a great variety of other topics. The Art Amateur admirably covers its chosen field, and no one interested in art, either pictorial or decorative, can afford to miss its monthly visits. Price 35 cents; per annum $4. Montague Marks, publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

The September number of Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine could scarcely be excelled in the variety and excellence of the contents, it is overflowing with good things. Rev. C. E. Cheney, Bishop of the Diocese of Chicago, contributes No. VIII. of "Religious Denominations in the United States—What is the Reformed Episcopal Church?" The editor has a charming article, "The Ministry of tears;" "The American Pilgrim in Palestine" and "Among the Natives of the North," are continued, and the other articles are by popular writers. The serial, short stories, sketches, essays, etc., afford delightful and edifying reading. There are poems; a sermon by Rev. Dr. Talmage, "Gnats and Camels." Editorial and Personal Comments, Record of Important Events, and a Miscellany that abounds with interest, entertainment and instruction. The number is profusely and beautifully embellished. Price 25 cents per number; $3 a year, postpaid. Address, Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

The North American Review for September is an admirably constituted number. First comes "State Regulation of Corporate Profits," by Chief Justice T. M. Cooley, of Michigan, showing how far the harrowing exactions of corporate companies and monopolies may be restrained and the interests of the people effectually conserved. John A. Kasson, M. C., writes on "Municipal Reform."—Richard Grant White treats of "Class Distinctions in the United States."—"Shooting at Sight," is the subject of some pertinent reflections by James Jackson, Chief-Justice of the State of Georgia. In "Facts about the Caucus and the Primary," George Walton Green unveils the tricks practiced by political managers in large cities. The well-known English essayist, W. H. Mallock, contributes "Conversations with a Solitary." The Rev. Dr. D. S. Phelan contributes an article on the "Limitations of Freethinking." Finally, Grant Allen, discourses on "An American Wild Flower." Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York, and for sale by booksellers generally.

The frontispiece of the Magazine of American History for August, is a fine portrait never before engraved, of the hero of battle and romance, Col. Alexander Scammell, who fell at the siege of Yorktown in 1781. The leading article, "Clayborne, the Rebel," is by the distinguished Virginian writer, John Esten Cooke. The second paper is the conclusion of Captain Potter's able series of essays, "Texas admitted to the Union;" then follows "General Nelson, Kentucky, and Lincoln Guns," a forcibly written and substantial article of twenty-five pages, from President Daniel Stevenson, D. D., of the Collegiate Institute, Augusta, Kentucky. The shorter articles of the number are "An Old School Book," (the English Reader,) by Joel Benton; "Charlevoix in New Orleans," by John Dimitry; and Rev. B. F. De Costa's "Reply to Mr. Bancroft" on the subject of the Early Voyages. The Departments—Original Documents, Reprints, Notes and Queries, Replies, Societies and Book Notices, are filled with varied and readable matter. A FEW FACTS CONCERNING THE 4 C's, OR
Trenton Business College
It has the most PRACTICAL and COMPLETE COURSE OF STUDY. It omits nothing necessary to a thorough business education, yet can be accomplished in a remarkably short space of time.
It has NOVEL and ORIGINAL methods of teaching, which are attended by astonishing results. The student is interested from the start, and never fails to make satisfactory progress.
It has the LARGEST and BEST APPOINTED ROOMS, the most EXPENSIVE and PERFECT APPLIANCES.
It employs the best teachers and pays the most liberal salaries. In fact, it is the finest, most thorough and complete institution of the kind in the country.
It has been established 18 years, and sent out thousands of young men and women whose success attests its efficiency.
It is a member of the BRYANT & STRATTON CHAIN OF COLLEGES, or I. B. C. A., with reciprocity of scholarships, &c., all the advantages of inter-communication so indispensable to a course of modern business training.
No person contemplating a course at a Business College, or desiring a practical education, can afford to decide upon a school without investigating the claims of this.

POETRY.

For "The Constitutionalist."

AUTUMN.

BY MRS. MARGARET A. BRITTIN.

Gather the crops, the Winter soon will come,
And sleep reign across the wooded field,
And quiet reign around the farmer's home,
The earth no more her bounteous harvest yield.

The ripening corn now waves its merry ear,
The apple laughs from branches on the tree,
How grandly joyous nature doth appear,
As her rich fruitage here and there we see.

The plant, the fruit, the glittering stalk shall die,
And gloomy desolation take their place,
All shall be changed, and in so short a time,
Cold, bitter cold, shall all this life efface.

And now a lesson; growing in the heart
Are often fruits and flowers of grandest hue,
Like grandest specimens of nature's art;
But cold and bitter winds may kill them to.

And leave the heart a cold and barren spot,
Where there was once such sweet luxuriant life,
Its soil grown cold, its sweetness is forgot,
Nothing remains but storms, and cold, and strife.

WISDOM.

BY THOMAS S. COLLIER.

In the clear strawberry weather,
When the sun in splendor shone,
Maud and I went out together,
Roaming through a woodland zone.
She was fair, and I was spoony—
She was wise, and I was not—
For a fellow's always looney
When soft hair with gold is shot.

Ah, her hands were white and slender,
And her voice was like the song
Of a bird, whose sleepy, tender
Carol thrills the air along.
And I thought her like the lily,
Swaying with the restless tide;
If the simile seem silly,
Think that she was by your side—

That the air was cool and fragrant,
And your face was softly fanned
By a tress, that breeze vagrant
Loosed from out its azure band.
Think the path was lone and narrow,
And quite willing to eclipse
All the world, save some pert sparrow,
When she turned to you her lips.

Think of this and then remember
That May's supple, winsome grace
Makes short work of wise December,
When backed by a pretty face;
And then vow that I'm a softy,
Just because the papers say
That your servant and Maud Lofty
Soon will travel Hymen's way.

Do I like my mess of pottage?
Maud is handsome as a peach;
And the owner of a cottage
At Nantasket on the beach,—
Is well-read, and shrewd and witty,
And has all the points to match;
So I doubt if in the city
I could find a better catch.

Don't be heavy on a fellow—
Wait till love shall play his hand;
Some fine day when skies are mellow,
You will bow to his command—
Yes, and think, oh, scorning mortal,
That the acme of all bliss
Is to wait beside the portal
That you open with a kiss.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A MOTHER'S LAST LETTER.

Written to Her Son Shortly Before His Execution.

Of the thousands who read in the Gazette the report of the Clarksville executions none can have forgotten the touching letter written to young 'Jimmie' Johnson a few days before that fatal day. It was from his mother, over whose humble home brooded the desolation of the impending fate of her son, who, though a blood-stained criminal in the eyes of the law, was no less dear to her whose eyes had looked upon him for the last time.

She had received his own letter, and writes:

"If I could see you one time more, how glad I would be! But"—and who can depict the agony the simple words cost their heart-broken author?—"My darling boy, the time is close at hand when you will know your doom. You ask me to forgive you." Ask such a mother to forgive her own son—that mother who with streaming eyes replies: "Yes; my dear, if I could take your place I would do it." Who does not believe this? Who does not feel that this poor woman would gladly have mounted the gallows that her darling boy might be saved—and for what? To plunge once more into crime? What of that to her? Was he not her son, to whom she wrote in her sweet, simple way: "The yard is full of roses and other flowers. It would look good if you were here." But he was not there. Never was he to return there again. And though the sun's rays entered the little yard and gilded the sweet flowers with their golden sheen; though the cherries had ripened—"the nicest cherries you ever saw," she writes—not for a moment could the demon of anguish gnawing at this fond mother's heart be driven away. "But, my dear, I cannot enjoy anything. You are never out of my mind." No wonder the young criminal, though walking in the valley of the shadow of death; though already feeling the fatal noose tightening about his neck; though listening to the tramp of armed men coming to bear him to a felon's death—no wonder, even in that awful hour, he forgot his own doom and thought only of her, who in her home far away, sat in the ashes of grief unutterable, of a devotion unfathomable, and wept and grieved and prayed as only a mother can weep and grieve and pray! No wonder that he even pleaded that her last letter might be printed, that the world might know how noble she was, that the world might see her as she appeared to him, whose errant footsteps had led him into crime, and was breaking her heart.

"The children all send their love to you. John is a good boy to work. Galey and Nan have to work hard. John does all the plowing. Lydie talks a great deal about you. Maud grows some." How tender and loving! Criminal, murderer, though he was, to that bereft household he was only the absent and loved one; and in her grief the mother could thus write. She felt that he would find consolation in their childish, affectionate remembrance. She could think of all this, and then added in words grandly eloquent in their simplicity, and filled with tenderness and the agony of despair: "I want you to write me one more letter. This may be the last one I can ever write to you. Don't forget to pray, Jimmie. You know how well I love you, and I never got tired waiting on you when you were sick. You don't know how bad I felt when I heard you was sick and I could not be with you. Now my darling boy, trust in God and don't grieve any more about me. Edy wants to write. All the love to you that a mother can have. Write my dear boy, if you can."

Every line of this letter has moistened eyes with tears. Every line appeals to the sweetest sympathies in human nature. It is the very sublimity of grief. It is the heart speaking. No one who did not feel as this humble, God-fearing woman felt could write as she wrote, in that last letter to the one being she most fondly loved—to the one being who least deserved a mother's love and prayer and tears.

THE PROFANE CROWD AT CHURCH.

Bill Sykes kept a crow in his whisky saloon on a texas turnpike which had picked up the words "darn you" from the conversation of Bill's customers so that he could say it quite plainly. One day in a knock-down and drag-out at the grogery the crow became so frightened that he flew away from home, and took up quarters in a tumble-down and delapidated settlement meeting house, which which was only opened twice or three times a year on the visit of the "circuit riders."

Two days after the crow's occupancy, the church was thrown open for preaching and a large crowd assembled, among whom was a very old lady who was compelled to use crutches in walking, and who took her seat in the "front pew" and was soon deeply absorbed in the eloquence of the preacher. The reverend gentleman, however, had scarcely got under full headway, and commenced thundering his anathemas against all grades of sinners, when a hoarse, croaking voice from above uttered the ominous words:

"Darn you!"

The preacher and congregation looked aghast at such profanity and each peered into his neighbor's face in vain to detect some signs of guilt.

Quiet was at length restored, and the sermon proceeded, but before ten minutes had elapsed the ominous "Darn you!" again electrified the audience, and just as the preacher cast his eyes upward to search for the delinquent the crow flew down from his perch and, alighting upon the open Bible, calmly surveyed the terrified crowd and gave another doleful croak:

"Darn you!"

The effect was simultaneous. Giving one startled and terrified glance at the intruder, the preacher sprang through the window, carrying sash, and all with him, and set off at a break-neck pace through the woods, closely followed by his panic struck congregation, who piled out of the building pell mell after him.

In the general scramble the old lady with the crutches had been knocked down in the church, where she lay unable to rise, and on observing her the crow, who was after something to eat, flew down beside her and very knowingly cocking his eye up at her again croaked:

"Darn you!"

The old lady eyed him savagely for a few moments, and then broke forth in a tone of reckless defiance:

"Yes; and darn you too; I had nothing to do with getting up this pesky old meeting—and you know it, too!"

The poor old soul had mistaken the crow for a messenger of the devil, if not himself in an assumed shape, and concluded to try and propitiate, if possible, the wrath of his satanic majesty, by denying all complicity in the affair.

The world is full of just such kind of people—good Lord and good devil individuals, according to the circumstances in which they may be placed.

FIXING A SKINFLINT.

"Tough business? Well, I should say so."

The ex-steamboat clerk referred to the old days on the upper Mississippi, Minnesota and St. Croix rivers.

"The people living along the rivers used to think it was righteous to beat a steamboat man whenever they could. We had to keep our eyes open for all sorts of swindlers. Steamboaters were common prey for these people. I remember once our boat worked all day to get through the Hawk Creek chute, a narrow, shallow, and tremendously swift place in the Minnesota River. An old codger on the bank saw us working away with all our might and burning our wood at a fearful rate. He calculated we'd need wood by the time we got through the chute, so he harnessed his oxen and hauled several cords of green cottonwood down to the bank. Sure enough, when we got through we had used up all our wood, and were burning almost clear rosin out of the barrels. When we landed I asked the old curmudgeon what he wanted for his wood.

"'Four dollars a cord.'

"'But,' says I, 'we buy the best maple for $2.50.'

"'Four dollars for this. Take it or leave it.' The old skinflint knew we had to take it, although green cottonwood is the poorest of all fuel.

"Well, I measured off two cords—just enough to take us to the next woodpile. While the rousters were taking it aboard I whispered something in the mate's ear, and then, when the wood was all shipped I told the old swindler to come to the office on the boat and get his pay. When we were well in the office the mate pulled in the staging and we put out into the river. I paid the wood man his $8.

"'Here,' says he, as he stepped out on deck and saw we were in the middle of the river. 'I want to get ashore.'

"'Do you?' says I. 'Well, you'll just pay us $8 to land for you.'

"'Then I'll go to the next landing with you,' said he.

"'All right, you can go, but it'll cost you just $8 for the ride,' says I.

"He finally paid me the $8, and we ran up nigh the bank and let 'm jump off in the mud. Yes, those people along the river used to abuse us steamboat men shamefully."

IT WAS ALL RIGHT.

A man who was looking through a second-hand store in Brooklyn, with a view of finding a bedstead to suit him, finally examined one, and asked:

'Are you sure there are no bugs in this?'

'Bugs! Vhy dot pedstead was oudt of my own family! We got it vhen my brudder Moses was here, und now he has gone avay I sell it for half-price.'

'Say, I believe it has bugs in.'

'Omposseible, my freundt. My vife vas so neat dot if she know of such tings in der house she go grazy.'

'And I'll be hanged if here isn't proof!' exclaimed the customer, as he pointed to an unimpeachable evidence.

'Vhell! Vhell!'

The customer was going out with a heart-broken look on his face, when the other detained him, and said:

'Dot's all right after all. Ef you puy dot pedstead you know you haf bugs from a respectable family! Moses was head-clerk in Rochester, and you know I vas here twenty-seven years in peesness.'

SHE TOOK THE MEDICINE.

The doctor had loved her long and well, but dare not mention it. At length she became indisposed and sent for him. He could see nothing materially wrong with her, except a little irregularity about the heart, and at length she asked:

"Well, doctor, what do you think ought to be done for me."

Replied the doctor, "I don't know of any better way than to go to the county clerk's and get a matrimonial perscription."

"What and get married—why, who in the world would have me?"

"I will," replied the doctor.

"Oh, dear me, if that is the kind of medicine your are going to give me, it won't be so bad to take after all, will it dear," replied the rapidly reviving young lady.

NOT A NATIVE.

A man called on the secretary of state, and, drawing the high official aside, said:

"I heard somebody say that er man what was born in a foreign country could not be gov'ner of the Newnited States; is thar any truth in what I heered?"

"No one who was born in a foreign country can be President of the United States," replied the secretary.

"Wall, that strikes me purty hard, fur I ain't got nigh sich encouragement ter go to the night school what I jined some time ago. I don't say that I ever woulder been President, stilll I'd feel a heap better ef I thought that the thing was in reach. Wall, sir, since I first heered that it bothered me powerful, an' my wife is so pestered that she's fallen away to a mere skeleton."

"Where were you born?" asked the secretary.

"Down here in Saline county."

"Saline county is not foreign," replied the secretary, with a smile. "You are a native of the United States, and are legible, so far as birth is concerned, to the highest office in the land."

"Gimmie your hand, pardner. You've lifted a load as heavy as a horse-block offen my shoulders. I'll go right home and tell my wife, and then buy her a head of cabbage, 'case she ain't eat nothin' since we heered the distracted news. It'll be wuth a dollar to see that woman eat."

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

"Will Moses Webster Finback please step dis way?" asked the President as the meeting opened.

Brother Finback, who has been a very quiet but a very interested member of the club for the past two years, advanced to the desk and brother Gardner continued:

"Moses, I l'arn you am on de pint of removin' to Ohio?"

"Yes, sah."

"You will take your certificate 'long wid you, an' you will keep your membership wid us just the same; an' any time you kin raise money 'nuff to take a freight train an' com up to see us you will find a hostile welcome."

"Yes, sah—Ize much obleeged, sah," replied Moses as he wiped a tear from his eye.

'An' now I want to say a few furder words to you,' resumed the President after a solem pause. 'You am gwine to cut loose an' sail in de company of strangers, an' dar' am a few things you would do well to remember.

Remember, dat a lawyer will work harder to cl'ar a murderer dan he will to convict a thief.

Remember, dat a naybur who offers you de loan of his hoe am fishin' around to secure de loan of your wheelbarrer.

Remember, dat you can't judge of de true home happiness of a man an' his wife by seein 'em at a Sunday skule picnic.

Remember, dat while de avirage man will return you de k'rect change in a business transackshun, he'll water his milk an' mix beans wid his coffee.

Remember, dat all de negatives of best photographs am retouched an' de wrinkles an' freckles worked out.

Remember, dat society am made of good clothes, hungry stomachs, deception, heartache an' mixed grammer.

Remember, dat people will never stop to question de truf of any rumor or scandal affectin' your character, but it takes y'ars to satisfy 'em dat your great grandfather wasn't a pirate an' your great grandmudder de leadin' gal in a fifteen-cent balist. You kin now sot down an' close yer eyes an' reflect an' digest, an' de rest of us will purceed to carry out de usual programme of de meetin.'

ASLEEP ON THE TELEGRAPH WIRES.

(From the Kansas City Journal.)

People have been known to sleep on housetops, in the branches of trees, and on rare occasions in a sleeping car, but probably the first case of any one selecting the top of a telegraph pole as a lodging place occurred recently. Shortly after midnight Jack Donegan, one of the linemen employed by the telephone company, appeared, fully equipped in his working uniform, including climbers, at Wood Brothers' ice-house, at the foot of Holmes street, and asked the men in charge for the loan of a short piece of plank. Supposing that he wanted to use it in making some repairs of telephone lines, a large number of which pass directly in front of the ice-house, they gave him the plank, but were unprepared, by the surprise which awaited them, for Donegan, taking the board under his arm, climbed the top of a high pole near by, and laying the plank across the wires, coolly rolled up his coat for a pillow, and stretching himself on the plank, composed himself for a snooze, and was soon snoring as peacefully as a babe in its mother's arms. The employes of the ice-house expected to see him fall every moment, but were afraid to make any attempt to wake him lest it should frighten him and precipitate his tumble. About 4 o'clock in the morning Officer Harrington came along, and being made acquainted with the situation, yelled at the high minded individual roosting at the top of the pole, and endeavored to persuade him to come down from his lofty perch. Donegan wakened up in good order, but failed to recognize Harrington's authority to order him to come down. Finding persuasion of no avail, the officer, not to be outdone, and being something of a climber himself, "shinned" up the pole, and by the application of a little force, brought his man safely down to terra firma, and once more Donegan was taken to the station and a few hours afterward arraigned in the police court and fined $5 for drunkenness. Donegan says sleeping on the top of telegraph poles is one of his favorite pastimes, and he is unable to see any reason why he should be disturbed in his repose.

Also, to elect FOUR members of the County Executive Committee.

J. E. MARTINE, President.

THE PATHWAY.

The path of duty for the Democratic party to pursue, in order to gain permanent national ascendency and thereby honor itself by advancing the public welfare, is clearly manifest.

To follow that pathway, without turning to the right hand or to the left, should be the earnest effort of all those who occupy the responsible positions of Democratic leaders.

It is the only true course and may be thus briefly sketched—

Maintain with dignity and fidelity the well known and freedom conferring political principles of Jefferson.

Allow no personal considerations of any name or nature to disturb harmonious party action, nor for a moment to thwart the Democratic purpose of securing for the whole people exact justice and perfect equality of rights and privileges.

The triumph of Democracy is the hope of the Republic.

It would make progress identical with prosperity.

Foster each individual interest and industry.

Frustrate the insidious designs of aristocracy and monopoly.

Blight extravagance and corruption by enforcing honesty and economy throughout every department of public affairs.

Meet the demands and encourage the developments of a rapidly growing country.

Enhance national power and glory, at home and abroad, by preserving unsullied and unimpaired that matchless fabric of Republican Government which the heroism of the Revolution made possible and the patriotic wisdom of the Constitution perfected and ordained.

Democracy has but a single end in view, the practical and enduring good of the people.

It is a noble mission.

Democrats! Onward with united ranks to victory!

When public offices were sold to the highest bidder the glory of ancient Rome expired.

To elevate virtue into sovereignty is to rear a barrier of safety around the American Republic.

Contentment with moderate gains, honestly acquired, is the secret of prosperity and happiness.

The mania to become rich without work is the doorway to ruin, wherein thousands yearly rush.

A poor honest wood-sawyer is a hundred fold more deserving of confidence and respect than a rich rogue.

JOEL PARKER NOT A CANDIDATE.

As was generally supposed from the first mention of ex-Governor Parker's name for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination, he refuses to allow the use of his name for the candidacy. The following is a letter written by him on the subject:

FREEHOLD, N. J., Aug. 30, 1883.

MY DEAR SIR—Your letter is received. You state that my name is being used in connection with the Gubernatorial nomination. I also notice that some of the newspapers announce that I would accept the nomination if tendered to me by the convention. I have not heretofore authorized any one to make any statement on the subject. I have no knowledge by whom my name was first suggested in that connection. I supposed that the "boom," as you term it, would have long since subsided; but as you assure me that there is quite a general feeling in favor of my nomination, I think it is just to my friends, to the candidates and their friends to make known my position. I now request you to state that I am not and will not be a candidate for the nomination. You may also state that I would not accept the nomination if tendered to me by the Convention. Grateful for the good opinion of my friends, I regret that I cannot on this occasion comply with their wishes. I have no objection to your publishing this. Respectfully yours,

JOEL PARKER.

To Major J. S. Yard, editor of the Monmouth Democrat.

It is dangerous to entrust with executive, legislative or official authority those who have only private purposes to subserve.

Estimate every man according to his own real moral worth, not by the value of property he owns, or what his forefathers were.

The aristocracy of wealth now showing its head in America is quite as repugnant to free institutions as that of blood in England.

The vital principle of our free system of government finds expression in the following words—"Protection to the toiling many against the aggressions of the favored few."

After all the talk about protecting American labor is exploded, the fact remains, that large employers, with rare exceptions, pay the least wages they possibly can.

They say that Levi D. Jarrard has taken the oath of allegiance to the British Government, and his New Brunswick friends jovially remark thereupon, "Levi is no fool."

The New York Sun, with its usual enterprise, issued a fac simile of the first number of that paper on Monday, Sept. 3d, that date being the fiftieth anniversary of its existence.

To grant each individual citizen the unrestricted opportunity of earning and enjoying the reward of honest industry, and to honor him for personal merit alone, is the governing impulse of Democracy.

There cannot be a greater insult offered to intelligent American citizenship, than the nomination of a man for public office solely because he possesses money and the disposition to spend it corruptly.

Democracy is the party of the people, and therefore, to be loyal to the object of its organization, it must protect the people from every foe, whether open or disguised, not only through warning words, but by the might of positive action.

Our city fathers "sat down" on the water supply question referred to them by interested corporators of the Plainfield Water Supply Company. They acted wisely in so doing. Let us have sewerage before water is introduced.

It is true that in this country privileged classes are not openly recognized by law, yet, it is no less the truth, that within the last quarter of a century they have secretly obtained a controlling power over legislation full of danger to the liberties of the people.

The tariff platform of the Ohio Democracy stands unimpeached. It reads thus—"A tariff for revenue limited to the necessities of a government economically administered, and so adjusted in its application as to prevent unequal burdens, encourage productive interests at home and afford just compensation to labor, but not to create or foster monopolies."

Sol Sam's Minstrels.

The following is from the Schenectady N. Y. Daily Union, regarding the troupe that is to entertain our public at Van Deventer Hall, next Wednesday evening.

"Solomon Sam's troupe of burnt cork artists gave and excellent performance in Union Hall last evening. The programme contained much that was novel and laughable. Part first or the overture included singing by different members of the company and the propounding of new and pointed jokes beside the performance of Messrs Allen and Hogan on the bones and Holloway and Fogan on the tamborine. The 'flying machine,' a comical piece, was a fitting final to the overture. The entire cast was introduced. Indeed the olio gave exceeding satisfaction. Among the many other notable features were Messrs Frank Shepherd and Charles Hallam in their original musical sketch "My Country Cousin" which was very laugh provoking. The Hogan brothers as representatives of Ethiopian characters, introducing Harry Hogan's musical production, the "Sign of the Mozambique" proved intensely mirthful. The performance concluded with a laughable farce entitled "A Desperate Situation" a fitting finish to a pleasurable entertainment.

An Educational Enterprise.

We have received the twelfth annual circular of the Plainfield Academy for Boys, for 1883-4, giving in a concise manner much information which, no doubt, will be of interest to parents seeking a school for their sons.

Attention is call to the new school building which is a model both as regards ventilation and lighting and no doubt will add greatly to the patronage of this popular institution. Mr. Lyon hopes to build up for Plainfield an institution what will add to the attractiveness of our city. There is no reason why Plainfield should not become as much as Poughkeepsie an educational center, and it can become such if the people will unite in supporting enterprising men like Mr. Lyon, who invest their capital as well as their time in their school.

Mr. Lyon has secured the best talent to assist him the coming school year. He has secured the services of Prof. F. W. Hoffman who has taught at Benjamin & Allen's Military School, Sing-Sing, and at Dr. Clark's Tivoli on the Hudson, and who comes with the highest recommendations. Prof. Hoffman will be an acquisition to the city as well as to the school. The modern languages will continue to receive the attention their importance demands. Private classes will be organized for the study of German, French, Spanish, Drawing and Elocution under the direction of experienced teachers, to meet after school hours.

Parties interested in the education of boys or themselves, would do well to consult Mr. Lyon.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Mrs Cornelius Ross is lying seriously ill at her residence, from a paralytic stroke.

The Assessor's list shows the number of dogs in our township to be 205 for the year 1883.

The record of vital statistics for Westfield township for month of August shows four deaths and one birth.

Chas. R. Clark and Wm. C. Pierson were drawn as petit jurors from Westfield township at last Tuesday's session of Union County Courts.

The Democrats of Westfield township have called their primary meeting for the election of delegates to the gubernatorial convention, for Tuesday evening, Sept. 11, at the town rooms.

The town committee met at town rooms on Monday evening, Sept. 3d, 1883, to receive sheep bills, the same being the amount of damage done to sheep in our township the past year by dogs.

One of our young lads on going out of the rear door of Woodruff's market on Saturday evening last, fell into the brook and ruined a suit of clothes. The brook at that point ought to be covered with a plank to prevent similar accidents.

Public School No. 10 opened its first session of the school year on Monday morning last. There was a good attendance of parents and families of the scholars. Short addresses were made by Rev's N. W. Cadwell, W. Hoagland and E. J. Neill. The roll showed 260 scholars present, being an increase over last year of some 30.

The crushed stone recently purchased by the citizens is being delivered very rapidly and put upon our streets. Let the subscriptions come in and we will have no need of the purchase of a stone crusher. We understand the Westfield Dramatic Club contributed some forty dollars towards the street improvements, it being the receipts from one of their recent entertainments.

On Tuesday evening last, Empire Eng. Co. No. 2, Foreman Pennington, went to Plainfield with their new Holloway Chemical Engine, as guests of Zephyr H. & L. Co., and to give a test of the working qualities of their new engine. There had been prepared a building filled with tar, kerosene and paint barrels, shavings, hay and brush. The Empire Co. were escorted down to the building by the H. & L. Co. After the building had been fired and allowed to get under good headway, orders were given to turn on the stream, with Mr. Eb. Hart, Jr., hold of the pipe. He had the fire nearly under control when the coupling to the second section of hose became disconnected, allowing the water and gas to escape, very soon after exhausting the tank, which allowed the flames to increase while the Company were filling the tanks with water from the brook near by. It was about as hot a fire as could be, and we doubt very much whether a stream from a steam fire engine could have subdued it. It took about fifty minutes from the beginning of the fire until it was out. The result of the test proved very unsatisfactory to Empire Engine Company, owing to the fact of the coupling becoming disconnected soon after they had commenced to use the water, and then while pumping water from the brook the pump of the engine became choked with mud and grass which made a great deal of delay and gave the fire much headway among the paint and tar barrels.

PRESENT POWER!
To-Morrow a long way off when help is wanted to-day.
Comfort is never in a hurry. Pain and distress are in hot haste. It is to the "friend in need"—the friend who does something now—that the old adage pays the compliment of being "a friend indeed." That they do not keep the sufferer in suspense is the salient excellence of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS. The plasters of other days—whether porous or otherwise—said "Wait until to-morrow; We can promise nothing on the spur of the moment." But pain unrelieved, like hope deferred, maketh the heart sick. Benson's plasters act on application. They permeate, soothe, warm and heal, containing as they do, chemical and medicinal agents of the highest efficiency. Their motto is now, and the genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of each plaster. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

Foreman Andrew Jennings of Plainfield Engine Co., No. 2, was presented by his men with a handsome trumpet, last Tuesday evening. Mayor Maxson made the presentation speech, and the affair passed off in a very agreeable manner.

Toot! Toot!

The Plainfield Cornet Band under its former leader, Prof. Neilson, is reorganizing and gives promise of some time developing into a formidable rival to the Good Will of New Brunswick. We have the necessary talent, let it be utilized!

The Last.

The A. O. H. No. 4, of this city, will hold a picnic in Wooden's Grove, next Thursday afternoon and evening; or if stormy, the week following. Music will be furnished by Prof. Cahill, refreshments of all kinds will be found on the grounds, and stages from the corner of Front and Somerset streets will run direct to the Grove during the afternoon and evening.

Base Ball.

The game arranged for Wednesday between the Crescents of this city and the Elizabeth Athletic Club on the grounds of the latter, was indefinitely postponed by the failure of the Elizabethans to keep the engagement. The latter were, "whitewashed" Monday by the same club that the Crescents defeated in a thirteen inning game, and it took the courage all out of them.

One Way to Load A Wagon.

A horse staggering under what might have been called a fit and seemingly blind to everything, created some damage last Monday by breaking out of his stable back of Front and Peace streets, tearing down fences, running into tree boxes, and finally lying down and dying in the road. A box wagon was pulled up alongside of the body, the wheels taken off, the horse rolled into it, the wagon raised again and the funeral procession marched onward to the grave.

Somerset's Valuation.

The Board of Assessors of Somerset county met at Somerville Monday last. From Assessor Brokaw of North Plainfield we learn that the following is the valuation for Somerset county—Number of acres, 183,063; valuation of real estate, $14,111,936; personal estate, $7,064,761; debts, $4,556,697; total valuation, $16,620,000. The valuation for North Plainfield is: Number of acres, 7,367; valuation of real estate, $1,214,300; personal estate, $192,600; debts, $106,900. Total valuation, $1,300,000.

Some Sunflowers.

The rivalry among raisers of the æsthetic flower-of-the-sun, seems as great as last season although many who once admired now condemn it. From the latest reports received as we go to press, the following examples of success are selected. Mr. Jas. K. Arnold has the tallest—over ten feet in height. Mr. Benjamin Bachman the most prolific—thirty-five flowers on one plant. Mr. Jerry Garretson the largest—eleven inches in diameter. Mr. Lewis Barkalew the most original—being entirely yellow, with no black centre.

Anniversary of St. Mary's Church.

Extensive preparations are being made to commemorate the third anniversary of the dedication of St. Mary's church next Sunday. The celebrant of the solemn High Mass at 10:30 o'clock will be the Rev. Charles F. Kelly, a native of this city, who was baptised in the old church and served there both as an altar boy and Sunday School teacher. The sermon will be preached by Rev. M. A. Gleason, of Asbury Park. In the evening at 8 o'clock solemn vespers will be sung by Rev. Chas. E. Gillen, followed by a sermon by Rev. Father Kelly.

At the Hotel Netherwood.

The continued success of the Hotel Netherwood under Mr. S. V. Woodruff, assures its remaining open during the present month, and possibly all of October. Mr. Clark, the manager of the past, has accepted a position elsewhere, and his late duties now devolve upon Mr. C. L. Johnson, formerly manager of the Phenix Hotel, Concord, N. H. Wednesday evening another successful entertainment occurred, followed by a hop. The affair was a testimonial benefit to Prof. Niethammer, the talented musician, in which Mr. James Burdette took part.

The Bachelor's Picnic.

The weather of last Thursday and the temperature of the evening were not such as to induce a large attendance at outdoor entertainments, and in consequence the picnic of the Junior Bachelor's, although a success in every other way, was not a success financially. The music was first-class and every effort was made for the pleasure of all with gratifying results, but the profit was all fun. However, they'll have better luck next time. The officers of the day were: Director—Chief Bachelor, George Becker. Floor Manager—Treasurer, G. Whiteley. Assistant Floor Managers—J. Loughlin and Fred. Becker. Committee of Arrangements—Secretary, H. Bilyeu and Messrs. Becker, Whitely, Hagaman and Schlereth.

A Scoundrel's Act.

At about half past eleven o'clock Tuesday evening, a work shop erected back of the residence building for J. C. Zimmerman, Esq., on the corner of Washington avenue and Holy Rood place, was set on fire by some party as yet unknown. The shop contained sash, door casings and other wood work in process of construction, besides the tools of all the carpenters and masons employed on the building. The entire Department turned out but saved nothing—excepting Steamer No. 2, which saved her reputation by getting "first water." Mr. Charles Stimpson, the contracting carpenter, is a heavy loser by the incendiary's act, and his men, with the masons employed by Mr. L. W. Pangborn, each are out a set of tools. When they came to work, Wednesday morning, and found their property gone, the unfortunate laborers could have hung with pleasure the wretch that did it.

No Decrease of Commuter's Privileges.

So many unfounded rumors have been started to the effect that the Philadelphia & Reading R. R. Co. intended increasing the rates of commutation along the line of the Central N. J. Division, and in other ways interfering with the privileges as at present possessed by commuters, that the growth of our city has already been somewhat effected. Residents have been cautious about renewing leases, and in some cases have decided not to remain with the possibility of their privileges as commuters being decreased. In this connection we publish the following private letter from the Secretary of the company:

PHILADELPHIA AND READING RAILROAD,
PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 4, 1883.

W. H. Sterling, Esq., Plainfield.

MY DEAR STERLING:—Am in due receipt of your favor of 1st inst. On making inquiry of our General Passenger Agent, he informs me there is no idea of making any changes in our ticket system which will interfere in any way with the commuter's privileges. The mileage books referred to are only used on through travel between New York and Philipsburg. With kind regards.

Yours very truly,
ALBERT FOSTER.

THE CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH.

The resignation of its Pastor accepted—And his past services substantially appreciated.

At the close of the morning service in the Crescent avenue church, Sunday last, a congregational meeting was held with the Rev. K. P. Ketcham as Moderator. Mr. John K. Van Arsdale, read a statement presented to the church by its pastor the Rev. John C. Bliss, on the morning of July 15th, and published in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST the same week. The meeting was then thrown open for general business and Mr. Charles Place offered the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, Our pastor, the Rev. John C. Bliss, D. D., having from the pulpit on July 15th, resigned his charge of the Plainfield Presbyterian church, such resignation to take effect Sept. 30, 1883, and having at that time notified this congregation that he should as soon as practicable request the Presbytery to dissolve such pastoral relation, and whereas such resignation as stated by him is final, and the time has arrived when at his request definite action is to be taken by the Presbytery in dissolving the pastoral relation which has existed for the past sixteen years with this church, during which time he has worked earnestly and faithfully as its pastor with the welfare of his people ever near his heart, and whereas, during his pastoral charge here, our church has been blessed spiritually as few churches have been,—the membership now being nearly five hundred and our new church edifice costing about one hundred thousand dollars has been erected and is entirely free from debt. Therefore,

Resolved, That we, the members of this church and congregation here assembled, in accordance with the expressed wish of our pastor do now acquiesce in his desire to ask the Presbytery to dissolve the pastoral relation existing here.

Resolved, That we invoke the blessing of Almighty God upon him as he retires from this pulpit and during the years that remain to him—that when he shall have finally gone out from this people and from this church to return no more as our pastor, it is our sincere desire and our earnest prayer that the Divine favor may always attend him in whatever field he may be called to labor.

Resolved, That we recommend the appointment of three commissioners to represent the members of this church and congregation at the meeting of the Presbytery when Dr. Bliss shall appear before it for the purpose of asking that his pastoral relations here be dissolved and that they present to that body a copy of these preamble and resolutions.

These resolutions were unanimously adopted by a rising vote, and the following were appointed:

Samuel Milliken, Jr., Dr. John Allen, and Philip Swain as commissioners to attend the meeting of Presbytery at Elizabeth, September 10th.

Stephen A. Ginna, William McD. Coriell and Charles Schermerhorn as a committee to have the resolutions engrossed and to present the same to Dr. Bliss.

Mr. John W. Moore then presented the following, which was adopted:

Our pastor, the Rev. John C. Bliss, D. D., having tendered his resignation to this church of which he has been a faithful minister for the past sixteen years, upon a salary from which he has undoubtedly accumulated but little for future use or enjoyment, and having, out of his own means, unsolicited, contributed liberally toward extinguishing the debt of the church and to many other of its expenditures, the Trustees, with the Elders and Deacons, after due consideration, deem it advisable to submit to the members of this church and congregation the following resolution and recommend that the same be adopted:

Resolved, That in consideration of the foregoing statement, the salary of our pastor Dr. Bliss, which is now three thousand dollars ($3,000) per annum, be and the same is hereby extended from Oct. 1, 1883, to Oct. 1, 1884, and the Trustees are hereby authorized and directed to pay the said three thousand dollars ($3,000) to him within the year, in such way as will be most consistent with the financial condition of the church and most agreeable to Dr. Bliss.

The Coming County Fair.

In presenting the Fifth Annual Premium List of the Union and Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association, the Board of Directors desire to submit the following statement:

It is well understood by those who have taken interest enough to learn that in a financial sense the exhibitions held heretofore have not been satisfactory. The management cannot believe that the residents of two such counties as Union and Middlesex do not wish to avail themselves of the facilities offered by the association to exhibit specimens of their handiwork, assisted by those natural advantages which the country gives for the developement of agriculture. The present season has been one of grand opportunities, and as it is for you to determine this year whether or not the project shall be abandoned in so far as it relates to exhibitions other than speed. If it is to continue as a place to show all that can be done in the way of agriculture, art, manufacture and the breeding of stock, and be a place for that healthful recreation which it can give, you must lend your encouragement and support. A few members advanced funds to pay the amounts due exhibitors last year, and while the amount received by exhibitors as premium is small to each, in the aggregate it is a large sum to be contributed by a few. It is therefore proposed this year to offer exhibitors as awards diplomas for excellence; except for speed, which is believed will be prized more than the sum of money which could be given, thus allowing the association the opportunity of getting a fund from which in the future liberal money premiums may be offered. Facilities will be offered for the display of goods free of charge to exhibitors. Judges will be appointed to judge them and make awards. We are free to admit this experiment if unsuccessful will be the final attempt. We are willing to do our best to make the show a success, but not longer to take chances of incurring debt, and thereby loose the good credit we have sustained thus far.

The Fair will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 24, 25, 26 and 27, 1883, on the grounds of the association near Plainfield, N. J. J. V. D. Christopher will be Superintendent in Chief, and S. W. Laing, Assistant. The programme for the fair is very attractive. The premium for the speed department and programme will be as follows:

The New Public School Buildings.

PLAINFIELD.

The Board of Education of this city is pushing forward with all rapidity possible the completion of the interior of the Fourth street building, and hopes by Monday to have sufficient furniture in the class-rooms to permit the beginning of study. This building, the exterior of which in outline, proportion and coloring is unexcelled for beauty in the State—is probably equalled by few of its kind in the perfection of its interior arrangements. The rooms are large and most thoroughly lighted, warmed and ventilated. Iron stairways each side of the centre halls afford complete means of access with entire safety and dispatch, and all the doors swing outward. The two first floors are devoted to class-rooms and wardrobes, while the upper floor is divided into two large rooms—one fitted as an assembly hall. The entire wood work is of pine, oiled to bring out the beauty of its grain. The architect was Mr. Oscar S. Teale of North Plainfield.

NORTH PLAINFIELD.

Since Monday last the Principal and teachers of the North Plainfield Public School have been exceedingly busy receiving, each day, applicants for admission, examining the same and allotting them to such classes as their advancement would allow. The Township has great reason to be proud of its new building, and that its arrangement is satisfactory to the public is proven by the large number of new scholars that have applied for admittance—scholars, in many cases, that have attended private schools in the past. The building will be thrown open for the general inspection of parents and tax-payers today from 2 to 5 and 7 to 9 p. m. It is all that could be desired in every way—comfort, convenience, perfect ventilation at all seasons of the year and best methods of lighting and heating have been completely secured. It contains twelve class-rooms supplied with new furniture of the most improved patterns for the purpose, and will seat about 500 pupils.

The following is a list of its teachers: Mr. Chas. E. Boss, Principal, Misses D. B. Skillman, L. Keeler, R. G. Mair, C. E. Randolph, E. J. Bainbridge, E. K. Corwin, I. M. Wilson, L. Kiernan.

A Fire and a Supper.

The Empire Fire Company, of Westfield, were the guests, last Tuesday evening, of Zephyr H. & L. Co. No. 1, of this city, and were entertained in a very agreeable manner. Having brought with them the new chemical engine of which they are so proud, a trial of its abilities and the efficiency of the members was made in the vacant lot to the left of Park avenue just beyond the Baptist church. Here a structure was erected 8 by 16 and 15 feet high of hemlock boards laid an inch apart to allow for a draft through. Inside was first spread two loads of shavings over which was poured 52 gallons of coal tar. A barrel of tar and about 150 gallons of refuse oil contained in 21 kerosene barrels, were next stored inside and a number of loads of dry brush filled up the vacancy completely.

There was a sharp breeze blowing about 9:30 o'clock when this mass of inflamable material was lighted, and the flames soon raged with intense fierceness. Orders were then given to commence work, and the stream (?) from the engine was turned on. At once its effect was seen, and in but a few moments the fire would have been under entire control, but a hose coupling parted and the charge from the generator passed out through the open butt. This piece of bad luck was augmented by the lack of water in the brook where the engine stood. The suction clogged with mud, and it was almost impossible to fill the generators therewith. By the time all these difficulties were overcome the fire had reached the oil and tar, one side of the structure had fallen in and the centre was a mass of seething flame upon which no stream of water would have had any effect. The engine was then started again and in less than five minutes the fire lay dead. About 3,000 people witnessed the trial, and in spite of the bad luck in the beginning, were greatly surprised at the abilities of the Westfielders and their engine.

After the trial the Westfielders were taken to the Zephyr's rooms, their apparatus stored in 1's engine house and they invited to partake of a first-rate clam chowder gotten up by Charley Davis and served in the truck rooms.

The Zephyr's were well prepared to cater to the large crowd present and every-one was attended to by some gentle Zephyr and made to feel at home. After supper Foreman Mumford invited the guests to visit the parlors where songs and speechmaking were indulged in. The following taking a lively part: Foreman Clark, Ex-Freeholder S. S. Mapes, Lawyer Peckham, Foreman Pennington and Sam. Godschalk, of the Westfield Fire Department. Foreman B. A. Mumford read a poem; Fire Commissioner Gillies made a speech, followed by Chief Carney, Foreman Saltzman and others of the Plainfield Fire Department. The Westfield laddies returned home late in the evening greatly pleased by their visit to an enterprising fire company.

The committee of arrangements, Messrs. Andrew Love, Nicholas W. Conway and Samuel J. Robinson deserve praise for the successful and gratifying manner in which the affair passed off.

"Cause Unknown!"

Shortly after four o'clock, last Saturday morning, the one-story frame building at the corner of Front street and Madison avenue, was discovered to be on fire. A general alarm awoke the Department, and the steamers were soon at work preventing the spread of the flames to adjoining buildings. Although the fire was just opposite the Engine House of No. 2, yet No. 1 again secured the credit of having "first water"—both steamers, however, with the Truck, did most effective service. The building was owned by Mr. Samuel Dreier and insured for $1,800. It was rented by Mr. Wm. Meier who occupied the rear with his family as a dwelling, and carried on the business of a tobacconist in the store in front. His insurance is unknown. The cause of the fire and the locality where it commenced, seem to be unknown. Watchman Wright saw no fire about the building ten minutes before the roof was wrapped in flames.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

There are now in United States and Canada 341 paid General Secretaries.

The young men's meeting Monday evening was well attended and evidently interesting. Hope is high and much is expected in the association during the coming months. Will all young men interested in the work of the Young Men's Christian Association determine to do their part to advance the work? If all do something, how soon would there be a great change for the better. The meeting will be held as usual on Monday evening.

Four hundred and eighty-four Young Men's Christian Associations are doing a work in this country.

The Board of Directors will meet for the transaction of business this (Thursday) evening. Will every member be at his post?

The great work for young men is all the out-growth of one man's efforts. The first association was organized in London, England, in 1845, by Geo. Williams.

The young men's Bible study will be re-commenced next week. A list of subjects will be published in this paper next week.

Every Boy who belongs to the "Boy's Branch" is wanted at the Lecture Room on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Boys, don't fail to be present.

THE SPOOPENDYKES.

"My dear," whimpered Mr. Spoopendyke, hobbling into his wife's room and throwing himself into a chair with a desolate expression of despair on his visage. "My dear, there is something the matter with my foot, and I can't make out what the trouble is."

"I know!" exclaimed Mrs. Spoopendyke, hovering over him with affectionate interest and solicitude. "I think it's rheumatism."

"No, it ain't rheumatism, either!" growled Mr. Spoopendyke. "It is something worse than rheumatism, and if it goes to my heart it may kill me!"

"Maybe it's a stone bruise," suggested Mrs. Spoopendyke, not realizing that a great deal of the sentiment and most of the danger are taken out of a malady when it is definitely ascertained what the malady is. "All you want is some liniment and you will be all right by to-morrow."

"That's all you know about it," grunted Mr. Spoopendyke, who was not to be put off with so small a disaster as a stone bruise. "I tell you, that I have got some trouble with my foot that threatens my life, and you stand around there like a cork in a bottle, and talk about it as though I hadn't got one leg into my coffin as far as the hip. Here I am kicking at death's door with a game foot, and all the interest you have in the matter is to shoot off a vast amount of intelligence about stone bruises. I tell ye, it's something that ain't to be trifled with. Now, what're you going to do about it?"

"Are you sure it isn't a corn?" hazarded Mrs. Spoopendyke, timidly. "They hurt worse than anything else sometimes; but I never heard of people dying of them."

"No, it isn't a corn!" howled Mr. S., nursing his foot and glaring at his wife with a mingled expression of rage and pain. "What d'ye think this foot is, anyway; an agricultural district? When did you ever hear of a corn that reached from the heel to the knee? Which of your friends ever had a corn that hurt clear to the ear?" and Mr. Spoopendyke touched his foot carefully to the floor and eyed his wife narrowly to see if she noticed the expression of agony on his face.

"If it acts that way it must be a bunion!" exclaimed Mrs. Spoopendyke, triumphantly. "All you have got to do is to take your boot off and put your slippers on."

"That's it!" yelled Mr. Spoopendyke, hauling off his shoe and firing it across the room. "When a man is dying of inflammatory rheumatism, it's only a bunion! You've got it! A pain that starts at the toe, runs to the back of the neck and ties in a hard knot over the spine is a bunion! Show me the bunion!" he continued, sticking his leg out straight and pointing his finger at the offending foot. "Take this digit in your lily white hand and place it tenderly on the dod gasted bunion before I die and forget what killed me! Pick it out of the surrounding anatomy!" he yelled, wriggling his foot and bouncing up and down in his chair in a delirium of rage. "Pluck the bunion from its mountain fastness on the hoof of Spoopendyke and hold it up to the gaze of the same!"

"Does it hurt—?" commenced Mrs. Spoopendyke, soothingly.

"Hurt!" roared Mr. Spoopendyke, springing from his chair and dancing around the room. "Of course it don't. It tickles! Hurt! It's a picnic! Say, my dear," and his voice was low and tender. "Say, my dear, instead of going in the country this summer we'll lay in a stock of bunions and wear 'em around for our health and recreation! Hurt!" he shrieked, breaking out in a new spot. "Hurt! it feels like a band of music! That's what it is, a bunion! It took you to hit it! When I get time to fit you up with a full beard and a bottle of whisky, I'm going to start a dispensary with you! If you'd only improve your mind until you reached the standard of intelligence of a moderate donkey, you'd only need a stolen corpse and a bad smell to be a first-class medical college!"

"Say, dear," observed Mrs. Spoopendyke, who had been carefully exploring her husband's boot; "Say, dear, I think I have found out what the trouble is. It isn't a bunion, after all. Here is a peg sticking out here about a quarter of an inch. If you will have that taken out I don't believe you will suffer any more."

Mr. Spoopendyke jammed his hat over his eyes, shoved his feet into his slippers, grabbed the obnoxious boot and started for the door with a withering look at his wife.

"I don't care," murmured Mrs. S., as the front door slammed vindictively; "I don't care. If he has it taken out he has to admit that I was right, and if he doesn't it will hurt him till he dies. I don't know which will be the worse for him but he will have to do one or the other." And with this crowning triumph still in her mind, Mrs. Spoopendyke began to scare the flies out of the room with a sheet, wondering why a fly who has been half smashed against one window frame will insist on coming in at the other window to be smashed over again.

TWO STORIES OF JUDGE BLACK.

On one occasion, when attacked on the Democratic side of the House, Thad Stevens highly eulogized Black as a lawyer and a man, but expressly withheld any indorsement of his politics, which were as bad, he said, as possible. In their originality, their courage, and their inflexibility, there were points of resemblance between Stevens and Black, though in other respects the widest dissimilarity prevailed. There were no social relations between them; they scarcely ever spoke, but, up to the time of his death, Stevens cherished the highest respect for him, and Black has said: "When Mr. Stevens died, he was unequaled as a lawyer, and he said the smartest things that ever were said, but his mind, so far as a sense of obligation to God is concerned, was a howling wilderness."

One day Black was surrounded by a bevy of his personal friends on the floor of the House, among the rest Judge Mercer, then the Bradford Congressman, who turned to him and said: "Judge Black, you have more friends on this side of the House than on yours. You ought to be a Republican. If you would join us, we would appreciate you and give you due prominence." To which Judge Black made reply that he knew it all to be true; the Republicans were good fellows; he would like to belong to them, and there was only one thing in the way. "If," he said, "there was no hereafter, I would join the Republican party at once. Nothing deters me but the fear of hell.—Boston Herald.

THE FARE TO NEW YORK.

'What's the fare to New York?'

There was a crowd of perspiring humanity standing in line at the ticket window in the Broad street station this morning waiting to buy their tickets. An old lady in a black silk gown and a lace cap sort of a bonnet edged up to the ticket window and asked the above question.

'Two dollars and a half,' replied the clerk as he took a ticket out of the rack and stamped it.

'How far is it?' asked the old lady.

'Ninety and seven-tenths miles,' replied the clerk, impatiently.

'What time does the train go?'

'One o'clock,' said the clerk, with a tired look stealing into his face.

'Isn't there another train soon after that?'

'Yes'm; half-past one.'

'Oh, that's too soon,' squeaked the old lady.

'Well, there's another train at three o'clock,' said the clerk, as he grew visibly weaker.

'Well, I don't know, but I think three o'clock is right in the heat of the day—don't you?'

'I can't say,' replied the clerk, as the pallor on his face grew deeper.

'Ain't two dollars and a half too much?'

'You can go for two dollars by buying an excursion ticket,' the clerk faintly replied.

Some man in the middle of the line began to swear.

'How long is the excursion ticket good for?' persisted the old woman.

'Five days,' answered the ticket seller in a hoarse voice.

'Ain't there a train about four or five o'clock?'

'Yes'm, there's one at four and one at five.'

'Have they both got parlor cars on them?'

'Yes'm.'

A little fat man, with his face as red as a blood beet, wanted to know 'if that old woman wanted the earth?'

'Sure there's parlor cars on the four and five o'clock trains?' asked the old lady.

'Yes'm,' groaned the clerk.

'Well, just give me a seven cent ticket to Powelton avenue, and I'll see what my sister says.'

She put down seven pennies, and as she took her ticket and hobbled away two dozen men and women standing in line behind her looked at her as if they could chew her up—silk gown, lace bonnet and all.—Philadelphia News.

TO HELP PAY THE NATIONAL DEBT.

J. B. Gardner, a wealthy citizen of Boston, recently deceased, provided by will that money, bonds and other securities, aggregating in value $931,000, should be turned over to the United States Treasury to be used in helping to pay the national debt. The bequest has been received at the Treasury Department, and by direction of the Register was Tuesday of last week placed to the credit of "patriotic donations."

The shell-shaped straw hat meets with only a limited amount of popularity.

Short bodies with long points back and front, grow more and more numerous.

Jerseys are much worn, but only for fatigue, shopping and traveling costumes.

Flower bonnets are as popular as ever, and tie under the chin with white lace strings.

Large collars, fichus, and shoulder capes are worn with almost every toilet at the sea-side.

Black stockings are worn with dresses of any color and on all occasions by both ladies and children.

It is said that there will be as many positive colors worn in the Fall as intermediate or mixed shades.

Quite a "tempest in a tea-pot" has been raised in Morristown because some of the exempt firemen of that place have been served with tax notices that do not acknowledge the five dollar exemption to which they are entitled. The matter is simple enough. All that is necessary is to claim the exemption and refuse to pay it just as in hundreds of instances soldiers, whose poll-tax exemption has not been credited to them, decline to pay it and that is the last heard of it by them. There have been no less than four legislative enactments in relation to the Firemen exemption, the first of which was in 1869, and finally, after further legislation, a bill was passed last year exempting only active firemen after a certain number of years service.

The remnants of the New York State forests are to be preserved. The Senatorial Committee finds that of the 4,000,000 acres of land comprised in the Adirondack region the State actually owns about 600,000 acres, although ten years ago it only owned 40,000 acres. The ownership of several thousand additional is in doubt, and many thousands of acres will within a short period revert to the State through non-payment of taxes. This, it is claimed, will be ample to supply the needs of the public and will render unnecessary the acquirement of any additional territory by the State. If this could be left to its natural forest growth and limitations be put upon other deforesting, the mischief which now threatens to destroy one of the finest climates in the world would be stopped.

Alluding to the finding of ten one-thousand dollar bills under some old machinery in the Redemption Bureau, a few days since, an exchange thinks it one of the most serious incidents that has ever happened in the Treasury. It is said that those bills had been cancelled and were, therefore, of no value. But why were they there? Cancelled bills are not thrown around in a haphazard way. The New York Sun, referring to this explanation, says: "This pretense is obviously false. Under the regulations of the Treasury, cancelled notes are cut lengthwise into halves the upper parts going to the Register's office and the lower parts to the Secretary's office for final recount and examination before being reduced to pulp. The ten notes found by the mechanics were perfect in all respects, and ready for issue." Had this money been stolen and was the loss not discovered? Or was the loss discovered and the fact concealed? Either horn of this dilemma is bad enough—quite serious enough to shake public confidence in the great institution which has charge of all our national finances, and on the management of which all our material interests depend. We have hoped for a satisfactory explanation of this strange occurrence, but none has been vouchsafed. If such an explanation be possible, it cannot be made too soon or too complete.

WHAT A NEWSPAPER COSTS.

Mr. Charles A. Dana has been giving his views on New York city journalism. He says a great improvement is noticeable. Better talent is now employed. "A competent writer of leaders will be paid from $100 to $150 per week; and no man fit to supervise them and perform the functions of editor-in-chief can be had for less than from $150 to $200 per week. The reporters are of two classes. Those of the regular staff are paid by the week at rates varying from $30 to $60. These perform not only the routine duties of reporting, but are always prepared to be sent off upon special service, in which case their railroad fares, carriage hire, hotel bills and other expenses are paid by the office. Then there are a number of reporters who are attached to each paper who are paid according to the work they perform and without having any prescribed functions, and should be in readiness to do whatever may be necessary.

"I know several men who, without having regular salaries, will average from $50 to $75 a week. Of these two classes of reporters a first-rate paper must employ about fifty. In Washington each newspaper has need of regular correspondents or reporters and occasional contributors, and the different papers differ as to the respective number of these two classes. In Albany each New York paper must have its regular staff devoted to this service. In Europe every leading paper has its regular staff of correspondents. There must be a correspondent in London and one in Paris who report constantly either by post or cable." It will be seen by this estimate that making a newspaper is no child's play. The day is past when a great daily could be gotten out with one man whose hat was his desk and who wrote heavy "leaders" while seated on an old flour barrel.

STATE ITEMS.

Cortlandt Parker of Newark is President of the American Bar Association.

Eight boys were arrested in Hoboken Sunday for playing base ball, and were fined $2 each.

Lawrence May and George Layton, accused of beating August Dietz to death in Rahway, have been held for trial on the charge of murder.

James Galbraith of Rahway, while in a drunken sleep, was aroused by his wife, who threw cold water on him. In return he beat the woman in a terrible manner, and her life is despaired of. He was arrested.

Speaker O'Connor left his son William the watch, chain and diamond pin presented him by the Legislature. He also willed $500 to each of his three sons, the remainder of his estate to his wife. The executors are Mrs. O'Connor, the son William and B. J. Ford.

The body of William Nolte of Canal street, Newark, who has been missing for some weeks past, was found recently in Newark Bay, near the Singer machine works. A rope was tied around his neck and his face was eaten away as if by muskrats or dogs. It is believed that he committed suicide.

A number of Chinamen have taken a contract to disinter the bodies of their countrymen buried in the Chinese cemetery at Belleville, for removal to China. On Friday five bodies were removed and placed in separate bags, and these were placed in a box for shipment to China, where they will be given to the relatives of the deceased men.

The forty-one life-saving stations along the New Jersey coast, manned by 281 patrolmen and forty keepers or captains, will open on September 1, and continue open until May 1, 1884. At Deal Beach a handsome new station has been erected on the site of the old one. It is a large and commodious building, in architectural style of the Swiss cottages in the vicinity. The new station is the gift of Mrs. Knapp, a wealthy summer resident of Deal Beach.

The bones of human beings found while digging an excavation in Clinton street, Paterson, have been found to be those of a number of victims of the cholera epidemic of 1832, who were buried there at that time. The place where the bones were found was once a part of the farm of Gartabrant Von Houten, one of the early settlers, and his heirs gave permission for the interment of the cholera victims' bodies on the farm.

The Local Paper.

"A newspaper is like a church; it wants fostering; then it can reflect credit on its location. Take your home paper. It gives you more news of immediate interest than New York or other papers; it talks for you when other localities belie you; it stands up for your rights; you always have a champion in your home paper, and those who stand up for you should certainly be well sustained. Your interests are kindred and equal, and you must rise or fall together. Therefore, it is to your interest to support your home paper; and not grudgingly, but in a liberal spirit; as a pleasure, not as a disagreeable duty; but as an investment that will amply pay the expenditure."—Exchange.

A New Railroad.

It is stated that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is making a survey for a line of railroad starting at Absecon and running through Leed's Point; thence across the Mullica river near its mouth, to Tuckerton, and thence up the west shore of Barnegat Bay to a point nearly midway between West Creek and Manahawkin, crossing the bay (at Cedar Point) to the beach in the neighborhood of the old "Mansion of Health" property, at which it is proposed to build a "Y" in order to run the road both up the beach as far as Barnegat Inlet and down as far as Beach Haven. It is thought that the road will be built and in operation by June 1st, 1884.

A Comfortable Shirt.

The flannel shirt is the most comfortable and sensible Summer garment that has been lately coming into use, especially among young men out for a day's sport or a week of camp life. It allows the easy play of every muscle, and when made of fine flannel, nicely made and fitted, is not only more sensible, but more becoming in appearance than that abominable stiff starched linen garment, with cuffs and collar to match, in which fashion has so long decreed that every well dressed man should attire himself. Luckily for the happiness of men the law of comfort is governing the fashions more and more every year, and ever man who puts pleasure first, when out for a days' sport, dresses in flannel, and upon returning home, wishes that Mrs. Grundy would tolerate flannel over garments upon the streets or in the house as well as out in the woods. And not only are our young men out for sport wearing flannel, but many of our farmers have discovered that it is the most comfortable material they can wear. It is warm in Winter, and as it absorbs perspiration doesn't give the cold clammy sensation that other materials do on a hot Summer day.

The State Fair.

Extensive preparations are going forward for the annual State Fair at Waverly. Hon. Abram S. Hewitt has been engaged to deliver the address. President Clark says that arrangements are going forward satisfactorily, and that everything betokens a highly successful exhibition. During the past year considerable improvements have been made to the buildings and to the grounds, and the comfort of those who attend is to be looked after so far as possible.

An Alleged Gigantic Project.

An engineer corps at work near Delaware Water Gap is said to be making a preliminary survey for a proper line to carry water from Broadhead creek, at the Delaware Water Gap, to Philadelphia, a distance, by the route contemplated, of ninety miles. The fall will be one foot per mile. The estimated cost of the work was not stated, but it will run into millions. An additional water supply for Philadelphia has become an imperative necessity. The Schuylkill and Delaware rivers, from which the water for that city is now taken, have become so impure on account of factories and the sewage of large towns above the source of supply that the water is now no longer satisfactory, though it ranks above the average in the list of cities. A part of the plan is to build storage reservoirs along the route of the contemplated line, and one will probably be located in Tinicum creek, nearly opposite Frenchtown, in this State.

Old Coins Discovered.

The old Budd homestead, at Chatham, was burned down recently. It was built before the Revolution, and had been the residence of Dr. John Budd, John Budd, Jr., his son, and Frank Budd, the father of the present owner. Old Dr. John Budd was known to be a collector of coins, but after his death the most valuable of his coins could not be found and it was supposed that they had been stolen. While excavating the ruins Mr. Michael F. Ryan, a contractor of Chatham, found an old iron box, in which was a heap of very rare and old coins. Among them was an Irish copper penny of the years 1760. Upon the obverse side was the profile of George III and upon the reverse the harp of Erin. Another copper coin was so much worn that the inscription could not be read. The stamp upon the face represents a yoke of cattle attached to a plough, and the reverse has a man threshing with a flail. Upon this side the words "No work, no bread," may be deciphered.

Experience With a Cyclone.

Mr. Williams, who lives across the Zumbre on the rise beyond the Cole Mill, was out when the cyclone first reared its front in the south-west and saw it coming. To a little boy who was with him but whose name he does not know, he said: "That's a cyclone, sonny. You come into the hazel brush with me. Catch on to the roots and hang on for dear life." He had never heard the word or knew nothing of its purport, and instead of obeying instructions sought refuge in a hen-coop near by. The man watched the three clouds join, saw the work of destruction commence in the south-west, and then ran into the hazel copse. He found a fence between him and the storm, lay down face to the earth and with the crown of his head against a fence post, and grasped the hazel brush near the roots with both hands. He kept his senses throughout the storm, but with difficulty. The gust toyed with him as if he were a whiplash, beating him up and down against the ground and through the bushes—but still he clung as for his life. There was a little lull, and then, as he expressed it, "the dern thing commenced its monkey work in earnest." A lot of boards from some far-off out house were blown on him. Then his body was torn from the earth and his hold broken, while he and the boards were driven 60 yards into the copse. A sort of shelter seems to have been there afforded, as he escaped without serious injury, though his abraided face and swollen hands attested the truth of his story of the struggle. When the storm had passed sufficiently to allow of walking he started in search of the boy. After a long search he found him and his hen coop fully 1,000 feet away and on the other side of an intervening ravine. The poor boy was demented and reason had not yet returned. As to the man who first found him, he says to all, "Go way, go way; you're a sly coon."

A sweet girl graduate wrote an essay on farm life, and gave a beautiful description of the manner in which the milk was extracted from the bosom of the cow.

A teacher said to a little girl in school, "If a naughty girl should hurt you, like a good girl you would forgive her, would you not?" "O, yes marm," she responded, "if I couldn't catch her."

"Aw, I have such a dwedful cawld in my head," remarked an Ivy street dude, as he stroked the tender tip of his nose yesterday. "Better that than nothing," was the witty but cruel response of a Peach street maiden who heard him.

The latest story of Boston is that two old ladies of that city, devoted friends, became spiritualists. One of them took sick and died and the other finally established communication with her, and inquired how she liked the spirit world. "Well," she replied, "it is very beautiful, very interesting, very instructing, but—it is not Boston!"

The Post Office Department has selected as the color for the new four-cent or double-rate stamp a shade of green somewhat darker than that in which the present three-cent stamp is printed. As the three-cent stamp will be retired from circulation, no errors are likely to arise from the similarity of color. The new stamp bears a profile likeness of Andrew Jackson and is quite handsome in design. The distribution to postmasters of the new two-cent stamps will begin on Sept. 1, and it is believed that everything will be in readiness for the change of letter postage on Oct. 1.

A boy seven or eight years old was passing along Elizabeth street yesterday with a dime in his fingers, when another boy accosted him with:

"What ye goin' to buy?"

"Camphor."

"What for?"

"To keep the moths away."

"Say," said the second boy, as he came nearer, "I'll tell you what I'll do. If you'll spend five cents o' that for candy, I'll lend you my dog all one day to hunt down the moths, and if he don't catch 'em all, I'll lend you the bossest rat trap in this city. You can just as well save five cents as not."

The Printers' Circular makes the following just comment upon the subject of clean newspapers: "There is a growing feeling in healthy communities against journals that make it their special object to minister to a perverted taste, by seeking out and serving up in a seductive form disgusting and licentious revelation. There is good reason to believe that the clean newspaper is more highly prized to-day than four or five years ago. In praise of the decent newspaper, it may be said that where it has a place in the family, and has been read for years by young and old, it has developed such a healthy tone and such a discriminating taste that the life-nature of the slums has no admirers."

POETRY.

A SOLDIER'S LAST SLEEP.

BY AN UNKNOWN INMATE OF AN ARMY HOSPITAL.

I lay me down to sleep,
With little thought or care
Whether my waking finds
Me here or—there.

A bowing, burdened head
That only asks to rest
Unquestioning, upon
A Saviour's breast.

My good right hand forgets
Her cunning now—
To march the weary march
I know not how.

I am not eager, bold,
Nor strong:—all that is past, I
I'm ready—not to do
At last—at last.

My half day's work is done;
And this is all my part;
I give a patient God
My patient heart.

And grasp His banner still,
Tho' all its blue be dim;
These stripes no less than stars,
Lead up to Him.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A COFFIN BOAT.

The other night Major Griddlewood, who long ago won his spurs as an efficient revenue officer, related the following story:

At one time we had a great deal of trouble with illicit distillers in Arkansas. There was one neighborhood especially where it seemed impossible to discover the outlaws. This community was away up on White river. Officer after officer had been sent up, and quite a number of them are there yet, although the department did not receive notification that they intended to leave the service. One day the news came in that one of our best men had just been killed at Dripping Springs, by which name the dangerous neighborhood was known. I was sent for by the marshal, who said:

"Major, you have had considerable success in hunting for distillers. Now we want you to find those fellows and bring them to justice. As you know, none of our men have been able to find them, and—"

"They've been found a trifle too often," I suggested.

"That's a fact," the marshal agreed, "but not by the right man. Now I want you to take as many soldiers as you want and go to the place and break up the business."

I reflected for a moment and replied: "I think our mistake has been in taking too many men. It is almost impossible for a party of men to find a wildcat distillery. Their approach is soon heralded and disaster is sure to follow. I will go alone and discover the nest. Then I can return and capture the entire outfit."

"Rather hazardous," the marshal said, thoughtfully scratching his head.

"Not so dangerous as the course hitherto adopted."

"All right; use your own judgment."

The next day I started on my perilous expedition. I went horseback, and my progress was very slow. When at last I reached the place I found a beautiful, rich country, with hills and little valleys luxuriantly carpeted with grass. I could see no signs of lawlessness, but on the other hand I was kindly treated. I stopped at the house of a man named Anderson, a well-to-do fellow, with some education and a bright-eyed daughter, who seemed to be devoted to her father. I saw at once that Anderson was an honest man, and when I learned that he had been in the army I felt secure under his roof. Still I did not care to tell him my real business, but in answer to a question stated that I was looking for land in a leisurely sort of way, having just been discharged from the regular army, and especially desiring a rest from that dangerous activity which all army officers incurred.

"Well, sir, you are welcome at my house, and I hope you'll find your stay pleasant. My daughter, who can row a boat to perfection, will cheerfully contribute to your enjoyment."

"I understand," looking at him, "that several government officers have been killed by illicit distillers in this neighborhood."

"Yes," he replied, "shamefully murdered. Well, I won't say murdered, for the distillers no doubt consider it self-defense. Up in the hills here, somewhere, there is a large distillery, but it will be a long time, I think, before the government breaks it up. It is almost impossible to conduct a party of men through the hills, and it is almost certain death, for the distillers can see almost every turn. My advice would be to watch for the whisky that's sent away, capture the men handling it and compel them to show the exact location of the distillery."

Several days passed and still I made no progress. I was not regarded in that light of suspicion which I thought would characterize my appearance among the people, and I was soon convinced that the farmers around were not in sympathy with the distillers. Finally I told Anderson my business.

"Well," he said, "if I can do anything for you I'll do it cheerfully, but let me advise you not to go into the hills. Watch the river, as that is the only way they can possibly ship the stuff. I am going up the river to-day after some walnut lumber and if you will accompany me we may make a discovery. As you no doubt noticed, I make a great many coffins. Not for government officials," he added with a smile, "but am supplying cheap coffins for the New Orleans market. During an epidemic it is almost impossible to get coffins to the city fast enough, and at such times I employ quite a number of men. Come and I'll show you my place of business."

The shop stood near the river bank. Several workmen were employed in dressing walnut lumber. Coffins were stacked up all around, and a flatboat was being loaded with the deathly furniture. I did not go up the river with Anderson, but took a boat ride with his daughter. She was not devoid of charm, and she chatted gayly as she rowed.

"I want pa to leave this place," she said. "Mother pined away and died from sheer loneliness, and if I were not so light-hearted I think I should go that way, too"

"Do you ever see any of the illicit distillers?" I asked.

"I expect I see them, but I don't know them, of course. They are terrible when they get mad, but as long as they are not disturbed you wouldn't know they were in the neighborhood. When we moved here they regarded pa with lingering suspicion, but finally, satisfied that he was in no way connected with the government, they dismissed their apprehensions and have ever since treated him with the utmost courtesy. Pa is making money out of the coffin business, but it is such a grim trade that I cannot half enjoy any financial benefit that we derive from it. Say, you're hunting for the wild cats, ain't you?"

"Hush, don't talk so loud."

"Nobody can hear us, but you are, ain't you?"

"Suppose I were, do you think I would tell any one?"

"I heard you tell father, but it's all right. I won't say anything about it. I haven't any friends among the wild cats, and for my part I wouldn't care if they were all in prison."

"I remained several days longer, and then decided to run to the city, report unfavorably, adopt other measures, and again take up the enterprise. Anderson advised me to sell the horse and go down with a flatboat load of coffins. I did not like the idea, but reflecting that it would be safer I disposed of my horse and was soon ready for the voyage.

I bade my friends an affectionate farewell and soon stood on a coffin big enough for the Cardiff giant, and waved my handkerchief at Sophia Anderson as the boat rounded the bend. We had started early, and by the time the shadows began to lengthen we were a long distance from Dripping Spring. It seemed to me that the men on the boat watched my curiously, for every time I walked around it appeared that one of them followed me. My suspicions increased as evening came on, and when I saw the men engaged in a whispered conversation, I was convinced that violence was meditated.

Happening to notice a coffin on which several others were piled, I saw something dripping from it. Just then I looked up and saw a gun leveled at me.

In another instant a bullet whizzed close to my head, so close that I fell backward into the water. I did not lose my presence of mind and kept myself under water as long as possible.

When I arose to the surface, several other shots were fired, and sinking again I remained under water until I reached the shore, which fortunately was not far away, when I arose under a thick clump of willows.

Through the gathering darkness I could dimly see the men, and could hear the splashing of an oar which I knew was manipulated to keep the boat from floating down.

"I reckon he's all right," said one of the men.

"I know he is," a gruff voice replied, "for I drawed a bead on his head, and a man what kin hit a haffer dollar sixty yards ain't no slouch of a shooter, lemme tell yer. Bet he's got a bullet through the brain of he's got any."

"I rather bet on the bullet than the brain," the first speaker rejoined.

"We've got to be certain about these things," said a man who seemed to be in authority. "You know what Anderson said. Get a boat thar Jack, and you and Tom paddle out thar awhile. Go out thar to them willows."

The boat was lowered and the splashing of oars came nearer and nearer. My heart beat violently. Great God, the moon came out and shown down full on my face.

I eased myself down until only the tip of my nose was above water. "Thank heaven," I breathed, as a cloud obscured the moon just as the boat brushed past the willows.

They struck under with their oars, actually struck me once, and just as I was about to seize the boat and take my chances of turning it over and escaping, one of them said:

"He's all right, I tell you. Think I can't hit a man's head? Shove her off," and I breathed a prayer as the dip of the oars grew fainter.

I remained in this uncomfortable position about a half hour longer, then drew myself out and was soon traveling through the woods.

After a terrible journey of hunger and fatigue I reached Little Rock and made my report.

Several days afterwards I was again en route for Dripping Spring, this time with a strong posse of men. Touching White river near the place where I had fallen overboard, we dismounted to rest. We had not been there very long until we saw the coffin boat returning. I secreted myself and ordered my men to compel the boat to land and to bring the men to our resting place, instructing them as to a form of interrogation.

When hailed they readily complied and approached the bank. They did not seem to like so much attention, for they did not move up the bank with any great degree of alacrity.

"Do you know," said one of my men, "what became of a United States official named Griddlewood, who came up here some time ago?"

"No, sir," replied the captain of the coffin boat, "but I heared that he had bought a piece of land over the mountains and opened a farm."

"Did you ever meet him?"

"Believe I did meet him once at Mr. Anderson's house. 'Peered to me like he was sorter in love with an Anderson gal."

"Don't suppose that I could find him, do you?"

"Mout find him if you wuster go over the hills."

"That's unnecessary," I remarked, stepping from behind a tree and confronting the villians. They threw up their hands and prayed that their lives might be spared.

We did not intend to give them the least chance of escape and securely pinioning their hands we took them down to the boat, where, after gaining all possible information, I left them under a strong guard.

We were not long in gaining the neighborhood of Anderson's residence. It was a late hour at night, and we surrounded the house without alarming anyone. I instructed one of my officers to call Anderson, and again I secreted myself.

"Halloa!"

"All right," came from within the house, and pretty soon Anderson appeared.

"Mr. Anderson, I believe," said the officer.

"Yes, sir, won't you come in?"

"No, hardly got the time. I've come to this neighborhood in search of Major Griddlewood. Are you acquainted with him?"

"Oh, yes, should say I am, for he and my daughter are to be married soon. I'll show her to you. Here, Soph," and the girl came out. "Here is a gentleman who is looking for your intended husband."

"Good-evening, sir. Looking for the major, eh? How I wish I could see him."

"Here I am, I said emerging from my hiding place and confronting my "intended" and her father. Anderson actually fell on the ground, and his daughter uttered a shriek that made the woods ring. They were soon made prisoners and taken to the boat. Next day the distillery was easily found and destroyed. The coffins were found to be lined with tin, and although ominous looking casks, were not bad as vessels of shipment.

The prisoners were tried and punished by the full extent of the law, and ever since then the Dripping Spring neighborhood has been one of the most orderly and law-abiding communities in the State.

ATTEND THE FAIR.

The term "Fair" may not always be the appropriate one for the Autumn shows. Exhibition is a better word, but far less frequently used. Not only should the farmer go to the fair, but he ought to take his family with him. The going, simply, is not enough. All members of the household should make it a point to take something to exhibit. One of the boys may take a fine colt, and if it his own, there will be all the more pride in obtaining the prize. Another son may have a yoke of steers that he has trained for the exhibition. As for the girls, there are a thousand different things that can be made with the needle that will grace the walls of the "women's pavillion," or the rooms of the household department. Even so common a thing as bread may be baked with special care, and will attract much attention.—Then there are the garden vegetables, potatoes, a new kind, perhaps—pumpkins, squashes, etc., and the products of the farm and orchard. It is not wise to leave all these things at home, and then criticise the exhibition because you can say: "We have better things at home." To go and take things to the fair is not enough. The exhibition should be made a school at which all the exhibitors and visitors make a study of the implements, cattle, poultry, fruit, grain, etc., that are there. A farmer may owe his success in growing some crop to the knowledge gained at a county fair. The farmer that has a real pride in the farm will take great interest in the local fair, and will exhibit the best products of farm life in the boys and girls, who are interested exhibitors at the fairs. The day at the fair should be a social one, every one making it a point to meet many neighbors and others with a pleasant word. It is a place for asking and answering questions, and the person who goes through the exhibition without opening his mouth is certainly not getting all that is within his reach. It is our advice that all go to the fair—all take something to show and be sure and find out as much as possible about all the various exhibits that are made by others. In this way the day at the fair will be a a most profitable one. It may be that a premium will not be taken by every one, but the prize money is only a small part of the value that an exhibitor may receive from a fair, that has been used as a means for a better understanding of the products of the farm, garden and household.

AN EAST INDIA DINNER.

One of the most interesting and enjoyable events of the season and decidedly the most novel, was a dinner given by Mrs. Anandibai Joshee at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Carpenter, at Roselle, N. J., on Friday evening, Aug. 24th. The guests numbered eighteen and included many of Mrs. Joshee's best friends. The following is the menu of the repast, prepared and served by the little lady herself after the custom of her own country.

Decidedly foreign though each variety may seem every morsel was delicious and palatable. The ladies were dressed in India costumes and wore the loose and graceful saree which contrasted beautifully in its variegated colors and borders with the rest of the apparel. All furniture was removed from the dining room and for them was substituted smooth finished boards, placed around the room on the floor and close to the wall. The floor was of ash and of walnut and most beautifully and artistically decorated. The space to the immediate front of the boards was divided into eighteen two-feet squares, and each of these was out-lined with red powder over which was thrown a lace-work of white powder. In addition to this, the corners and borders of each square were ornamented with many pretty designs. The centre of the floor was ornamented with stars and crescents and many other geometrical lines and figures—all this mosaic and tessellated picturing being done by the Lady from the Levant. The room was illuminated by a very large lamp which stood in the middle of the floor. The food to each person was served on a large platter made of leaves, which was placed in the centre of the square. When all was ready for the repast, each assigned to his or her place, on the boards, and Mrs. Joshee asked a blessing in her husband's vernacular as follows: "Om, Instul Brahmarpumastoo."—(God gracious accept my prayer. Thou who art all pervading and eternal. Amen.) The guests then assumed a reclining position, by sitting on their feet or resting on one knee. No knives, forks or spoons were used, except one of the last for the coffee. For the time being those around this festive board forgot their Caucasian habits and thought they had returned to the days of their early childhood when "first principles held sway." After dinner the guests retired to the parlor and sat on white mats 3x6 feet and raised from the floor to the height of three inches, the backs being supported by feather-stools. The positions and genuflections were very comfortable for the manner and no stiff joint feeling was experienced until we rose to go home. The next course in our evening meal was one of flowers, Mrs. Joshee presenting each of us with a boquet. On receipt of this, each person said "Mehel bani hwe"—(thank you). Then our "petite dame" annointed each right hand with a fragrant oil named "Catuck attar." This she applied from a small phial and administered it with her forefinger. The company were next sprinkled with Rose water from a beautiful little bottle used solely on these occasions. The rest of the evening was spent in every social and pleasant possible manner, after which the guests departed with a feeling that they had attended one of those performances rarely duplicated in America. In the Fall Mrs. Joshee enters the Philadelphia Medical College where she will study for six years. Her knowledge thus gained she will carry with her to India and use it in alleviating the untold agonies of those of her own sex who die off like so many sheep for the want of medical assistance. The lady is only nineteen years of age and was married ten years ago; is extremely intelligent, polished and agreeable—besides speaking, among many other languages, our English as fluently as a native born.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

SOMETHING MUST BE DONE.

Something must be done by the authorities of this city to arrest the progress of the incendiary. For years past incendiary fires have occurred within our city limits directly under the noses of our police force, and no conviction of arrested parties has ever resulted. The experience of the past week, and especially that of Sunday morning last, where valuable property situated in the very heart of the town, was endangered by the wilful act of an incendiary in setting fire to the stables of Mr. Chas. Sebring, calls for some decided action on the part of the city authorities to offer a sufficient reward for the arrest and conviction of the guilty parties. If the Board of Fire Commissioners or the Common Council have not the means at their command to offer a suitable reward then let the citizens take the matter in hand and call a public meeting for discussion of this important matter. Money will make the scoundrel who done the mean work confess as to who are his accomplices. It is time some action was taken in this matter by our citizens. Let there be a public mass meeting called.

SOUND POLICY.

It is a sound principle of government, inseparable from the vitality of free institutions, and one which ought to be rigidly exacted by the popular will, that all money not required to meet needed public expenses and obligations, honestly based, should remain in the pockets of the tax-payers.

Such is the financial policy of the Democratic party, and truth warrants the assertion, that had it been enforced throughout the past fifteen years, millions of dollars uselessly and corruptly abstracted from the National Treasury would now be counted by honest citizens as a part of their rightful personal property.

A different policy has prevailed and the cost is enormous.

The Democratic party advocates strict fidelity to plighted faith, and liberal appropriations for all purposes essential to national safety and the welfare of the people, and for those ends favors the raising of ample revenue by practical business and equitable means, but not a particle of surplus to tempt profligate expenditures and feed the insatiate greed of political cormorants.

There stands the party of Democracy. It is on the side of the People.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

There is nothing more closely blended with the future well being of society, and the enduring welfare of all classes of people, than the Public Schools of our country.

They are the safeguard of free institutions, worthy of the most liberal encouragement.

Give the children of the United States practical schooling and you build a protecting wall around the Republic which no human power can overthrow.

Freedom and intelligence are identical.

So are their opposites despotism and ignorance.

The Public School is the bright star of national hope, and its liberal support high loyal duty. Taxes paid for free public education form the very best investment a people can make. A fruitful harvest will certainly follow in due season.

Give, we repeat, to every child, irrespective of nativity, condition or color, the knowledge public schools are capable of imparting, and as sure as the sun rises in the East, there will grow a might of intelligence throughout this broad-armed land that will not only preserve virtue, liberty and independence here, but cast an influence abroad strong enough to break into fragments the iron fetters of ignorance and vice everywhere.

To advocate free public instruction is but echoing the pleading voices of Patriotism, Peace and Prosperity.

Heaven bless the glorious cause of Education!

CAPITAL AND LABOR.

Capital is accumulated wealth and wealth is the product of practical labor.

That fact can neither be argued away nor beaten down.

Without manual labor this world would be an uncivilized wilderness.

Labor is the motive power of progress and prosperity, the artificer of national greatness, the coiner of personal riches.

There is no natural hostility between capital and labor, and none would exist did justice sway human thought and action.

Justice is the needed virtue.

It is more precious than rubies.

To live and let live illustrates its character.

Capital combined creates monopoly and monopoly enthrones selfishness above right.

Thence comes the trouble.

Instead of saying to labor—we will give you just and liberal recompense, and allow you an equal opportunity to thrive and enjoy thrift, the scowling dictum of monopoly is—accept the lowest possible wages we offer and perform the largest amount of toil we demand, or suffer and starve, but, regardless of all self-considerations, guarantee to us portly profits and princely fare.

There arises antagonism and it is far from being imaginary.

The battle must be fought.

The world is full of canting hypocrisy and not a small portion of it clusters around the modern cry of "protection to labor."

Labor requires nothing more and should be made secure in naught less than fair remuneration, perfect equity and dignified freedom.

The handle of a jug is on one side.

Honest protection safely lifts all sides.

Dr. A. W. Bullock, a druggist of Allegany, N. Y., put up five powders for a German patient, one Zister, some time since, the latter supposing he was being furnished with quinine, for which he had asked. He took one of the powders on retiring for the night and was found dead in bed the next morning. Dr. Bullock, on being informed of his fatal error, committed suicide by taking a dose of the same poison.

OUR NEXT GOVERNOR.

As we go to press we receive the following despatch:

Special despatch to THE CONSTITUTIONALIST

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 13th, 1883.—Hon. Leon Abbett, of Hudson County, nominated on second ballot.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Westfield Public Library have had a fine sign put up in front of their rooms. It is done in Welch Bros. best style.

Henry J. Holmes, Jr., has purchased the lot on Elm street, adjoining S. E. Young's carriage factory. He intends improving the same.

The Westfield Base Ball Association will hold their next meeting on Monday evening, 17th inst, at the residence of President Leveridge.

The assessor has completed his assessment list. It will be in the hands of Collector Connoly who will have the tax bills ready for delivery by Oct. 1st.

Owing to the increase in the number of scholars in School Dist. No. 10, the Trustees have been compelled to purchase more seats to accommodate the children.

The Republican primary is called for Friday evening, Sept. 14th, for the purpose of electing delegates to the Republican Gubernatorial Convention to be held next week.

J. Henry Townley has commenced the erection of a new dwelling house on Elm street on the lot he recently bought of C. B. Lawson, of Brooklyn. John N. Wilcox has the contract for the carpenter work.

At the Democratic primary held on Tuesday evening, Stephen S. Mapes was chosen as delegate to the Gubernatorial convention and John M. C. Marsh alternate. Addison S. Clark was elected as member of the County Executive Com.

The death of Mrs. Cornelia M. Ross, widow of the late Gideon Ross, Esq., occurred on Thursday, 6th inst, from apoplexy. The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon at 2 p. m. Interment in Fairview cemetery. The deceased was one one of our oldest inhabitants, aged 91 years.

The tax rate in School Dist. No. 10 will be 4½ cents on the $100 more than last year, owing to the increase in the amount of special school monies voted at the last annual school meeting in March last. The amount of the last bond on the school house is in this year's levy and becomes due next July.

The committee on street improvements have had delivered and put upon our main street the fifty car loads of crushed stone recently purchased by private subscriptions. The improvement extends from Kinch's corner to Darsh's bakery on Broad street, and on Elm street from Broad to depot. We understand that the Westfield avenue residents have started a subscription to improve their street in the same manner. Let the good work go on. There is nothing like good roads to improve the value of real estate in our town.

COMMUNICATED.

A Card.

The Ladies of the Children's Home wish to say to their friends and the public that their new building has been entirely paid for, with the exception of one small bill, which waits for the mechanic to fulfil his entrust. The detailed statement of the Building Committee will soon be published. Meantime on our return from our summer visit, we find ourselves for the first time in our experience as we begin our active work for the winter with an empty treasury. Our treasurer was away for two months and when these bill were paid, and the books balanced it was found that our bank account had been overdrawn to the amount of $80. As we have no permanent funds we depend wholly on our memberships and donations. We feel sure that our friends will see the need of an immediate response. The payment of $10 constitutes a sustaining member. Contributions may be sent to the President, Mrs. Henry Kimball; the Treasurer, Mrs. L. W. Serrell, or to any of the officers of the Home.

For the ladies of the Home,
N. E. KIMBALL,
Sept. 12, 1883. President.

A Card of Thanks.

Mr. Potter wishes to extend his thanks through these columns to the citizens who so kindly assisted in removing the furniture from his burning dwelling, and who did the work with such extreme care as to leave the rescued property in almost perfect order; to his neighbors, also, who generously offered shelter to his family and storage for his goods; and, finally, to the members of the Fire Department, whose promptness and skill saved his house from destruction.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—My mother requests me to express her thanks through your columns, to the members of the Plainfield Fire Department, for their due and timely assistance rendered at the fire of her barn. Also her high appreciation of the kind neighbors whose aid and sympathy was so liberally bestowed.

Respectfully, JOHN ULRICH.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

EDSALL'S!

SEPTEMBER 13th, 1883.

We are making ample preparations for the

Fall and Winter Trade

and the most important article in demand just now seems to be

Merino Underwear!

and though the season is about a month ahead of last year, yet we are prepared this early to meet the demand for these goods—having bought ahead of our wants. The Ladies' Merino Vest we sell this season for 50 cents is the best we have ever sold at that price. There is a special number of which we shall sell equally as low in proportion. The Men's Merino

Finer Wool

Shirts and Drawers,

we sell this year at 50 cents, is as good as is often sold for 65 cents. We think we have made a "BIG STRIKE" in securing this line of goods. Don't buy your Merino goods in either Ladies, Gent's or children's until you have examined our new stock. You will certainly make a mistake if you do. We show a better line of this season than usual and think we shall be able to increase our sales largely in this Department. You will do well to look at them. All of our departments will be well supplied with Seasonable Goods, and we are determined to make prices on them that will command a ready sale.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - - City Editor.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER IN UNION COUNTY.

Kill all worthless dogs.

Coal will now advance in price.

No more excursions this season.

Now look after the luscious grapes.

And now Raritan wants a Music Hall.

Now look out for the equinoctial storm.

What are you going to take to the Fair?

Drat the half frozen fly. He is a nuisance.

The Common Council meets next Tuesday evening.

The pesky mosquito must go—until next Summer.

The straw hat—like the Republican party—must go.

Boehm Bros. announce something new in another column.

A mosquito has been a rarity in Plainfield the past summer.

Because Adam saw the first snake was whiskey the cause of it?

Last Sunday night frost spoiled the buckwheat cake crop in this section.

Next week we shall publish the list of entries for speed trials at our coming Fair.

Plainfield Democrats sent a respectable delegation to the Gubernatorial Convention.

Soon we will experience the sight of "political clubs" marching through the streets.

Plainfield contains five hundred more dogs than it ought to since last Saturday.

The very dusty roads received a "set back" last Saturday night by the welcome rain storm.

Miss E. Ginn has been added to the corps of teachers of the North Plainfield Public School.

Now is the time to have your business cards printed for distribution at the approaching Fair.

"Shoot the hat" is now in order. We wish some one would give us a new one before shooting ours.

Tight pants must go. The word has come to that effect from Europe. What will become of the dude?

Any one having books to be kept or copying to be done should see advertisement in another column.

How time passes. Just think of it. A few short weeks ago us poor mortals wanted cool weather, now we have got it.

To-morrow evening at the Hotel Netherwood, will be given another benefit entertainment and hop to which all are invited.

Ground was staked out on Tuesday last for the erection of a handsome new residence on Grove street, for Mr. A. Darby.

The "oldest inhabitant" has just informed us that the past summer has been the "funliest" one he has ever experienced.

Mr. Halstead Compton has the thanks of The Constitutionalist employees for the gift of some of his excellent musk melons.

Predictions are made that this year we will have an early winter. Predictions, like signs in seasons of a drouth, sometimes fail.

The North Plainfield Public School opened for the Fall term under most favorable auspices, over 50 new scholars being added to the roll.

A year ago the 23d of this month we had a big freshet and the Grove street bridge swept away. The bridge has not yet been rebuilt as it should be.

Mr. Benj. Connett, on Tuesday last purchased the house and lot on Somerset street, North Plainfield, belonging to Albert and Mary Vielbig, for $2,000.

Episcopal services will be held next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock in the Netherwood Union Chapel, the Rev. Dr. H. H. Cole of Elizabeth officiating.

It lays with the farmers of Union and Middlesex Counties, whether our next Fair will prove a success in the display of agricultural products and implements.

Three thousand five hundred dollars will be offered as speed premiums at the coming Fair of the Union and Middlesex Counties' Fair near this city, which commences Sept 24th.

Any person who knows that a dog owned by him, or in his possession, which was bitten by the mad dog last Saturday, and has not killed such dog, is guilty of a wilful misdemeanor.

Those who believe that advertising is conducive to their success in business should now bear in mind that The Constitutionalist is the best advertising medium in Union County.

Now is the time you will want your Fall Clothing cleaned up and repaired.—A. Titsworth, No. 41 West Front street, opposite the site of the proposed Opera House, will do it for you in good style.

Mrs. Fine, milliner, makes her Fall announcement in this issue. Her many friends and patrons will find her comfortably located in her new quarters on Front street, opposite the First Baptist church.

Is it not about time that a sufficient reward is offered to induce one scoundrel to "peach" on another in reference to the recent and past incendiary fires. Money will open the mouth of criminals sometimes.

Street Commissioner Meeker gave Park avenue a good scraping after Saturday night's rain. The streets are well looked after by that official and money appropriated for their repairs carefully expended.

Mrs. M. L. Adams Milliner, having just returned from her Summer vacation, announces that she has on hand all the latest styles and new Fall goods, which she desires to call the attention of her patrons to.

The guests and friends of the Netherwood Hotel will be treated to an entertainment and hop on Saturday evening. Prof. Williams, the well-known character impersonator, will furnish the former. The train that leaves this city at 8.42 arrives in time. All invited to be present.

This kind of weather suggests fall overcoats and winter suits, while the advertisement of George Watson & Co., in another column suggests the place to purchase such. Durability of material, style of garment and cut, with perfect fit, are assured at No's 795 & 813 Broad street, Newark.

The old and well-known hostelry, "Dog Tavern," whose hospitalities are presided over by Mr. Benj. Connett, at Aldene, two and a half miles from this city, on the road leading to Rahway, has recently been thoroughly renovated and remodelled. "Uncle Ben" as he is familiarly known, always gives the best of cheer to all who stop at the "Dog Tavern." is a staunch Democrat and don't care who knows it.

We are informed by Freeholders from both Union and Somerset counties that the cause of delay in re-building the Grove street bridge, is in consequence of the failure of iron mills to turn out the iron work necessary, as contracted for. This failure is stated to be in consequence of scarcity of ore at the mills. It is expected, however, that work will be commenced on the bridge within a few days, and the structure rapidly pushed to completion.

See advertisement of Public Sale at Laing's Hall. The articles are all first-class and must be sold to the lowest bidder.

Lake fishing is becoming more popular every year among the New York people, and it is predicted that in less than five years the lakes in Northern Jersey will be valuable property. Spring water lakes that have been stocked for the past three years are valuable at the present time.

Sol Sams' Modern Minstrels performed to a fair house in Vandeventer Hall Wednesday evening last. During the day, a street parade was given by the company and some excellent music rendered. The success with which the management met on Wednesday evening induced him to announce that the Company will return again in October.

Lilienstern is still the leader in the clothing line. He has the largest stock of clothing in Plainfield and he is selling at hard pan prices. It will pay you to see his stock, and we are satisfied that those who give him a call will not go out without purchasing; so if in need of clothing or not call and see his stock and be convinced of the truth of our assertion.

Messrs. Wm. A. Pond & Co., have just published three Minuettos by Mr. Dorsey W. Hyde, of this city. They are written for four hands, and while particularly melodious are sufficiently easy to be readily mastered by those not especially advanced. In speaking of this young composer we hope to be pardoned the publishing of the following extract from a private criticism on his work by Mr. Charles L. Capen, the well-known authority; he says: "The work shows a good knowledge of counterpoint of which has been made a most melodious use. The forms are clear, the modulations pleasing and natural, and the composition, as a whole, pregnant with original ideas. The purity of the work, constitutes its principal charm."

Dissolved.

At a meeting of the Presbytery held in Elizabeth, on Monday, the resignation of Dr. Bliss from the Crescent Avenue Church, of this city, was acted upon, and the relation dissolved.

Autumnal Signs.

The sere and yellow leaf will soon notify us that autumn has returned, although the present summer has been remarkable for the bright, fresh appearance of the grass and all vegetation, owing to the abundance of rain. There has been nothing like a drouth during the entire season.

Ground Broken for the Opera House.

The contract for the construction of the Music Hall, was Wednesday evening awarded to Messrs. Manning & Melbourn of this city, and ground was broken the next day. It has been determined that the old homestead building shall be sold, and the Board of Directors has called for another payment of 25 per cent. on the capital stock subscribed.

A Mean Thief.

During the burning of Mrs. Ulrich's barn last Friday evening, a thief stole a valuable watch from the person of Mr. Louis Laine, a resident of this city, together with the chain to which it was attached. As the watch was an heir loom and gift from his dead father, Mr. Laine sadly feels its loss and offers a reward for its recovery. If the thief who took the article has any compunctions of conscience, he will return it to its owner.

Opened.

The Public Schools opened Monday with the usual ceremonies. Messrs. Mason W. Tyler and George H. Babcock occupied the platform of the High School Chapel, and addressed the assemblage. Miss Bulkley delivered an appropriate speech of some length.

The Fifth street Primary Department was opened by Judge Nathan Harper, who gave the little ones much good advice and many kind words of encouragement.

The Telephone and its Benefits.

The benefit of a telephone service in our city was well demonstrated last Saturday evening, when the first alarm that was given to the Fire Department of a fire occurring in the residence of Chas. A. Potter, Esq., on Seventh street, was over the wires from the burning house to the Central office, which speedily brought the fire companies to the scene to render the efficient service they did. It will be remembered, too, that the telephone service rendered to the Fire Department is gratuitous by the Telephone Company, thanks to Manager Ohl.

Republican Caucus.

The Republicans of the township of North Plainfield are requested to meet in the old school house on Harmony street, in the village of North Plainfield, on Friday evening, Sept. 14th, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of electing two delegates to attend the State Convention to be held at Trenton on Tuesday, Sept. 18th; and also five delegates to attend the County and Assembly Convention at Somerville, when the same shall be called, to nominate county officers and member of Assembly.

CHARLES PLACE, Chairman.

North Plainfield, Sept. 12th, 1883.

Killed by a Collision.

Last Saturday afternoon while several of our local horsemen were exercising their animals on the track of the Fair grounds, a valuable mare belonging to Mr. R. Elliott, of New Brooklyn, was instantly killed by a collision between it and a horse owned by Mr. Abe Nelson, of New Market. The horses were speeding around the track in different directions and the shafts of Mr. Nelson's sulky struck Mr. Elliott's horse in the chest, instantly killing it. Both drivers were thrown into the air by the shock of the collision, but neither party injured. Mr. Nelson was driving his horse and Mr. Elliott his.

Democratic Primaries.

The Democrats of North Plainfield held their primary meeting for the election of two delegates to attend the Gubernatorial Convention, in the old school building, on Friday evening last. John A. Thickstun was made chairman and Fred. Martin secretary of the meeting. Chas. Matthews and Adam Fritz were elected delegates. On motion it was resolved that the next primary meeting for election of delegates to County Convention be held in the old school house.

There was a large attendance at the Democratic primary meeting held in this city last Tuesday evening, to elect delegates to attend the Gubernatorial Convention. The primary was held in the rooms of the Democratic Association on Front street, and was presided over by Jas. E. Martine, Esq., President of the Association, with L. F. Wadsworth, as Secretary, R. M. Stover, Judge of Election and S. C. Davis and L. M. Stover, Inspectors. Only three nominations were made for delegates as follows: Nathan Harper, James S. Vosseller and James Clark, who were elected by the Secretary casting a single ballot. The following named were elected members of the County Executive Committee by the same method. 1st ward, Ed. P. Thorn; 2nd ward, Jas. S. Vosseller; 3rd ward, Wm. B. Maxson; 4th ward, W. L. Force. The delegates were instructed to fill any vacancy occurring among their number. Stirring addresses were made by Judge Nathan Harper and Jas. E. Martine, and the large and harmonious gathering adjourned without a single occurrence to mar the occasion.

A Runaway and Rescue.

Monday morning last, as the young son of Mr. Churchill, a guest at the Netherwood Hotel was driving up to that institution with a family horse and village cart, the animal attached became nervous at the noise occasioned by a passing stage, and turning around quickly upset the vehicle, throwing out the lad. The animal then ran through Belvidere avenue, with the overturned cart dragging behind him. Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, who was in the vicinity at the time, walking with his wife, observed the runaway approaching him, and springing into the roadway caught the animal by the bridle rein, effectually stopping its further progress. The horse was badly lacerated and bruised by the contact of the shafts on its sides, and the cart well broken up.

Results of Fish Culture.

About five years ago the "New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society," through the suggestion and co-operation of Fish Warden Percy C. Ohl, of Union county, liberated a number of young German carp in ponds and streams in Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties. At the time the fish were but fingerlings, and good reports were continually being received of their growth and prosperity up to last Monday, when the climax of the success of the venture was reached by Mr. Levi Darby, of Fanwood township, bringing to this office for information as to what species of "animile" he had captured, a six pound German carp. "Uncle Levi," as he is well known by that name, stated that his young son had seen this large fish endeavoring to make its way up a small stream, a tributary of one of the ponds stocked, and not knowing what it was, had killed it. It was afterward brought to this city by Mr. D. for identification as to its species, and exhibited to many curious spectators. The carp was of the "Leather Back" variety, and attains a growth averaging seventeen pounds weight. Thus have the efforts of the above named Society in their endeavors to stock our streams with food fish, been substantially rewarded.

Mad Dog.

Quite an excitement was created on our streets last Saturday by the appearance of a dog having every appearance of rabies. Attention was first attracted to the animal on Front street about half-past eleven o'clock in the morning, when it was seen to run into the back yard of Mrs. Fine's residence, opposite the First Baptist church, and seize a small and valued dog and dart again into the street with the dog in its mouth. It carried the little one in its jaws up Front street to near Somerset, where it dropped it and ran away. The small dog died a few moments after it was picked up from the street. Singular to relate no one seemed to think anything was wrong with the strange dog, which was a large beast of the New Foundland species or a cross between it and a setter. The next time attention was attracted to the dog was about ten minutes to one o'clock, when, in passing by the billiard parlors of Jas. H. Force, on Front street, the animal suddenly darted at a small dog lying on the door sill, and chasing it inside the building, bit and mangled its throat fearfully. The strange dog then ran out into the street, and the cry of "mad dog" was raised. He, however, eluded his pursuers for fully two hours, when he was finally killed on the corner of Fifth and New streets by Mr. E. P. Thorn, who, with others, had joined in pursuit of the rabid animal. Subsequently it was ascertained that the strange dog had bitten at least a dozen other dogs and cats while making his tour through this city and North Plainfield, and undoubtedly many more have been bitten by him of which information has not been gathered. The dog bitten in front of Mr. Force's was immediately killed, as well as those belonging to the following named persons: Chas. Cliffton, A. Sturtevant, John Paoli, Daniel Littell. In his passage through this city the rabid dog bit and killed several cats, but fortunately no human being was attacked by it, although there are recorded several instances of narrow escapes.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Plans for the Fall and Winter work are now being arranged and will be published soon.

The young men's meeting for prayer and song is always well attended and a good work is the out-come of it. The singing is under an experienced leader and is very interesting. Will young men reading this notice remember the meeting on Monday night? The topic will be "Opportunities Despised."

Next Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock the Board of Directors of the Ladies' Auxiliary will meet in the parlor of the Association to transact their general business. It is the earnest desire that every lady director be present if possible. This will be a very important meeting.

On Monday afternoon, Oct. 1st, will occur the first anniversary of the Ladies' Auxiliary. Reports of the year's work will be read and addresses by some experienced workers delivered. The work accomplished for the association by the Ladies' Auxiliary is inestimable and worthy of the greatest praise. A full account of this meeting will be published next week.

Mr. Chauncy M. Shaffer will address the Boy's Branch on the subject of temperance Friday afternoon of this week. After the address the ladies of Temperance Com. will serve refreshments. Let every member be present.

The Bible study will be resumed this week Saturday evening. The lessons from Sept. 10th to Jan. 1st have been arranged and will be of great interest. They are the miracles of our Lord recorded but in a single Gospel. The study for Saturday evening is "Light restored and Speech Imparted"—Matt. 9-27-38. The study will be of an informal nature and last but one hour. Every young man is earnestly invited.

A full report of the International Convention held at Milwaukee, Wis., May 16-20, has been published, and copies are for sale at the association room. This report gives a full account of all the work of the convention, containing the speeches in full of the ablest association workers. The Associations in this country own buildings valued at $2,900,750, besides other real estate to the value of $438,400 which certainly gives proof of the progress this work for young men is making.

New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society.

The annual meeting of the "New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society" will be held at Miller's Hotel, this city, on Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 19th, at 3 o'clock, at which time and place officers to serve the ensuing year will be elected and other business transacted. This Society is in a flourishing condition and the result of their labors the past five years in stocking streams with game fish and liberating live quail for stocking purposes, is very apparent in certain sections of the State.

West Jersey Game Society.

The West Jersey Game Society will hold its annual meeting on the 19th inst., when officers will be elected for the year. A good deal of interest attaches to the election this year as there is dissatisfaction with the way the affairs of the Society have been conducted. This dissatisfaction has existed for several years past, but is taking more decided significence this year than ever before. A committee to investigate was appointed a year or two ago, and it may be that a report will be made at the coming meeting. It is alleged that the reports published of large numbers of birds having been let loose in the thickets of West Jersey are gross exaggerations given the publishers for effect, with the design of misleading the members into the impression that the officers having charge of the matter are doing much more for the money spent than is really being done. Said one, passing his finger over a paragraph giving the doings of the Society for the past six years. "Fifteen thousand quail bought and let loose. Nonsense! They have done no such thing and the absurd statement has only been made to deceive the number with a view to help the re-election of the present officers." Every person taking out a permit from the Society becomes a member, and these numbers, seven or eight hundred, but out of them less than a score have been in the habit of attending the meetings. They will all vote, this year, either in person or by proxy, and to obtain the latter the most strenuous efforts are being made. The interest excited by the denial of the correctness of the statements hitherto made has created such a feeling, however, that the meeting on the 19th promises to be not only large but exciting. The officers consist of a President, Treasurer, Secretary and a board of Directors, one each from the counties of Atlantic, Camden, Cape May, Cumberland, Gloucester, Salem and Philadelphia.—Gloucester City Reporter.

Our Fair.

We call it "Our Fair" because it is so in more than one sense of the word. The idea of a Fair Grounds in the vicinity of Plainfield originated with Plainfield people, and has since received the support and assistance of our neighboring counties, Middlesex and Somerset especially, which are great agricultural districts To-day the Board of Directors are composed of gentlemen of well-known worth and influence from the Counties of Union and Middlesex. Because of adverse state of affairs—in weather principally—the last Fair of the Association was not a success financially. Members of the present Board of Directors, however, have nobly come to the rescue and given funds out of their own pockets to liquidate certain debts incurred by the Union and Middlesex Counties' Association in consequence of above stated adverse state of affairs. The success of the coming Fair of the Association lies principally with the farmers and citizens generally of the two counties, by their efforts to assist in such success in a general display of their products, manufactures and in attendance. The Association have deemed it necessary to withhold giving money premiums for the displays offered, and have substituted diplomas instead. This they do to ascertain whether the farmer, agriculturist, artisan and others, are willing to assist in making this annual Fair a success by exhibiting their products and wares without a money consideration. We trust their efforts in this direction will not go unrewarded. No Fair can be made a success financially or socially without such aid, unless the trials of horse speed will bring into the grounds a sufficient number of interested parties to make up a crowd and give necessary gate money to insure payment of all necessary expenses incurred. Now let us see what will be done this month on the occasion of the annual Fair of the U. & M. C. M. A. A. It lays with the farmer, the artisan, the manufacturer, the merchant, the citizen, to make it the grand success it deserves.

State Agricultural Society.

The time is drawing near to hand when the State Agricultural Society will open its quarter centennial exhibition at Waverly Park, which is located on a beautiful spot on the line of the Pa. R. R. between Newark and Elizabeth, accessible by rail from all parts of the State. Since the organization of this Society, more than a quarter of a century ago, there have been many striking changes inagurated in the husbandman's vocation. The thrifty farmer's life is very different then and now. The scythe and cradle have been laid aside, and their places taken by the mower and reaper; the flail is numbered among the things of the past; the hand rake has given way to the horse rake, and the fork to the tedder, and the laborious method of unloading hay in the barn by hand to that of horse power. The general introduction of labor saving implements and machinery in farm life has worked wonders during these years. Progress of a similar character has found its way into all the branches of productive industries. The breeding of blooded neat cattle in our State has made rapid strides while the infusion of pure blood into our common herds has noticeably improved their value for dairy purposes. Along side and space with these have been the advances made in different parts of the State, in raising fine horses for the road and draft uses, which makes this branch more profitable than formerly. In farm, orchard and garden products, lasting advances have been made in improved varieties and better methods of culture. We have numerous instances in our State where one hundred bushels of shelled corn have been grown on an acre of ground; sixty bushels of oats, forty-five bushels of wheat, and three hundred bushels of potatoes. The State Society can fairly and justly lay claim to a share of the credit in bringing about such satisfactory results. Their plan from the outset to the present has been to encourage and foster methods which should make the farmer's life less laborious and more profitable, and their annual exhibitions give warrant to these facts. The coming exhibition, which will be opened on the 17th inst. and continue for five days, will, we are assured, be superior in every department to those of previous years. The season has been favorable for growing crops, and the premiums have been made large. Every department of the State Fair is as a rule complete in itself, and none are neglected to make others more attractive. There is no question, but that a visit to the grounds, during the coming exhibition, will prove a profitable investment to every farmer in the State, for the time and money expended. One or two days can be spent on the grounds during the week of the Fair with pleasure and profit. Not only are the choicest products of our farms to be seen there, but the choicest and best citizens are always to be found on the grounds in large numbers.

FIRE MATTERS.

Friday evening last, about half-past six o'clock, the fire companies were called out to an alarm occasioned by the burning of Mrs. Elizabeth Ulrich's barn, situated on Fifth street, near Washington. No. 1 engine took position at the Gas House, and received credit for "first water" through an open butt. The barn, which was a small one, was entirely consumed. All the contents were removed except a sleigh. The loss is about $500. Insured for $150 in the Westchester. The origin of the fire was undoubtedly incendiarism.

About 10 o'clock Saturday evening last, a telephone despatch was received at the Central office of the N. J. Telephone Co., this city, from the residence of Mr. Chas. Potter, Jr., on 7th street, stating that his house was on fire. The alarm was promptly sent to the different fire companies' houses and in a very short time each company were at work on the burning dwelling. For the first time in a long while the department had a strong wind to contend with in their efforts to master their common enemy, fire. The heavy rain which fell a few hours previous, however, did much to retard the progress of the flames and its spreading to the adjoining buildings, by thoroughly dampening the roofs. When once at work the firemen worked admirably and after an hour's hard work succeeded in extinguishing the flames which were in the upper part of the house. To No. 1 engine was accorded the honor of "first water." The valuable service of ladders was well demonstrated at this fire by the quickness with which Zephyr H. & L. Co. No. 1 raised their heavy ladders to the top of the burning building and their usefulness as well demonstrated when the gallant members of the Engine Companies ascended the rungs with long lines of hose and poured water on to the flames. The fire, which was a bad one for the firemen to contend with, originated in the top of the building, in what is known as the "Tower" of the structure, which was a handsome two story and attic one, erected a number of years ago, when it was considered, (with its companion building, standing alongside of it, and owned by Mr. Rudolph Titsworth,) the finest building on Seventh street. There are two theories in reference to the origin of the fire. The first, that it occurred by a curtain being brought into contact with a burning gas jet of a room in the tower; another that mice may have originated the fire by gnawing matches inside the plastering and weather-boards. Mr. Potter's family were enjoying themselves with a number of friends in the parlor, when Mrs. P. declared she smelled smoke, and called the attention of her husband to the fact.—That gentleman, by ascending to the second floor, discovered the presence of fire in the tower. Stringent efforts were made by the guests and inmates to extinguish the flames, but finding their efforts futile, gave the alarm to the Fire Department by a telephonic despatch from the dwelling and also by crying "fire" on the street. A careful scrutiny of the vicinity where the fire originated convinced the inmates that the gas jet could hardly have caused the fire as it was some two feet from where the blaze appeared when Mr. P. entered the room. Two young ladies, a daughter of Mr. Potter, and a niece, who was visiting the family, had vacated the room about a half hour before the fire was discovered, and had left the blinds of the windows closed, although the windows were open. This may have caused a draft through the room, as a strong wind sprang up shortly afterward. All valuables and most of the furniture of the house were removed by the willing hands of neighbors and with the assistance of the members of the Department upon their arrival, and nothing whatever, we are assured by Mr. Potter, was lost, missed or stolen during the progress of the fire, or afterward. The loss on building and damage to furniture will reach about as follows:—$2,000 on furniture and $5,000 on building. The Insurance is as follows:—On the dwelling, in the German American, $3,000; Liverpool, London & Globe, $2,500; Firemen's, of Newark, $2,000. On the furniture, Franklin, of Philadelphia, $2,250; Aetna, of Hartford, $2,250.

About half-past three o'clock Sunday morning, flames were discovered issuing from a barn and stables on the Sebring estate, adjoining Laing's Hotel, on Front street. The firemen were prompt to respond to the alarm, but by the time a stream of water could be brought to bear on the flames, they had made such headway that the structure was doomed and other buildings, including Laing's Hotel, in danger of taking fire. The rain which had fallen a few hours previous, however, was the providential means of the fire extending no farther than the building in which it originated, otherwise a most disastrous conflagration must have ensued. No. 2 secured "first water" through their hose. Mr. Chas. Sebring stabled his horses in the burned building, and was so unfortunate as to lose a valuable horse, (one of his team of black horses) also a quantity of pump and drive-well tools, buggy, harness, stock, etc. His loss is severe, and he had no insurance on any of his stock or material. This fire was the work of an incendiary.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met in the Council room on Tuesday evening last, the members all being present, Messrs. Van Winkle, Depew, Flaig, Gillies, Morris and Jones. The minutes of the last meeting were read and after a slight correction were adopted. Mr. Morris reported that the Auditing Committee had examined the Treasurer's books and found the same correct. Report received and placed on file. Mr. Jones from Com. on Warren engine house reported that the rebuilding of the same was progressing finely. Report received and placed on file, as was also the report of Mr. Morris concerning fire badges. The following bills were ordered paid: Gutta Percha Rubber Co., $68.50; Finton Hibbitts, 4.50; Carney Bros., 39.53; J. G. Cadmus, 26.09; Curtiss & Griffin, 31.61; P. Clarkson, 34.00. The following were returned as not being properly signed: W. Murphy, $2.50; A. Love, 1.00; E. B. Daly, 1.00. Mr. Jones from Com. on Wells reported as follows:

To the Plainfield Fire Board, Sept. 11, '83:

Gentlemen—Your Committee respectfully report that we have examined each fire well in the city of Plainfield and North Plainfield, within the fire district, on Sept. 7th and 8th, 1883. We find them in good repair and find a rather better supply of water this year than last year in most of the wells. The depth of water in each well is as follows:

We have also made an examination of Green Brook stream through the city of Plainfield from the Richmond street bridge to Mrs. Cadmus' mill pond and find many places of easy access in time of need. Water can be taken from the north end of the Richmond street bridge with a good supply, also a good supply of water can be had from Green Brook at several places between the Water street bridge and Mr. Clawson's property with perfect ease. There is also a good supply of water at the end of Water street bridge easily reached with the steamer's suction. We have made an easy access to the brook at the Somerset street bridge, by expending a small amount of money so as to have water sufficient to cover the suction at any time. We could not make it permanent as we have been informed that the counties of Somerset and Union will make some alteration in the bed of the stream under the bridge soon.

Owing to the alterations made in the stream from Mr. Laing's Hotel down to the new iron bridge on Grove street, we were obliged to make a temporary pond under the present bridge to take water in case of necessity. We have been informed that a great alteration will soon be made at this bridge by the two counties. As soon as the bridge is completed your committee will bring the case before the Board. Suction can be taken from the Washington avenue bridge. We have examined the dam in the old mill race of Mr. Randolph, and find it in good repair with abundance of water. The bridge over the mill race is not very strong for our steamers to run over. We would recommend that a strong girder beam and two posts be placed under the centre of the bridge as soon as possible for the protection of our engines.

We would report that we have purchased the iron pipe for the cistern on Front and Somerset streets, so as to lead the water from Mr. P. M. French's forebay to the cistern on Front and Somerset streets. The pipe has not been delivered yet, but we have assurance it will be soon, and no time will be lost in laying the same.

Your committee feel the great importance of a good supply of water in the city of Plainfield and North Plainfield, as the greater part of our town will have to depend on our fire wells in case of fire. We therefore recommend that more fire wells be built as soon as the finances of the Department will permit, in the city of Plainfield and North Plainfield. We would also report the fire well on Seventh street and Central avenue as being almost useless, it having only two feet eleven inches of water at the present time.

Yours Respectfully,

WM. E. JONES, } Com. on Wells.
E. H. DEPEW,

Report received and placed on file.

The Blighting Frost.

Farmers generally, in this section, complain that the unexpected frost of Sunday night last, seriously interfered with their prospects of a profitable Fall crop of vegetables and fruits. Buckwheat especially has suffered and only a small crop can be gathered. In the West, reports come of great damage to the corn crop by this unexpected early frost. Nevertheless, "what is one man's loss is another's gain."

YOUNG STOCK GAMBLERS.

How Rich Men's Sons Sink Paternal Wealth.

Wall street is filled with boy speculators. They are of all grades, from those who gamble small sums on the changes in prices to those who are able to gamble in the legitimate way—so to speak. They keep a balance at their brokers and issue orders to buy or sell which are duly executed on the floor of the stock exchange. But though of all grades they are of one type. They may be recognized by their sharp, eager faces, their pale cheeks, their restless movements and their premature conversation.

Their talk is big. They speak of the prosperous condition of the country, the increased earnings of railroads, and of starving Europe stretching forth her arms to receive our products. They are generally "bulls." Most young men are. They believe in the wealth of the future. Very few sell "short," and if they do it is because they have learned to "hedge" in speculation as in gambling. Their game is to buy for a rise. It makes very little difference what they buy. They are so sanguine that they purchase indiscriminately from the whole list. What they touch must turn into gold. That is the way they feel. If they meet with a reverse it does not check them; they still rush on in their career to ruin.

If their ill luck continues, as is most likely, they are pushed to questionable means to obtain the resources to continue their operations.

Look at them now—their eyes are sunken and gleam with unnatural light, as if they had awakened from an opium dream. They are such eyes as may be seen any night across a gambling table.

No inconsiderable amount of the profits of stock brokerage accrues from the business supplied by these boy speculators. The better class of brokers, of course, will have nothing to do with them. They will not touch a penny of their money, and advise them to go back to their mothers, their schools, or their legitimate business and keep out of Wall street, with its rapids and whirlpools, through which the oldest and most experienced find it difficult to cross to the shores of assured success. But the youngsters are not obliged to hunt long for men who are ready to pocket their money. They find men who are ready to flatter them with the belief that they are financial prodigies; who do not hesitate to fill their brains with stories of sudden wealth, and urge them in their career of speculation. They give the boys the freedom of their offices, and there is something very fascinating about a stock broker's office which is almost irresistable.

The floor is richly carpeted and the furniture upholstered. Pictures hang on the wall. A sofa or two on which to stretch one's weary limbs; the stock indicators, which they watch with eager eyes, talking of the rising or falling prices.

"A thousand shares of Western Union at 74," announced one of the tape-readers, or tape-worms, as they might almost be called, if close students can be justly termed "book-worms." A minute before the stock sold at 73¾, and the young speculator makes a lightning calculation of the amount that some one has made by buying at 73¾ and selling at 74. "What one has done others may do," says the young fellow, and he is drawn into the snare as surely as Captain Webb was drawn into the rapids of Niagara.

Watch the crowd of beardless faces that hang around the stock indicators in the down-town restaurants and other public places, or in the bucket-shops, and one can see the boys, yet in their teens, gambling their week's earnings on the prices of stocks. Office-boys, clerks, cashiers, are drawn into the Wall street net and fall a prey to the Wall street spiders. But it is young men who have fallen heirs to fortunes or who are supplied with ready cash by their fathers, or, better still, who have access to the vaults of some banking institution who are squeezed for what they are worth most eagerly by the sharpers into whose hands they fall. A young man several years ago was left $80,000. He went immediately into Wall street, bought a seat in the stock exchange and was wiped out in a few months. He then went to work at a small salary and at last accounts had nothing whatever to do.

A young man of twenty-two or twenty-three about two months ago, during the excitement in oil, was pointed out to the reporter as having made $75,000 in a few weeks. A fortnight later the reporter was engaged in writing up the failure of the same young man. A sudden decline had wiped out his gains and left him in debt.

Cases could be cited by the score of boys whose fortunes and characters were ruined by speculation.

Not long ago the son-in-law of the president of a prominent bank downtown squandered in speculation $30,000 or $40,000 of stolen money. His family connections saved him from State prison, but his reputation is lost. He is only twenty-two years old.

A boy employed in an office to copy the quotations from the tape not long ago was found to have lost several thousand dollars of his employer's money in speculation.

Occasionally one hears of a successful case. The reporter knows of a wealthy citizen of Brooklyn, still young, who just before the panic of 1873 was taken in by his father as a partner in a brokerage firm. In a year or two, by a streak of good luck, he cleared a million. He declared that he had enough, withdrew from the firm and went to Europe. His father and brother continued in business and in a few months were swept down by the panic of 1873.

So strong are the temptations of Wall street that employers and bank officials are taking extra precautions to prevent their clerks from speculating.—N. Y. World.

The Hazleton, Pa., Plain Speaker is responsible for the statement that the wife of a respectable South Side painter gave birth to a girl baby on July 9, got up and attended to her work until July 20, and then to the astonishment of the attending physician, the dismay of the father and the mystification of lady neighbors, she gave birth to another baby—this time a boy.

There will be eight Senators elected this Fall, and the Democrats to secure control of the Upper House will have to get five out of the number. Of the thirteen Senators holding over six are Democrats and seven are Republicans. Of the outgoing Senators three are Democrats and five are Republicans. The counties where Senators are to be elected are Bergen, Hudson, Gloucester, Atlantic, Cumberland, Mercer, Morris and Ocean.

WHERE IT CAME IN.

"Mr. Mapels," said the junior partner of the house, as he looked over the expense account of one of his travelers just in, "your expenses are just $25 more for two weeks than the last man on that route."

"Is that so? What sort of a man was he?"

"One of our best salesmen."

"Did he smoke, drink and chew?"

"He did."

"Stop at all the best hotels?"

"Yes."

"Take sleepers and parlor-cars?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, it must be that when he struck that fat grocer at Troy he won $25 at draw-poker where I lost it! I was going to suggest to you that if I was to remain on that route it would pay the firm to hire some one to give me a few lessons."

HAD BEEN THERE.

It was on the elevated road the other morning. A man was seen to suddenly rise upward, look around on the seat, feel in all his pockets, and grow excited over the loss of something or other.

"Lost your wallet?" queried the man next to him.

"No."

"Had your watch taken?"

"No."

"Lost a roll of bills, perhaps?"

"It is my check book. I believe I left it at home. Dear, how careless I am!"

"It might be worse," said the other in a consoling tone.

"I don't see how it could," growled the other. "My wife will sit down and figure up the stubs, and when I go home to dinner it'll take a full hour to make her believe that 'incidental' has anything to do with 'household' expenses."

A REMARKABLE HALLUCINATION.

Roger Williams, aged 28 years, of Oakland, Cal., recovered from pulmonary disease through an operation of transfusion of blood. The blood of cats was used. Williams brooded over his strange recovery, and his friends began to fear for his sanity. He refused to go to bed at night, but slept on a rug before the fire, saying that he was gradually being transformed into a cat. When not asleep he would wander through the house, and when outside would scale the roof and sit on the chimney. Finally he was examined for commitment to an asylum, and it was found impossible to restrain him from jumping and running on all fours, keeping up an ear-splitting mewing. When taken to the asylum it was necessary to tie him to a seat in the car. At the depot he tried to escape under the platform, but was captured and lodged in the asylum. Williams was a young man of intelligence, and at one time a student of medicine. His case is considered to be one of the most remarkable hallucinations on record.

THEY DID THE BEST THEY COULD.

Between Biloxi and Mississippi City the engine broke down and the train was brought to a standstill. When the conductor announced that it would be two or three hours before we could proceed, thirty or forty of the passengers sauntered across a field to a negro cabin and sat down in a shady grove. There were a dozen or more dogs about the place, and presently two of them engaged in a savage fight, lasting about ten minutes. They were finally separated by the owner, and closely following was a fight between a boy of eight or nine, and a girl a year or two older. Then came another dog fight, and then the old woman stepped out, and the boy and girl pitched into her tooth and toenail. The ladies of the crowd became excited and indignant, and just as another dog fight was being arranged for, one of the gentlemen walked up to the colored man and said:

"We want this brutal sport stopped at once! You and your wife ought to be ashamed of yourselves!"

"Look aheah, sir!" replied the negro, as he kicked a dog aside, "you belongs down dar, doan' you?"

"Yes, the engine broke down."

"An' yer come ober heah to res' an' enjoy yerselves?"

"Yes."

"Well, sah, we's bin tryin' to make your stay agreeable by showin' off de weary-best we had, an' now if you am gwine to fin' fault an' raise a row 'bout it you'd better trabble right back soon's yer legs kin hurry ye up!"

He went in and took an old shot-gun down off the hooks and we traveled.

WHAT HE CAME DOWN FOR.

"The help we get nowadays don't amount to shucks. Time was when the help you hired in haying time could do a decent day's work, but this year they're wurs'n ever!"

Old farmer Smith was getting in hay at his farm in a suburban town, and had two or three new men at work with him. The old man continued: "Tell you what it is; old as I am I can pack more hay on to a wagin than any two men of the present day can fork up."

"Suppose you try it, old man," suggested one of the men, at the same time tipping the wink to his mate on the opposite side to "sock it" to the old man.

The old fellow needed no second invitation. With a bound he mounted the cart, and was stowing away at a tremendous rate. Up came forkful after forkful, first upon one side and then upon the other. The "help" was putting in its best licks and the old man was kept squirming around in lively style, much to the amusement of all hands.

The "help" was rapidly getting tired; it would never do to give up and allow the old man to come off victorious.—Something must be done at once.

"When I put a heavy forkful on this side, give him all you can lift from the other end, and knock him out," said one of the men to the other in an undertone.

The plan worked well. One of the men lifted an extraordinary big forkful, just putting it upon the edge of the load, and, while the old man was leaning over endeavoring to get it in place, the fellow on the other side threw all he could lift upon the back of the old fellow, which, of course, sent him sprawling to the ground.

"Hello! what are you doing down there?" asked help No. 1, endeavoring as well as he could to conceal his merriment.

Quick as a flash from the old man came the answer: "After more hay!"

This answer tired the help completely.

John Zoars, known to the public as "Major Mite," and Maria Nall, both dwarfs, were publicly married in a theatre at Louisville, Ky.

ROMANCE OF A LOFT.

Quite a sensation came to light near Steinsville, Penn., along the Blue Mountains, in Lehigh county, opposite the line from Berks, last week. For some time a strange man, going by the name of Mark Smith, has been traveling up and down the road doing odd jobs of work. He was rather a fine-looking, smooth faced person, about twenty-five years of age, and tolerably well dressed. He worked the whole Summer at hay-making and harvesting, and became very dark and stout, the hot sun having a severe effect on his skin. He enjoyed a good appetite and became very healthy and hearty. The mountain air agreed with him. He generally went alone, and had very little to do with the hands. A few days ago Smith was taken sick, and he was compelled to keep his bed, which was in the loft of a Summer kitchen of a farmhouse that is not used this year. Smith became worse, and finally a doctor from Lehigh county was sent for. The doctor examined the patient, but refused to say what ailed him. Soon after the remarkable fact was made known that the person was not a man but a woman, and that an infant had been born in the loft. The doctor, who had kept the secret, provided an old nurse, and the women folks of the farm, together with the neighbors, furnished the necessary clothing for mother and child. Who the woman is, is not known. She will only say that she left her home unknown to any one; that she dressed herself in disguise and cut her hair off so that she could travel without fear of detection. She appears to come of a good family, but was taken to the almshouse.

FASHION NOTES.

Every style of plaid and check will be worn.

Felt and velvet bonnets will be worn to the exclusion of plush.

Pointed or tapering crowns for bonnets are no longer fashionable.

New round hats have stiff high crowns and straight or rolling brims.

Grays, browns and indefinite shades of blue or blue-green bid fair to be very popular.

The long Newmarket coat and the Newmarket bonnet, a jockey style, go together.

Wool batistes in checks and white and black mixtures will be much worn this Fall.

Small shoulder capes or collars with full plaited ruffles are among the late novelties.

Heads, wings, breasts and crests of birds are the favorite ornaments for Fall hats.

Gray and brown in various shades are the favorite colors for the new felt hats and bonnets.

For traveling and utility suits for fall wear, checked and hair-lined flannels will be much used.

Crushed strawberry is no longer fashionable, shot blue and plum color having taken its place.

Colored silk mitts are embroidered in self colors across the hand, the wrist and on the top, which reaches to the elbow.

Nun's veiling was never so popular as at the present time. It is used in all shades for dresses worn both by misses and young girls.

A sensation prevails among the residents of Hempstead, L. I., over a wedding of unusual interest which took place in that village recently. Miss Elmer Johnson, a prepossessing young lady, aged sixteen years, the only daughter of a well-to-do farmer of that town, was united in marriage to Mr. George Powell, a wealthy farmer. The bridegroom is sixty-four years of age, and this is his fourth matrimonial venture. The bride, by her marriage to Mr. Powell, becomes the stepmother of five children, each of whom are old enough to be her parent. Mr. Powell has several grandchildren living. The aged groom and his girl bride started on their wedding tour immediately after their marriage.

A Lady Tricycler.

Mounting a tricycle for the first time a few days ago, Mrs. Frank E. Yates, of Chicago, rode for a distance of twenty-four miles along the boulevard, and now, every afternoon, clad in a neat dark-green skirt and close-fitting jacket, she may be seen gliding gracefully along the boulevards or along the parks. The ladies on every hand, indulgent papas and husbands are being teased to buy tricycles. A ladies' tricycle club will be formed at an early day, and then the gentlemen will no longer be monopolists in the use of the wheel and the boulevards.—Chicago Times.

The New Postal Notes.

The new postal note system went into effect on Monday last, and notes can be had at the Post Office, at the money order window. A fee of three cents is on each order, and the highest amount a single order calls for is $4.99, but one may purchase as many notes at once as they choose at the fee of three cents each. The advantage over the money order system is that the fee is cheaper, although if one of the notes is lost no security is guaranteed to the purchaser. The note is payable at the office on which issued or at the office of issue within three months from the time of purchase to the bearer.

Another Democratic Success.

Mr. Isaac M. Holcombe, of No. 42 Central avenue, is our authority for the authenticity of the following wonderful record. Mr. Holcombe had occasion recently to visit Coffee county for the purpose of examining timber lands, and took such opportunity of visiting the old gentleman mentioned. Stafford Davis was born in Darlington district, South Carolina, but moved to Coffee county when quite a young man. Being pleased with the country, he married and settled there, and there he has lived ever since. He is now in his one hundred and sixth year, but age has not impaired any of his faculties, and feels yet able to attend to his own work. He does his plowing, splits his rails and attends to all his domestic duties. He is not rich, but is a well-to-do farmer, and is comfortably situated in life. He is temperate in all his habits, taking his dram when he feels disposed to, but never drinks to excess. Tobacco he has never used in any shape or form. He has been a constant member of the Primitive Baptist church for seventy-four years, and during that time has never had a dispute or falling out with a single fellow member. He is a staunch Democrat, one that has been tried and found true, and during his long period of life every vote that he has cast has been a Democratic one. He is at present living with his second wife, and one hundred and fifty children, grandchildren, great-grand and great-great-grandchildren to-day call him "blessed." Strange to relate, all of them are devoted to farming, and there isn't a trader among them. Neither is there a drunkard.

New Jersey Needs a Like Law.

To encourage tree planting the last Legislature of New York State passed a law by which any inhabitant who shall transplant by the side of the public highway adjoining his premises any forest shade trees, fruit trees, ornamental trees, or nut-bearing trees, shall be allowed, in abatement of his highway tax, one dollar for every four trees set out. We understand that before frost sets in the statute will have been availed of in every town, village and hamlet.

Some Information For The Ladies.

According to the Plainfield Times, some of the young ladies of that city are finding fault with the bicycle because it is said to interfere with their matrimonial prospects. The argument is a curious one. The bank accounts of these young men are not strong enough to allow of indulging in both matrimony and bicycles, so the latter is chosen and the ladies must wait. We don't believe any such charge against the ladies, as that they are seriously affected in heart by it. They know too well that a sound mind is most generally to be found in a sound body. Bicyclers will be better fitted to earn bread for their households when they become married than some who never indulge in the good exercise and look like worm fences in consequence.—Somerville Gazette

Fine Pianos.

The Musical Courier, of New York, in its issue of Aug. 22d, says: "A concert was recently given by the famous "Royal Bell-Ringers of England," on which occasion a Behr Brothers' upright grand was used. Very few pianos harmonize in timbre with the peculiarly sweet, delicate tone of bells; but when an accompaniment is played on an instrument possessing the requisite purity of tone, it heightens the charming effect produced by the bells to such a degree that the hearers are completely carried away, as was the case in this instance. The leader of the Bell-Ringers was not less delighted than the audience, and arose to say that he had not found a piano of such exquisite musical qualities as the Behr Brothers' once in fifty times in giving concerts throughout the United States." A. Vanderbeek, No. 33 Park avenue, is the only agent for the sale of these pianos in this city.

Reunion of New Jersey Veterans.

The reunion of the Fifteenth New Jersey Volunteers, at Newton, Sussex county, on the 19th of September, will be a very extensive affair, something only a little short of the great Deckertown encampment. There is to be a procession formed at the depot, consisting of a mounted cavalcade, 100 carriages for invited guests and local dignitaries, veterans in column preceded by a band of music, a number of Posts of the Grand Army of the Republic, Bailey's Battery, the entire Fire Department of Newton, civic societies, etc., interspersed with more bands, firing of cannon, etc. Senator Cochrane delivers the address of welcome, after which there will be a grand collation furnished by the citizens of Sussex. Oration by John Emory, and short addresses and toasts by distinguished guests and prominent citizens. Invitations have been sent to the Governor of New Jersey, and to many distinguished generals, judges and statesmen. It is estimated that the people of Sussex and Warren counties will turn out en masse, making the largest crowd ever assembled in Newton.

What the Catholic Diocese of Trenton Asks.

The Newark correspondent of the Freeman's Journal says, speaking of the retreat of the clergy of the Diocese of Trenton at Seton Hall College, that at a meeting presided over by Very Rev. Anthony Smith, a petition was read respectfully setting forth that the reverend clergy of the Diocese of Trenton believed a grievance existed which ought to be redressed. In the division of the old Diocese there was an unequal apportionment of counties, to the disadvantage of the Diocese of Trenton. The grievances complained of they urge, would be abated if the county of Union, in which some important parishes are constituted—Plainfield, Elizabeth, Elizabethport and Summit—were detached from Newark and added to Trenton. The Diocese of Trenton, with its population of about 50,000 has only a few parishes—in Trenton, New Brunswick and Camden—sufficiently important to admit of an assistant priest. In the discussion it was set forth that Newark has all benevolent institutions, hospitals, orphan asylums, college and seminary. The cities of Newark and Jersey City have more Catholics than there is in the whole See of Trenton, and in the natural order of things this disproportion will grow greater year by year.

Newspaper Laws.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered wishing to continue their subscription.

2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their paper, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrears are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office to which they are directed they are held responsible until they have settled their bills and ordered them discontinued.

4. If subscribers move to other places without notifying the publisher, and the papers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take papers from the office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

6. Any person who receives a newspaper and makes use of it, whether he has ordered it or not, is held in law to be a subscriber.

7. If subscribers pay in advance, they are bound to give notice to the publisher, at the end of their time, if they do not wish to continue taking it; otherwise, the publisher is authorized to send it on, and the subscriber will be responsible, until an express notice, with payment of arrears is given.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The fish are biting in the Passaic river. Mr. Charles Shelley, of Littleton, last week fished the Passaic near Hanover Neck bridge, and secured four pickerel, each over two pounds in weight, a three pound bass, and a large string of catfish. The pickerel and bass were caught on spoons and the catfish on block lines.

Black River, Morris County, will soon be entirely cleared of fish, the water from the numerous iron mines having killed the trout and injured the others. It is also thought the powder factory will affect the waters injuriously and thus what was once a fine field for the sportsman will become a barren waste, as it were.

In the early part of the month the guests at the Lakeside House, Greenwood Lake, had the fine sport of catching bass at night without the aid of light. The fish were caught by casting from shore with a good-sized frog for bait, as soon as the sport became generally known visitors from all the hotels came along to take a hand at it. For several evenings in succession the bass bit eagerly and each angler caught from four to six weighty fish, then the sport suddenly ceased and the anglers are now waiting for the announcement that the fish have again taken to late suppers. The bass is capricious, sometimes changing his taste for a fly several times during the forenoon.

PRESENT POWER!
To-Morrow a long way off when help is wanted to-day.

Comfort is never in a hurry. Pain and distress are in hot haste. It is to the "friend in need"—the friend who acts something now—that the old adage pays the compliment of being "a friend indeed." That they do not keep the sufferer in suspense is the salient excellence of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS. The plasters of other days—whether porous or otherwise—said "Wait until to-morrow; We can promise nothing on the spur of the moment." But pain unrelieved, like hope deferred, maketh the heart sick. Benson's plasters act on application. They penetrate, soothe, warm and heal, containing as they do, chemical and medicinal agents of the highest efficiency. Their motto is now, and the genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of each plaster. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

POETRY.

A BUNDLE OF LETTERS.

BY FRANK DEMPSTER SHERMAN.

Strange how much sentiment
Clings like a fragrant scent
To these love-letters pent
In their pink covers;
Day after day they came
Feeding love's fickle flame;—
Now, she has changed her name,—
Then, we were lovers.

Loosen the silken band
Round the square bundle, and See what a dainty hand
Scribbled to fill it
Full of facetious chat;
Fancy how long she sat
Molding the bullets that Came with each billet!

Ah, I remember still
Time that I used to kill
Waiting the postman's shrill,
Heart-stirring whistles,
Calling vague doubts to mind,
Whether or no I'd find
That he had left behind
One of her missives.

Seconds become an age
At this exciting stage;
Two eager eyes the page
Scan for a minute;
Then, with true lover's art,
Study it part by part,
Until they know by heart
Everything in it.

What is it all about?
Dashes for words left out,—
Pronouns beyond a doubt!
Very devoted.
Howells she's just begun;
Dobson her heart has won;
Locker and Tennyson
Frequently quoted.

Criss-cross the reading goes,
Rapturous rhyme and prose,—
Words which I don't suppose
Looked very large in Books on the "ologies";
Then there's a tiny frieze
Full of sweets in a squeeze,
Worked on the margin.

Lastly,—don't pause to laugh!—
That is her autograph
Signing this truce for half
Her heart's surrender;
Post-scriptum, one and two,— Desserts,—the dinner's through!—
Linking the "I" and "You"
In longings tender.

Such is the type of all
Save one, and let the call
Brief notice to this small
Note neatly written:
'Tis but a card, you see,
Gently informing me
That it can never be—
This is the mitten!

LOVE IN ASHES.

'[illegible] of nine, and the washing all out,' mused thrifty Mrs. Chutter, as she scrubbed the porch. 'Deacon, I'll get you to set the big tub down the cellar, if you will.'

'Certain, wife,' responded the deacon from his cart in the door yard.

'There comes Kendall's new basket wagon, with two women in it,' pursued the lady, wringing her mop. 'Isn't that the horse that balks?'

Being in the critical act of of emptying four gallon bucket of soap the good man vouchsafed no reply.

When the jellie mass had quivered and splashed into the barrel in waiting, he looked up just in season to see the gay little pony shy at the cart and go tearing down the road.

'They'll upset! They'll be killed! Run after 'em! Do something!' shrieked Mrs. Chutter.

'Don't get excited, wife; they're all right now. That girl drives like a man.'

And picking up his bucket the moderate deacon marched off for a second supply of soap. But though the little incident had failed to shake his nerves, it did make him oblivious of his wife's wash-tub posed on the landing of the dim stairway, and as a natural consequence he put his foot in it. The tub rolled, the deacon swayed like a pestle in a mortar; there was a lively succession of bumps, followed by a clatter and a thud, and deacon, tub and bucket strewed the cellar floor.

'Adab and Abihu!' ejaculated the fallen saint, with sinful energy.

'What's up, uncle?' cried an anxious voice overhead.

'I can tell you what's down,' was the grim response. 'Come and brace me while I try to step.'

The owner of the voice, a fine-looking youth of one-and-twenty, was already groping his way among the debris, his aunt in the rear with the camphor.

The deacon's attempted locomotion resulted in a groan.

'I must have sprained my ankle, Harvey. If I'd postponed this tub race till after I'd been my rounds, 'twould have been better calculation.'

'Oh, I wouldn't worry about my rounds, uncle. What's the hurry?'

'My customers expect me to-day, that's the point. I hate masterly to break my word. Now there's the widow Cleaves waiting for me to take her ashes, so she can scrub after me with the boiling suds, and up at Kendall's they're clean out of soap.'

'And not clean without it, eh?' laughed the young man. 'See here, uncle; since you are going to feel so uneasy about disappointing the people, why not send me in your stead?'

'You, in your fine clothes! I should smile,' mumbled Mrs. Chutter, with the stopper of the camphor bottle between her teeth.

'Why can't my uncle's mantle fall upon me, auntie? I was intending to borrow the frock.'

'Well, if I do say it, you've got the Vance common sense. Some young men of your bringing up would be ashamed to drive a soap cart.'

'Humph! Some young men would be fools,' said the deacon, with warmth.—'Nobody has any call to be ashamed to deliver such soap as I make. If you've a mind to run the team to-day, Harvey, I shall be obleeged to you.'

Fifteen minutes later the worthy deacon was extending his aching length upon the sitting-room lounge, and gazing through the open window after his youthful proxy, who, duly initiated into the mysteries of the calling, was driving away in the big blue cart. Behind jounced and creaked an empty ash-bin, flanked by two covered barrels of soap; but the swinging seat was clean and comfortable, commanding a fine view of the surrounding country.

A half mile and more the road wound through his uncle's fertile acres, for Deacon Chutter was withal a farmer. Farming, indeed, was his chief vocation, soap-boiling being an accessory venture growing out of sundry extensive experiments in the use of leached ashes as a fertilizer. It was one of those tuneful mornings in early June when all nature joins in a glad doxology. The newly-arrived bobolinks, tipsy with glee, carroled in the meadows. The orioles, hanging their hammocks in the elms, could scarcely work for singing. Gay breezes whispered love to the graceful young clover, then danced away to flirt with the coy hillside birches. Everywhere were life and motion, irradiated by the benignant sun.—For Harvey Vance's study-weakened eyes there was too much glare, too much flutter. He lost no time in putting on his blue goggles.

'Who cares if they do make me look like a frog?' mused he, as he settled them astride his aristocratic nose. 'Thanks to them and to change of air, my poor optics are undoubtedly improving. I shall be back to college by fall. Ha! ha! if the fellows could only see me now.'

And here, to the infinite surprise of Dobbin, his new master broke into a rollicking class song—a song abruptly ended as a turn in the road revealed a near farmhouse.

'If I peddle soap, I'll peddle it with due decorum,' soliloquized the youth, knocking upon the back door with the handle of his whip.

To have seen the capable air with which he measured ashes bushel by bushel, giving in exchange money, or gallons *of soap, according to the customer's de*sire, one would have pronounced him bred to the soap business. Since his month's rustication at his Aunt Chutter's he had made the acquaintance of most of the farmers along the river, and these expressed their gratification at meeting 'a judge's son that wasn't afraid to work,' but outside the parish limits his triumphal march terminated. He was a stranger in a strange land. One man asked if he had bought out the deacon; a second hoped he wasn't proposing to run an opposition team; and the loyal widow Cleaves could hardly be persuaded to surrender her ashes, because, forsooth, she preferred to trade with Deacon Chutter.

Obedient to his uncle's instructions, at her cottage the young man took a cross-road to Kendal's, a summer hotel, familiarly styled 'The Eyrie.'

'You'll find it a long three miles,' had been Mrs. Cleaves' parting remark.

'Three miles, and not a neighbor between here and there; I couldn't blame the widow if she should want to change her situation,' mused the deacon's deputy scanning the western horizon. 'Shouldn't wonder if that cloud yonder meant business. I thought the sun was too bright this morning. Well, a little high-toned thunder will drown this everlasting racket.'

Facing about to wedge in position an empty soap barrel he observed two la*dies driving up the hill in a basket* phaeton.

'That looks like Kendall's team that gave auntie such a panic this morning,' thought be. 'Those ladies are some of his boarders, I suppose—Tom Cavender's mother and sister, for aught I know, I have heard they were stopping at the Eyrie. Goodness! wouldn't it be a joke if I should fall in with them to-day?'

Meanwhile the younger lady in the carriage was merrily commenting on the quasi soap-man's active figure, conspicuously and amply clad in the deacon's canvas frock and overalls.

'I hope he isn't a perambulating maniac, mamma."

"It's the very cart that frightened the pony!" was the terrified response. "Do let me get out, Lila! Oh! oh!"

But already the horse was backing down the hill. Harvey sprang from the cart, and grasped the refractory animal by the bridle just in season to prevent the carriage from overturning in the ditch.

'Thank you, sir—thank you very much,' said the girlish driver, the color rushing back to her face. 'Now, if you'll be kind enough to lead our pony past your cart we shall be yet more ob*liged.'*

'A pretty girl—stylish too, but abominably patronizing,' thought the young Sophomore, stalking resentfully at the pony's head.

'There, now your cart is behind us, we shall have no further trouble. I'm sorry to have detained you, sir. Infinitely obliged.'

In leaving the ladies Harvey mechanically raised his hat, the deacon's hat—alas! yellowed and frayed by farm service. The touch set flying the ashes upon the brim, giving our receding hero the effect of being caught away in a cloud. A little blinded, but laughing behind his goggles, he went back to old Dobbin and waited for the ladies to go on in advance.

But what ailed that surprising pony? The young lady chirruped to him; he would not budge. She snapped the whip; he stood as stiff as the wooden horse of the Trojans.

'Oh, daughter, daughter, he's balking!' cried the elder lady, who appeared to be an invalid. 'If there is anything I'm afraid of, it's a balking horse.'

'Allow me, madame,' said Harvey, again advancing.

He twisted the animal's ear a moment to divert his attention, then took him by the bit and led him several paces.

'See, mamma, the pony has got over his sulks. Thank you, sir.'

The young lady resumed the reins; the fractious quadruped promptly refused to stir.

'Let me get out, Lila; I won't go another step with him.'

'He doesn't seem to be going,' said the daughter, with a vexed laugh. 'You know you can't walk a rod. You'll surely have a relapse, mamma, if you don't sit still.'

Again Harvey led the pony. Again the tantalizing nag stiffened in his harness the instant Miss Lila took the reins.—Many times was this farce repeated, and many were the minutes wasted. Meantime the sky had become outcast, and thunder was muttering in the distance.

'My mother has been very ill. If she is caught in the shower she may get her death,' cried Miss Lila, in distress. 'Oh, what shall we do?'

'If you will pardon the suggestion, I might drive you to the Eyrie, if that is your destination,' said Harvey, with a deprecatory glance at his masquerade costume.

'Oh, will you? But there is your horse and cart?'

'I could come back for them.'

'And with all mamma's shawls and pillows the phaeton is hardly wide enough for us two.'

'That is true: it is a lilliputian affair.' The youth was gravely testing its light springs and braces.

'Is there danger of breaking down.—Then you go with mamma, and I'll drive the cart.'

'Lila Cavender! The idea!' expostulated the invalid.

'Tom Cavender's mother and sister by the ashes of my uncle! What a scrape!' was the young soap merchant's inward ejaculations as he awaited the ladies' pleasure.

'What better can I do, mamma? I shall ride famously. Unless you're afraid to trust me with your horse,' the young lady added, with a glance toward Harvey.

'Not in the least. He's far from being a fiery Bucephalus.'

Struck with the incongruity of the remark from such a source Miss Lila lost all control of her dimples.

'That seat is suspended between the heavens and the earth, like Mohammed's coffin, mamma,' she jested, by way of cloaking her untimely mirth. 'One ought to be shot into it out of a catapult.'

To aid the young lady in mounting, Harvey silently extended a hand, whose exceeding smoothness was intensified by a seal ring that glittered upon the little finger. Miss Lila glanced curiously at the fine cameo with its quaint setting. Who was this anomalous being who sported costly ornaments and quoted from the classics? And where, where had she seen that peculiar cameo before, or one just like it? Ah! now she recollected; Tom had worn it home last vacation, when he and his chum had exchanged rings. But how had this soap-man become possessed of it? Could it be that he and Harvey Vance were identical? Tom had said that Harvey was spending the summer in the neighborhood. This must be he. Yes, she was sure of it.

Obedient to the young man's will, that unaccountable pony darted away on the wings of the wind. Close behind, head down, tail up, followed old Dobbin in a heavy canter which seemed to shake the very leaves on the trees. Charged upon by the empty soap barrel, Miss Lila slipped to the other side of the seat and clung to the ash-bin. A mile was passed, two miles. The gable-roofed Eyrie loomed in the distance. On sped the pony; on lumbered old Dobbin; on swooped the storm-cloud. A dozen guests crowded out upon the hotel piazza to witness the exciting race.

"How white Mrs. Cavender looks!" cried one. 'Where did she pick up that fantastic driver?'

'Is that Miss Lila in the cart?' exclaimed the gentleman addressed. 'Well, she's a girl of mettle! Ha! here comes the rain!'

As the phaeton dashed up he rushed out with an open umbrella to escort Mrs. Cavender into the house. In mounting the steps she turned toward Harvey.

"You have done us a great service, sir. I assure you we are grateful. My daughter will see that your are recompensed for your time and trouble.'

'The dickens she will!' thought the deacon's indignant substitute.

Standing beneath the dripping eaves, with rivulets of lye coursing down his cheeks, he assisted the moist young lady to alight. 'I am—we are deeply indebted to you,' she stammered, blushingly. 'My mother—'

'Has taken no cold, I trust, said he, loftily. 'Good afternoon.'

And horse, cart and driver disappeared kitchenward.

In putting the cart to rights that evening Harold discovered a grimy object caught between the seat and the ash-bin. It proved to be a lady's pocket-handkerchief, bearing in one corner the name of 'Lila Cavender.' He handed it to his aunt for bleaching purposes, and received in return a letter from Tom.

"My mother and sister have perched at the Eyrie, on Emden Hill,' it ran. 'My mother is getting up from a fever, and is bound to get as high up as she can. If you're anywhere near their secluded nest do peep in upon them. They'll be charmed to make your acquaintance.'

'I believe I'll take that handkerchief to Miss Cavender to-morrow, auntie, and have it off my mind,' remarked Harvey, carelessly, as he folded the letter.

'Well—or you might send it by the stage.' But Harvey was deaf to the suggestion.

The next evening, faisely attired, and minus spectacles, he presented himself at the Eyrie, and was cordially welcomed by both Mrs. Cavender and her daughter. Convinced that he was not recognized as squire of the soap cart, he saw no necessity for proclaiming himself such. In making his first call why should he introduce himself as a clown?

'You've made quite a visit,' was his aunt's salutation when Harvey entered the sitting-room. 'Was the girl glad to get her handkerchief?'

'To tell the truth, auntie, I didn't give it to her.'

'Humph! Strange how a handsome young woman will weaken a chap's memory,' observed the deacon, slyly, as his wife bandaged the offending ankle. 'I don't see but Harvey'll have to call again.'

He did call again, and again, and again. Indeed, his rides to the Eyrie grew so frequent that his uncle one day teasingly counseled him to buy a second saddle-horse.

'Or get a carriage that will hold two,' amended his aunt. At which the youth flushed guiltily, confirming Mrs. Chutter in her private opinion that he was 'very far gone.'

He went further yet that evening—even to the length of proposing to Miss Lila.

The little coquette only laughed, and bade him not to be absurd.

Absurd? He would really like to know what she meant.

Oh, they were both so young.

Harvey looked hurt, and intimated that he, at least, was nearing the down*hill of life.*

And he didn't know her well enough.

The youth eagerly protested that he knew her well enough to love her.

'Besides, I'm not sure but I like another young man better.'

'Oh, if you care for somebody else, why then—why, in that case—' Harvey found the English language terribly intricate, and rose with precipitation.

'I met him first you know,' said Miss Lila, dropping her eyes apologetically, 'and I am under great obligations to him.'

'Oh, it's all right. You're all right, I mean; but I think Tom might have told me.'

'Told you what?'

'About this other fellow.'

'There isn't much to tell,' said Miss Lila, demurely. 'He hasn't come forward.' Harvey drew on his glove with a mystified air. 'But I am looking for him any day now, for the Eyrie is nearly out of soap.'

'You bewitching little tease!'

Miss Lila's cheeks were eddying with dimples deep enough to drown a man's heart. Perhaps they made Harvey's head swim. I can't say. I only know that he laid hold of the young lady's hands at that moment in the most giddy fashion, and she seemed quite willing to let him steady himself in this manner.

'Well, Harvey, I expect to be on my legs again to-morrow,' observed the facetious deacon, at breakfast; 'and when I call at the Eyrie I guess you'd better let me give that young woman her handkerchief.'

'Thank you very much; I attended to that last night.'

'It didn't seem just right to keep her out of it so long, Harvey,' remarked his aunt, dryly, as she passed his coffee. 'You ought to have paid her interest.'

'Humph! don't you be a mite concerned, wife,' said the deacon, with a mischievous wink. 'Depend upon it, Harvey has squared his accounts with that young woman before this, and takes her note of hand. He's driven business since that day I set him up in the cart.'

ST. PETER WILL WATCH HER.

The Bad Boy—His Lame Dog—A Probable Murder and the Minister's Vacation.

"Hello," said the grocery man to the bad boy, as he came in with a black eye, leading a hungry looking dog that was walking on three legs and had one leg tied up with a red silk handkerchief. "Now you get out of here with that dog mighty quick. A boy that hurts dogs so they have to have their legs tied up is no friend of mine," and the grocery man took up a broom to drive the dog out of doors.

"There, you calm yourself," said the bad boy to the grocery man, as the dog got behind the boy and looked up at the grocery man as though he was not afraid as long as the boy was around. "That dog is my guest, and those are my splints on his broken leg, and that is my handkerchief that my girl gave me, wound round it, and you touch that dog, except in the way of kindness, and down comes your house," and the boy doubled up his fists as though he meant business. "You see, this dog was following off a pet dog that belonged to a woman, and she tried to shoo him away, but he wouldn't shoo. This dog didn't know he was a low-born, miserable dog, and had no right to move in the society of an aristocratic pet dog, and he followed right along. He thought this was a free country, and one dog was as good as another, and he followed that woman and her pet dog right into her door yard. The pet dog encouraged this dog, and he went into the yard, and when the woman got up on the steps she threw a velocipede at the dog, and broke his leg, and then she took up her pet and went in the house so she wouldn't hear this dog howl. She is a nice woman, and I see her go to meeting every Sunday with a lot of morocco books in her hands and once I pumped the organ in the church where she goes and she was so pious I thought she was an angle. But angles don't break dogs' legs. I'll bet when she goes up to the gate and sees St. Peter open the book, and look for the charges against her, she will tremble as hough she had fits. And when St. Peter runs his finger down the ledger, and stops at the dog column, and turns and looks at here over his spectacles, and says: 'Madam, how about your stabbing a poor dog with a velocipede, and breaking his leg?' she will claim it as an accident. But she can't fool Pete. He is on to everybody's racket, and if they get in there they have got to have a clean record. "I learned in Sunday-school that up there they watch even the sparrows fall, and they wouldn't be apt to get left on a dog bigger than a whole flock of sparrows, 'specially when the dog's fall was accompanied with such a noise as a velocipede makes when it falls down stairs. No, sir, a woman who throws a velocipede at a poor, homeless dog and breaks its leg, may carry a car-load of prayer books, and she may attend all the sociables, but, according to what I have been told, if she goes sailing up to the gate of the New Jerusalem, as though she owned the whole place, and expects to be ushered into a private box, she will get left. The man in the box office will tell her she is not on the list, and there is a variety show down below, where the devil is the star, and fallen angles were dancing the can-can with sheet-iron tights, on brimstone lakes, and she can probably crawl under the canvass; but she can't get in among the angelic hosts until she can satisfactorily explain that dog story that is told on her."

"But say," remarked the grocer, "I want to ask you if you have seen anything of my man that delivers groceries. Saturday night I sent him over to your house to deliver some things, about ten o'clock, and he has not shown up since. What do you think has become of him?"

"Well, by gum, that accounts for it. Saturday night, about ten o'clock, we heard somebody in the back yard, around the kitchen door, just as we were going to bed, and pa was afraid it was a burglar after the church money he collected last Sunday. He had got to turn it over the next day to pay the minister's expenses on his vacation, and it made him nervous to have it around. I peeked out the window and saw the man, and I told pa, and pa got a revolver and began shooting through the wire screen to the kitchen window, and I saw the man drop the basket and begin to climb over the fence real sudden, and I went out and began to groan, as though somebody was dying in the alley, and I brought in the basket with the mackerel and green corn, and told pa that from the groaning out there I guessed he had killed the grocery delivery man, and I wanted pa to go out and help me hunt for the body, but he said he was going to take the midnight train to go to the West on some business, and pa lit out. I guess your man was scared and went one way, and pa was scared and went the other. Won't they be astonished when they meet each other on the other side of the world? Pa will shoot him again when they meet, if he gives pa any sass. Pa says when he gets mad he had just as soon eat as to kill a man."

"Well, I guess my man has gone off to a Sunday picnic or something, and when he gets sober he'll return, but how are your theatricals getting along?" asked the grocery man.

"Oh, that scheme is all busted," said the boy; "at least until the minister gets back from his vacation. The congregation has noticed a red spot on his hand for some time, and the ladies said what he needed was rest. They said if that spot was allowed to go on it might de*velope into a pimple and the minister* might die of blood poison, superinduced by overwork, and they took up a collection and he has gone. The night they bid him good-bye the spot on his hand was the subject of much comment. The wimmen sighed and said it was lucky they noticed the spot or his hand before it had sapped his young life away. Pa said Job had more than four hundred boils worse than that, and he never took a vacation, and then ma dried pa up. She told pa he had never suffered from blood poison, and pa said he could raise cat boils for the market and never squeal. Ma seen the only way to shut pa up was to let him go home with the choir singer, so she bounced him off with her, and he didn't get home till most 'leven o'clock, but ma she set up for him. Maby what she said to pa made him go West after peppering your burglar. Well, I must go home now, 'cause I run the family since pa lit out. Say, send some of your most expensive canned fruit and things over to the house. Darn the expense." And the boy took the lame dog under his arm and went out.—Peck's Sun.

"What is this man charged with?" asked the magistrate. "With whiskey, your honor," replied the sententious policeman.

Democratic Nominations.

For Governor,
LEON ABBETT,
of Hudson County.

OUR CANDIDATE.

We are proud to raise at our mast head the name of

LEON ABBETT,
of Hudson County,

as the Democratic candidate for Governor of New Jersey.

Mr. Abbett was fairly and honorably nominated on the second ballot by an intelligent representative body of the Democracy of this State, and in preference to several other well known and worthy gentlemen.

He is thoroughly acquainted with public affairs, and acknowledged by political friend and foe to be one of the most talented citizens of New Jersey, and eminently qualified to fill a Gubernatorial position made illustrious by such an honored line of incumbents.

Leon Abbett is a man of the people, familiar with their wants and pledged to defend and advance their best interests. He possesses and will carry into the discharge of every public duty mental ability, personal integrity and tireless energy fully equal to any emergency that may arise, and which will constitute him an Executive in reality for the general good. As an independent journalist of New York well says—"The New Jersey Democrats have a strong candidate in Leon Abbett, because he is so able, sagacious, experienced and active."

Like other distinguished men, Mr. Abbett has been assailed by the venom dipped pen of slander, but the animus of that was so plainly seen to be malignant personal defamation, it strengthened him before the nominating convention and will vastly aid him at the polls next November. Falsehood and malice like a kindred reptile, sting themselves to death.

FOR GOVERNOR,
LEON ABBETT.

THE PLATFORM.

The Democratic State Convention of New Jersey, held at Trenton last week, unanimously adopted the following platform:

The Democratic party of New Jersey, in Convention assembled, pledge anew their fealty to the fundamental doctrines of the party as enunciated by Jefferson and practiced by Jackson. They reassert their belief in a strict construction and rigid enforcement of the Federal Constitution. They declare for the sovereignty of the States and the supremacy of the Federal Government within their respective spheres. They denounce the centralizing tendencies of the Republican party, and declare for home rule and local self-government as the foundation stones of the republic. They arraign the Republican party as having corrupted and debauched the public service, assailed the will of the people at the ballot box, favored monopolists, made large grants of the public lands, subverted the Constitution, and maintained itself solely by the power of patronage and plunder. They believe in that genuine and deep-reaching civil service reform which consists in the election to office of honest, intelligent, capable and courageous public servants, who will faithfully administer their trust, and who will be held to strict accountability for such discharge of it. They denounce the sham methods of the Civil Service Commission in its pretended examination of candidates for place, together with the disgraceful system of bargain and sale of office which is now practiced by the Federal Government as shown by the abuse of patronage in Virginia and other States.

First. The people should only be taxed so much as is absolutely indispensable for the frugal conduct of their public affairs—not one cent for surplus and no unnecessary taxation; the existing surplus in the Treasury should be faithfully applied to the payment of the public debt; the money not needed for the expenses of the Government should remain in the pockets of the people; to this end we favor the entire abolition of the present system of internal taxation, a nursery of spies and informers, a menace to the freedom of elections, a source of the greatest corruption and a special intolerable and unnecessary burden upon the taxpayers. We insist that the public lands shall be reserved to actual settlers—not another acre for monopolies—that the dignity of American labor shall be defended—as also the rights of American citizens at home and abroad.

Second. We favor a tariff for revenue, limited to the necessary expenditure of the Government, and so adjusted as to give protection and encouragement to home productive industry and labor, without producing or fostering monopolies.

Third. We point with pride to the successful administration of our State affairs under Democratic rule, and we invite the co-operation of men of all parties in continuing that rule to the end, that the welfare and happiness of the people be secured.

Fourth. We contrast the honest and economical management of State affairs by Democratic hands with the corrupt and disgraceful administration of the Federal Government, under Republican rule, with its Credit Mobilier, its Whiskey Rings, its Star Route frauds, and other like iniquities.

Fifth. We demand the equalization of taxes on all properties within the State, whether that of individuals or corporations; no hindrance to legitimate enterprise; no encouragement to monopolies; all government in the interest of the whole people.

Sixth. Every legitimate effort of labor to better its condition, enhance its rewards and protect its rights commands the sympathy and support of the Democratic party, which is the natural foe of monopoly and the natural friend of the workingman; the present unprecedented and unsatisfactory condition of the relations of labor and capital demands the careful thought of legislators; due regard should be had to the vested rights of capital and the claims of private enterprise.

Which is a clearly worded declaration of Democratic principles, and, if carried into practical effect, will brighten national reputation and augment the prosperity of all the people—not a privileged few—but the many millions.

For Governor,
LEON ABBETT.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

The Republican Gubernatorial Convention, at Trenton, Tuesday last, was a tame affair. The leaders had decided the night before whom the candidate for Governor should be. After receiving declinations from such prominent men as F. A. Potts, John Hill, Phelps and Toffey, the managers decided that Judge Jonathan Dixon, of the Supreme Court Bench, last appointed by Gov. Ludlow, should be their standard bearer. Senator Hobart, of the State Committee, called the Convention to order and Senator John Taylor, of Trenton, was afterward made the permanent chairman. A platform was adopted lauding the Republican party to the skies, endorsing President Arthur's administration, a tariff so adjusted as to give full protection to home labor and industry and sufficient to develop all resources of the country, &c., &c. Judge Dixon was nominated on the first ballot, receiving 416 votes to 228 for "Honest" John Hill. Jonathan Dixon, the candidate, was born in Liverpool, England, in the year 1839, and came to this country when he was eleven years of age.

New Jersey doesn't want a foreign born Governor. Judge Dixon, the Republican candidate, was born in England. Judge Dixon must go—but not to Trenton.

EDSALL'S!

SEPTEMBER 13th, 1883.

We are making ample preparations for the

Fall and Winter Trade

and the most important article in demand just now seems to be

Merino Underwear!

and though the season is about a month ahead of last year, yet we are prepared this early to meet the demand for these goods—having bought ahead of our wants. The Ladies' Merino Vest we sell this season for 50 cents is the best we have ever sold at that price. There is a special number of

Finer Wool

which we shall sell equally as low in proportion. The Men's Merino

Shirts and Drawers,

we sell this year at 50 cents, is as good as is often sold for 65 cents. We think we have made a "BIG STRIKE" in securing this line of goods. Don't buy your Merino goods in either Ladies, Gent's or children's until you have examined our new stock. You will certainly make a mistake if you do. We show a better line of this season than usual and think we shall be able to increase our sales largely in this Department. You will do well to look at them. All of our departments will be well supplied with Seasonable Goods, and we are determined to make prices on them that will command a ready sale.

AN incendiary attempt to fire a barn situated in a thickly settled part of Dunellen last Thursday night, was happily frustrated by the fire being discovered in time to be extinguished by neighbors before any damage was done.

THE announcement of the Mount Holly Fair will be found on our second page of to-day. $12,000 in premiums will go far to insure that which the managers claim—"the greatest variety of attractions shown at any agricultural fair."

THERE was to be a social meeting of the officers and Teachers of the Crescent avenue Sunday School, this (Thursday) evening, from 8 to 10 o'clock, at the residence of the superintendent, Mr. H. B. Newhall. But owing to a death in the family of the latter, the affair is postponed.

AT the primaries held in this city, last Saturday evening, the following were elected delegates to the Republican Gubernatorial Convention: First Ward—J. B. Coward, Second Ward—Wm. Thompson, Third Ward—Chas. W. Kimball, Fourth Ward—J. B. Miller and Robert Simpson.

Personalia.

Miss Florence Tyson, daughter of Major Tyson of Brooklyn, is visiting friends in this city.

Mr. Edgar Murphy, son of ex-collector Thomas Murphy, has been spending the past week at Netherwood Hotel.

Miss Maggie Flynn and Miss Lizzie Carney, of this city, started on Monday last for Meriden, Conn., on a two week's visit to friends in that city.

Ex-Governor Bedle of New Jersey who fell and broke his leg a few days ago, met with another misfortune Monday in the sudden death of his eleven-year-old daughter.

At the residence of Mrs. S. J. Squier, No. 183 Grand street, Rahway, Tuesday evening Miss K. Mable Tucker was married to Mr. N. Whitfield French of this city, by the Rev. Mr. Pomeroy.

Mr. Monroe Cushing, a former resident of this city, who still numbers many friends in the community, is spending a few weeks in this section of the country making arrangements for the publication of the State Directory of Florida, which he has recently compiled.

The attention and care that Mr. Thos. S. Armstrong, the manager of Reynold's Pharmacy, has so long entirely exerted for the benefit of the host of patrons with whom he is so justly popular, is now divided. A young gentleman arrived, Saturday morning, who will shortly accompany his father in successive nightly promenades around the bedroom. Mrs. Armstrong is doing exceedingly well.

The sudden demise of Mrs. T. B. Brown of Madison avenue, is undoubtedly as sad an occurrence, by reason of its attendant circumstances, as the public have known of in many months. The evening before her death the deceased was seemingly in perfect health, yet a day afterward a husband had been deprived of a life's companion, children had irreparably lost the love and guidance of a mother, while an infant was left without the soft arms to encircle it and the tender heart to beat for it, that were intended by nature. The funeral services took place on Sunday at four o'clock p. m. at the residence. Interment at Greenwood the next day.

Governor Abbett.

Hon. Leon Abbett, Democratic candidate for Governor of New Jersey, will be at the Union & Middlesex Counties' Fair, this city, on Wednesday, Sept. 26th.

Hard for His Neighbor.

Mr. Spurgeon being asked whether a man could be a Christian and belong to a brass band, replied, "Yes, I think he might; but it would be a very difficult matter for his next door neighbor to be a Christian."

We Hope So.

The iron-work for the completion of the Grove street bridge is "on its way." The bill has been received, so it is fair to expect the material will arrive very soon and the structure built the full width of the street before Winter sets in.

Oh! Do Something.

At the last regular monthly meeting of the Council, $250 was appropriated for the use of the Street Committee. May we beg that just a little—just a very little—of it be used in repairing Seventh and some of the worst of the streets in the inhabited part of the city.

Going to Stay.

It seems unnecessary for us to praise the delicacy of Dalbert's real french cream, his many customers know well how nice it is and how pure its flavors. On our second page to-day he announces his intention to remain in Plainfield all Winter and cater to the wants of his large list of patrons.

They'd be Sorry to Lose Him.

We learn that the services of the Rev. J. Beers, minister of the Episcopal church of Dunellen, are earnestly sought by a parish in another Diocese. Mr. Beers has, in a few months, gathered a large and appreciative congregation and if he should remove it would be a great loss to the Dunellen community.

Well Done!

All outstanding accounts having been settled, the Treasurer of the Look Out League of this city has turned over to the officers of the Children's Home the balance of the profits of the late fair held in the Crescent avenue church by the young ladies of that League. The full amount was $250—representing a success that has never been equalled by so small a band of workers.

A Proper Demand.

Most undoubtedly the Children's Home Association of Plainfield has saved the city thousands of dollars. It has taken charge of, fed and clothed, and provided homes for many little ones that would otherwise have grown up to be supported by the community. The Association is now in want of money, and no more proper use could be made of a portion of the Poor Fund of the city, than to appropriate at least $500 therefrom for the Children's Home.

Unusual Unjustness.

Again vacancies occuring in the list of teachers of our public schools, have been filled by the appointment of imported graduates instead of by the deserved promotion of those whose past labors demand it. We are told by one in authority that "graduates of the P. H. S., are not fitted for the positions," which speaks badly for the thoroughness of their education, were it true. It is, however, false—there are teachers fully as competent that are kept in charge of grades lower than those assigned to the annual importations.

They Own One Church Already.

The acceptance of an elegant building site in North Plainfield—with which the Trinity Reformed church of this city will be presented by Mrs. Judge Roome, if the church agrees to build thereon—is under consideration. The Consistory does not meet until the early part of next month, when the matter will possibly be discussed, but no definite action is probable. The property is a triangle on Willow avenue just off of Washington, and opposite the residence of Messrs Chas. Wann, J. M. Bettman and others.

A Big Haul.

Sometime during Friday night last, thieves entered the residence of Wm. Mayer, Esq., of West Seventh street, and stole a quantity of valuable silver ware. They were heard by some of the inmates of the house about 2:30 o'clock Saturday morning, but escaped with their booty. Among the articles stolen were: two solid silver bread baskets, ice-cream and coffee spoons, gold-lined sugar bowl, wine stands, oyster forks, nut crackers, etc., all in silver and to the value of about $400. Also commutation tickets for the next five months. No trace is as yet obtained of the identity of the thieves.

Do It By All Means.

It is proposed to re-organize the Plainfield Vocal Society for the coming season, but before taking any definite steps to this end, it has been deemed advisable to obtain an expression from the former members as to whether they favor the project, and whether they will interest themselves in the movement, and pledge their support in active work, provided the re-organization is effected. In such relation a circular has been sent the former members of the Society requesting their views on the subject. The circular is signed by Messrs Mc Cutchen, Myers, Titsworth, Mc Gee, Cock, Davis and Howland.

First Exhaust the Power You Have.

During the efforts of our POLICE FORCE, Tuesday, to convey a disorderly lad to the Station house, some outsiders were called upon to assist, and upon their refusal were arrested. One or two plead sickness and were discharged by the Mayor with a warning never to refuse again. Another was brought before Justice Wadsworth and immediately set at liberty. As the latter read the law, the power possessed must first be exhausted before the services of a citizen can be demanded—but Justice Wadsworth was unaware that one young man was sufficient to exhaust the power of the Plainfield POLICE FORCE.

Instantly Killed.

A sad accident occurred on Wednesday evening at the Central avenue crossing, Westfield, in the killing of John Feeley, a flagman, who in flagging a coal train drawn by engine No. 114, going West at 8:25 on the south side track, was struck by the engine and instantly killed. His body was dragged for nearly a quarter of a mile and mangled beyond recognition. Those who witnessed the occurrence say that Mr. Feeley had gone from the flag house to the crossing to flag the train; his brother Hugh was coming down the avenue and attempted to cross in front of the engine when Feeley stepped on the track to save his brother and was killed himself. Mr. Feeley was aged about 50 years. He had been a flagman at the Central avenue crossing for over eleven years, and was considered by everybody to be a very careful man. He leaves a wife and two children to mourn his loss. The body was placed in charge of undertaker Connoly by the County Physician, on Wednesday night, and on Thursday morning an examination into the circumstances of the accident was had by County Physician Terrill. A permit was subsequently granted for burial, and the body given to the family.

The Firemen to Parade.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department held a special meeting, Monday evening, at which were present all of the members excepting Messrs. Morris and Depew. It was voted to order an inspection, review and parade of the Department to take place Thursday, Oct. 11th, and $250 will be divided among the companies towards the expenses attendant. The houses of No's 1 and 2 Engine Co's are to be frescoed inside similar to the Truck house, and the Hose carriages of No's 1, 2 and 3 to be re-painted.

Somerset County's Fourteenth.

Commencing Oct. 2d, and continuing for three days, the Somerset County Agricultural Society will hold its Fourteenth Annual Fair at Somerville. Nearly $3,000 in premiums offered in competitions, open to the world. The Grounds of this Society are among the best arranged for the display of stock, implements and products in the State, and have recently been put in good condition. The speed premiums are very generous, and a superior display of horses and cattle is already assured. A good brass band will be in attendance.

Belligerent, But Dizzy.

Steele's Grove, Saturday afternoon, was the location selected by two frequenters of the Boulevard de Erin, for the settling of the claims of each to the title of champion heavy-weight. Seconds were chosen, a stake-holder and a referee as sober as could be found in the neighborhood (for it snowed very hard, Saturday) were selected, but the fight was subsequently declared off by reason of the inability of either of the combatants to "strike-out" without falling over. The police were on the ground, but made no effort to prevent the fight—for a very good reason.

Bicycling.

In connection with the Fair of the Union & Middlesex Counties Mutual Agricultural Association, the Plainfield Bicycle Club will give two races on the grounds of the Association, Wednesday, the 26th inst, at 12 o'clock. The races will be open only and to all amateur wheelmen in the two counties and North Plainfield, and will be ridden under the rules and with the sanction of the League of American Wheelmen. There will be a one mile scratch race, best two in three, prize a gold and a silver medal; and a half-mile scratch race, best two in three, prizes a silver cup, presented by J. W. Johnson, Esq., and a long distance saddle and alarm.

Young Men Be Warned in Time.

The days of next month will include the several dates selected for the nuptials of five young couple of this city, whose names we are not at liberty to publicly announce. The brides are two sisters of Union avenue, one of a family of many daughters residing on Seventh street, a young lady from the suburbs, and a belle of North Plainfield. The unfortunate grooms are well-known members of our first society. When the good fortune of the ladies becomes generally known, we may expect an exodus of that sex to this city. Five weddings in one month will gain for Plainfield the reputation of being a "good stand" in the matrimonial market. Our sex will consequently take warning and decamp in time. The Plainfield batchelor must go!

Autumnal Reception.

The young men of Plainfield and all interested in the work of the Young Men's Christian Association are cordially invited to attend the Autumnal gathering next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Prof I. Bradford Williams, an elocutionist of rare talent has kindly consented to provide the programme, and all who attend may feel assured of a rare literary treat. The ladies of the Auxiliary will be present and aid in the reception. This is not one of the monthly receptions, but a special gathering arranged for all, in order that ladies and gentlemen interested in the work may meet one another. Will young men who read this notice remember that an invitation is extended to them and be present. The regular monthly receptions will be resumed in Oct. or November.

A Landmark Gone.

Quite a crowd assembled upon the site of the proposed Opera House, Monday afternoon last, drawn by the notice of the sale of the old homestead of the Stillman family. Curiosity, however, and not a desire to purchase, had induced the attendance, as when the hour for the sale arrived, not a possible bidder was visible. After a whispered consultation between the contractors of the Opera House, the sale was started by a bid from Isaac Melbourn of $25, which was raised by some unknown to $30 and subsequently to $35 by the first bidder. In spite of the auctioneer's assurance of $100 worth of new slate on "the extension" and a $40 mantel in the parlor, the last figure took the homestead. The barn was then sold to Mr. P. M. Demarest, the grocer, for $25, and the purchaser will remove it over the brook.

"They All Do It."

"Nor shall such licensed person or persons at any time incite, encourage or permit any game or device to be played, practiced or carried on within such licensed place . . . . . . billiards or nine-pins, if named in such license, alone excepted."

So reads the law, and a resolution instructing the Corporation Counsel to begin proceedings against its violators was presented in the Council, Tuesday evening, and laid on the table. The effect of such action was considered in its relation to the Hotel Netherwood (which pays a full year's license for only a few months privilege) and the postponement of the adoption of the resolution was principally in order to consider the possibility of now inserting in the Hotel's license the right to keep a billiard room and bowling alley. The other licensed places in the city, are, however, to be prosecuted—excepting the saloon of Mr. James H. Force, whose license permits the keeping of a billiard room.

He Was Little, but Oh!

Young Dady of this city was "a little full" on Front street, Tuesday afternoon, and was arrested therefor by Chief Chase. While on his way to the lock-up, some one said "don't yer go, Jimmy," and the prisoner thereupon concluded he wouldn't. From the corner of Second street and Park avenue, it took twenty-eight minutes to drag the prisoner to the jail. He kicked, bit and struck all that attempted to take him. As many as six and eight at a time were unable to move him. Chief Chase was kicked twice in the stomach, and with Officer Grant was thrown three times on the sidewalk. Crowds gathered along the street—on wagons and boxes, and filling the windows and door-ways. The Mayor, the Chairman of the Police Committee and other prominent citizens lent their efforts, but for some time to no effect. The excitement was intense—the people were wild and so was Jimmy. He was subsequently put in the jug, and Wednesday morning appeared before his Honor the Mayor to plead "not guilty" through his counsel, George P. Suydam, Esq., to charges of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The examination was set down for this (Thursday) afternoon in the Council Chamber. Other charges of resisting an officer, and assault and battery, will be tried elsewhere.

PLAINFIELD'S OPERA HOUSE.

Work Commenced—The Contractors—The Plans.

In spite of our weekly reports of the progress making in the designing of the Stillman Music Hall, the public—naturally impatient for the final attainment of a long-felt desire—have been lacking in faith, no steps in the matter being apparent to the eye. Since our last issue, however, in which we announced the awarding of the contracts, ground has been broken, and the building of the foundations commenced. The Board of Directors met Monday of last week, opened the estimates that had been solicited and received from several contractors, and passed a resolution to the effect that the Building Committee award the contracts for the masonry and carpentering to the lowest bidder. This committee, consists of Messrs. Alfred Berry, John B. Dumont, Alex. Gilbert, George Opdyke, W. H. Potts, Mason Tyler and Charles Tweedy.

THE CONTRACTS.

The contracts awarded are to the effect that the contractor shall, under the direction and to the satisfaction of E. L. Roberts, architect, perform all of a certain kind of work included in the specifications for the erection and completion of a Music Hall or Opera House in the City of Plainfield. That he shall take down all portions of such work which the Architect shall condemn as unsound or in any way failing to conform to the drawings, or specifications, or conditions of contract. He shall permit the Architect, and all persons appointed by him, to visit and inspect the said work at all times and places during the progress. He shall and will proceed with the said work and every part and detail thereof in a prompt and diligent manner, and shall and will wholly finish the said work according to the drawings and specifications, on or before the first day of May, 1884. In case the contractor shall refuse or neglect to supply a sufficiency of properly skilled workmen and of materials of proper quality, or shall fail to prosecute the work with promptness or diligence, the Building Committee can terminate the employment of such contractor and employ any other person to finish the same and provide the materials therefore. Under such conditions the mason work is to be completed by Mr. Isaac Melbourn for the sum of $11,485—$500 of which is to be paid by that amount of stock in the Association. Under the same conditions the carpenter work is to be performed by Mr. Jeremiah Manning for the sum of $15,627—$350 of which, in stock. The money to be paid at specified points of the progress of the work, when so certified to by the architect. The amounts received in stock, making each contractor the holder of ten shares.

THE ARCHITECT.

It cannot be but a source of congratulation that so experienced and able an architect as Mr. E. L. Roberts was entrusted with the planning of the work, and that it is to be built under the supervision of so thorough a director. This gentleman whose reputation is so enviable, has followed the profession of architecture in all its branches since boyhood, and is known throughout the country as the builder of some of the most complete and faultless public buildings in the States. He is known as an architect who has never commenced a structure that was not finished, and finished, also, by the original contractors, according to the original specifications and estimates. Plainfield, thanks to Mr. Roberts, is to have one of the most perfect Opera Houses, and built, too, at a cost within the amount subscribed.

THE BUILDING.

It is of course too early to give in every detail an idea of the appearance of the Hall when fully completed and ready for occupancy. Its style of interior decoration, upholstering, &c., is not yet decided upon; and if some faint conception of the coloring of the walls and the kind of chairs, etc., to be adopted is possessed by the Committee and Architect, many causes for a change of mind in such relation may arise before it becomes necessary to make a final decision.

The main entrance which is to be on Front street, will be 19 feet wide by 16 feet high, and extend back into a hall way about 120 feet, when the building itself will be reached. Here will be a commodious foyer or lobby, with ascending stairways to the right and left leading to the gallery. Three entrances will open out of this lobby into the parquette floor. Whether there will be provided another entrance by way of North Plainfield, is yet undecided, but is hardly probable. Exits will be made through the main entrance as described above, but in case of emergency numerous ways on all sides of the building can be thrown open. No special provision, *however, has yet been made for the ex*tinguishing of a fire. Tanks will undoubtedly be constructed to furnish water for dressing and toilet rooms, and if sufficient capacity is provided they can be made available in case of fire. This is a matter that will demand the attention of the Committee and the Architect as soon as the building approaches completion; more especially as the structure will not be fire-proof, and the material used in the construction of its floors, roof, stairways, etc., is wood, the same as the majority of New York theatres.

Under the entire building will extend a basement, in which will be six dressing rooms, two toilet rooms, a large green room, entrances to the stage, and the heating and ventilating apparatus. The interior of auditorium will be lighted by day with windows of ordinary glass, about seven feet above the ground outside and four feet above the floor inside. At night it will be lighted by gas from chandeliers and side-wall brackets. *Steam and hot-air will heat the entire in*terior. The method of ventilation designed is to be most effective, and we shall at a later day describe the principle adopted and the results that will be accomplished. Suffice it to say, that Wallack's theatre of New York, which cost $300,000 is not as satisfactory ventilated as will be the Plainfield Music Hall.

The parquette floor and gallery are to be furnished with chairs twenty-two inches wide—an unusually wide seat—and will have a permanent capacity of 1,000. This can be increased if necessary to 1,400 by the addition of aisle seats—the lower floor having five aisles from three to six feet in width, and the gallery six. The stage will comfortably seat 400, and directly faces the entrance. The front row of the parquette is to be ten feet from the stage, and in this space will be built the orchestra in the usual form. Each side of the proscenium will be entrances to the stage. The gallery will run about three-fourths of the way along each side-wall and will be supported by iron columns and iron girders. The shape of the auditorium and gallery is that of a horse-shoe, and the seats are arranged in a circular form as is usual in most theatres. On the main floor are to be situated the ladies' toilet-rooms, furnished with every comfort and convenience. At the head of the gallery stairs, which will be of easy ascent, large landings will open into the Hall. The exterior of the building will be of rough brick.

Nothing has yet been done in relation to the erection of the building on Front street, through which the entrance to the Hall is to be made. Until the leases held on the property adjoining, which is to be included in the new building, have expired, no steps will be taken in the matter. We may as well state, however, that the two buildings will be about twenty-three feet apart, and not connected in any way excepting so far as the main hallway extends under one and into the other. Neither have the contracts for plumbing, gas-fitting, heating and ventilating apparatus, painting, upholstering, etc., been given out.

SOME FIGURES.

The width of the auditorium, from side-wall to side-wall of the interior, will be 76 feet. From the back wall of the auditorium to the front of the stage, 85 feet. From lower floor to "dome" or ceiling, 40 feet. The floor of the gallery is to be 12 feet above the lower floor. The rear of the auditorium will be three feet higher than the front, and the stage will be three feet above the orchestra floor. The stage will be 40 feet deep and 73 feet wide. The proscenium opening will be 34 feet high, by 28 feet wide.

The $40,000 subscribed will be sufficient to build, paint and decorate, put in gas fixtures, heating and ventilating apparatus, upholstered chairs, drop-curtains, &c., but does not pay for any scenery. This will come, however, without any trouble; in fact, it is believed that before the building is ready to furnish, the philanthropic stock-holders will vote to increase the capital stock, and give the public eight-dollar-velvet-seated arm-chairs, moquette carpet, electric lights and an unlimited amount of scenery.

Union & Middlesex Counties' Fair.

The above Fair commences at Plainfield Monday next, Sept. 24th, and continues to and closes Thursday night. On Wednesday Hon. Leon Abbett, Democratic candidate for Governor, will visit the grounds. In the speed department there is promise of some of the finest trotting ever witnessed on these grounds. Below are the entries thus far. Entries for the running and county races have been left open until next Saturday night.

Church Anniversary.

The Congregation of All Saints' Episcopal church of Scotch Plains, intend (D. V.) to celebrate the anniversary of the opening of their church, on Sunday, September 30th, at 10:30 a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. The organist of St. Ann's church, Brooklyn, Mr. Archibald Arthur and his choir which rendered the music at the opening of the church, have kindly volunteered their services for the occasion.

"Five Doors to the Left."

It is with pleasure that we each Season call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of McGregor & Co., he clothiers, of No's 850 and 852 Broad street, Newark. This firm buys for cash only, and all their goods are exclusively their own manufacture. Their well-known reputation for first-class garments and low prices, needs no repetition by us. Upon leaving the station entrance on Broad street, Plainfielders should turn to the left five doors and enter the "iron front."

Here They Are Again!

As will be seen by our advertising columns, all the new and latest styles of Fall clothing are now ready at Marshall & Ball's establishment, No's 807, 809 and 811 Broad street, Newark. One or two seasons have passed since Plainfielders last heard of this firm, and they may have supposed it had retired from business, but such is not the fact. It, and its courteous salesmen still live, ready to accommodate you with the best at the lowest prices, and to make good all that proves unsatisfactory.

Mr. Serrell presented a communication from the managers of the Children's Home, requesting an appropriation from the Poor Fund to assist the Association in its work.

On motion, ref'd to the Alms Com.

The Com. appointed to examine the Collector's books, then reported its approval of the same which was received, and the books accepted.

Mr. Marsh moved that the rate of interest on delinquent taxes for the coming year be fixed at 10 per cent.

The resolution previously adopted appointing the official papers of the city was rescinded, all voting aye, and a resolution designating the Central Times and THE CONSTITUTIONALIST as the official papers, was unanimously adopted.

The ordinance to regulate the cleaning of cess-pools, etc., was ordered engrossed preparatory to its final passage.

The Clerk was directed to duly advertise the two last ordinances passed by the Council.

Mr. Serrell presented a resolution directing the Corporation Counsel to at once commence proceedings against the licensed places that provide tables and devices for the playing of games in violation of the ordinance.

Mr. Marsh took the chair and the President moved that the resolution be laid on the table until the next meeting of the Council. Carried.

In reply to Mr. Marsh, Mr. Serrell stated that a report in the Clark matter may be expected soon.

The Council then adjourned.

WANTED—A DAUGHTER.

'An actress, sir? Never!' said Mr. Philander Greentree, in a voice that made the windows rattle in their frames.

'And 'Never' echoed his meek little wife, but in so faint a tone that it didn't disturb in the least the fly that was sitting on one of the pretty white puffs on her dear old head.

'And if you persist in being in love with the young woman, you must cease to be an inmate of my house,' shouted Mr. Greentree. 'And if you marry her, by heavens! I'll scratch you.'

'Yes, we'll be obliged to scratch you,' added the old lady, as mildly as she had spoken before, looking at the same time as though it would be utterly impossible for her to scratch any one under any circumstances whatever. Not that they meant scratching in the common sense of the word. Scratching the young man's name from his uncle's will was the punishment they threatened.

'And I'll never give you a penny,' thundered Uncle Philander.

'Oh, William, think of that!—not even a penny,' said Aunt Tamasin.

'And I'll adopt a girl—I will, by heavens!' the old man went on, growing more and more angry every minute. 'No more ungrateful boys for me. And she'll marry to please us, and her children shall be our grandchildren.'

'My dear boy, consider,' entreated the old lady. 'How dreadful, how very dreadful, for us to have strange grandchildren!'

'Uncle and aunt—I suppose I must call you father and mother no longer,' said the young man, slowly and firmly—'I am truly sorry to vex you, but I have plighted my faith to Miss Fieldbrook, and I cannot and will not break it. She is an actress, but as good and lovely a girl as ever trod the earth—sweeter and lovelier than any girl it has been my lot to meet. And if you would only allow me to bring her here—'

'Bring her here!' repeated his uncle, stamping about the room in his rage. 'Here where your mother—I mean your Aunt Tamasin—has lived in quiet, virgin—I mean quiet, holy—I mean quietness and peace, sir, for nearly half a century? How dare you even think of such a thing, sir? An actress capering around these apartments! Good heavens!'

''Twouldn't be exactly right, William, you know,' said Aunt Tamasin. 'I never was a caperer, and at my time of life I don't think I could get used to one. I don't indeed.'

'Oh, you dear, funny old mother—auntie—' began Will, with a smile, but encountering his uncle's wrathful eyes and frowning brow he grew serious again, and said: 'Well, if you positively refuse to receive Eva, I suppose we must part. I am very, very thankful for all you have done for me since I was left a fatherless and motherless boy; but give up the woman I love for a thoroughly unreasonable prejudice of yours I cannot and will not. And so good-bye. Uncle, will you shake hands with me?'

'No, I won't,' replied Mr. Greentree, brusquely.

'Aunt, will you let me kiss you?'

'Of course I will, my dear boy,' said Mrs. Greentree. 'And if you change your mind, come back to us directly. We start for Greentree cottage in a few days, you know, and I shall keep your room ready for you there all summer.'

'No, don't, auntie dear,' kissing her not once, but three or four times, 'for I shall not change my mind, and perhaps, being one of the prettiest rooms in the house, my room may be chosen by your adopted daughter. And I hope from the bottom of my heart that she may spend as many happy hours there as I have. Good-bye, fath—uncle.'

But Uncle Philander answered not by look nor word, and as the hall door closed after his nephew he exclaimed again: 'An actress! By heavens! the boy's gone mad, and I wash my hands of him forever.'

'Don't say forever,' begged Aunt Tamasin. 'Forever's a long time—a very long time, Philander. And, oh dear! how I shall miss him! Such a good child as he has always been ever since he came to us fifteen years ago! Better in some things even than you, Philander; for you know you always say bad words when I lose my spectacles, which he never did, but looked for them time and again with the patience of an angel.' And taking off said spectacles she proceeded to lose them once more by laying them on the back of the sofa, whence they dropped to the floor behind it, where, with the dreadful 'depravity of inanimate things,' they remained snugly hidden, while she wept silently in her large lemon-verbena scented handkerchief.

A few days after Will Greentree bade them 'good-bye' the old couple were installed for the summer season in their comfortable country house, Greentree cottage. And to Greentree cottage came, before they had been there a week, this note from one of their oldest and most intimate friends:

NEW YORK, June 20, 1882.

MY DEAR TAMASIN AND PHILANDER: You told me, you will remember, just as you were leaving the city, that you would like to receive into your home this summer some young girl—the more friendless the better for your purpose—with a view, should she prove lovable and entertaining, to adopting her. Strange as it may appear, you had not gone more than two hours when I met a young girl who, I think, will suit you to a charm. She is pretty, of cheerful disposition, tolerably well educated, and naturally very clever; is an orphan (her grandmother and only relative, with whom she lived, having died three weeks ago) homeless. I have spoken to her about your wish, and she is perfectly willing—nay, anxious—to come to you. And I am sure her companionship will add to your happiness, and help you to forget the disobedience of your self-willed nephew. Anyhow, receive her as a summer guest for my sake, for I loved and lost her mother; that is, she married the other chap. Faithfully yours,

JAMES TOWNLY.

Mr. Greentree's face brightened as he read this note. 'There, my dear,' he said, handing it to his wife, 'Townly—he always was the best and most reliable old chum a fellow ever had—has already found our daughter. For this girl will certainly please us, being heartily approved of by him. Pretty, clever and cheerful.'

'Yes, so he says,' said his wife; 'but he needn't have called poor William bad names, for all that. And I won't give her the boy's room. There's so many trousers and boots and baseball and fishing things in it, that couldn't be of the slightest use to her, and would only be in her way.'

'Do as you like about that, my dear,' rejoined Mr. Greentree, who, to tell the truth, was secretly pining for the discarded one, and anxious to have some young life in the cottage; 'but see that the room she is to have is got ready immediately, for I shall telegraph to Townly to send her at once.'

And he did. And the result of the telegram was that the very next morning Miss Zerelda Ardemann made her best courtesy to the old lady and gentleman who wanted a daughter.

And never were any elderly people so quickly and entirely bewitched by any fair maiden as were Philander and Tamasin Greentree by this same violet-eyed, golden-haired, sweet-voiced, petite Zerelda Ardemann.

And as day followed day, and week followed week, she became more and more dear to them. She went through the house from morn until eve, warbling like a bird, and when evening came she sat at the old-fashioned piano and sang the quaint old English ballads that Tamasin used to sing in her youth, while Philander, brave in swallow-tailed, brass buttoned blue coat, turned the pages of the music with gentle hand. She tripped lightly over field and meadow every day, and culled the loveliest of wild flowers, which with a grace that was all her own she arranged in vases and shells, and whatever she could find to hold them, until each room looked like a fairy bower.

And many a beautiful poem she repeated with rare skill in the gloaming, bringing the happy tears to the eyes of her delighted listeners.

'Ah! if Will had only made her his choice!' the old lady would say to her husband at least a dozen times a day.

'By heavens! if he had,' that impulsive individual would reply, 'he wouldn't have waited long for my blessing.'

The summer passed pleasantly, very pleasantly, away, and the advent of autumn found Mr. and Mrs. Greentree more in love than ever, if that were possible, with their charming guest.

'And do you think you could love us enough to call us father and mother, and to promise that when you give your whole heart to some one else you will not forsake us?' asked Mrs. Greentree of Zerelda one sunny September day.

'I know I could—I know I do,' answered the girl, emphatically. 'But I have a confession to make to you that I fear will turn you from me.'

'My dear, it must be something very terrible to do that. But make it at once, and have it over. Philander! Philander! Zerelda has something to tell us which she fears will make us love her less. Please come and hear it.'

Philander dropped the newspaper he was reading on the porch and stepped into the dining-room through the open window. Zerelda stood in the center of the room with drooping head, but as soon as he had entered she tossed back the little ringlets that tried to shade the brightness of her eyes, placed her two little hands in the lace-trimmed pockets of her dainty apron, danced lightly across to where the old couple were now seated, side by side, and said, in a voice fraught with innocent cheeriness: 'After all, what I have to tell isn't so very bad. I have amused you both since I came here, haven't I? And I can go away at once if you wish me to go.' And then, dropping gracefully on one knee and folding her hands in pretty entreaty, she said: 'Please, sir, and please, ma'am, I am an actress, and my stage name is Eva Fieldbrook. But all that your friend Mr. Townly told you about me is true.'

'An actress!' exclaimed Mr. Philander Greentree.

'Eva Fieldbrook!' said his wife.

'Then you are the girl that Will—' began the old man.

'That Will—' repeated the old lady.

'That Will— The same,' replied Zerelda, demurely, still kneeling. 'Please forgive me for being that girl.'

But Mr. Greentree, without another word, bounced from his chair and tore out of the room. Zerelda sprang to her feet. 'I'd better begin packing at once,' she said, with a serious face. 'I'm sorry to have vexed him so much. But indeed it wasn't my scheme at all. Mr. Townly and Will made it up between them. They thought that if you knew me you would—'

'And we do,' interrupted the old lady, laying her hand lightly on her arm to detain her. 'Don't you do anything in haste, my dear. You don't understand Mr. Greentree as well as I do. Sometimes when he seems most angry he is most pleased. I'm sure he don't want you to go away.'

'Of course he don't. Who said he did?' asked the old gentleman, entering the room hastily again. 'I've just sent a telegram to Will telling him important business calls him here. There's another name for you, my dear—Important Business. Not as pretty as either of the others, but we'll find a fourth before we get through that will suit you best of all—Zerelda Greentree. How do you like it?'

'And I sha'n't have grandchildren the least bit strange after all,' said Aunt Tamasin, a bright smile lighting up her dear good old face.—Margaret Eytinge, in Harper's Weekly.

Sea Coast Game.

The ordinary times and seasons for principal game fowl and the names of the fowl themselves which are common on the New Jersey coast are as follows:

Wild geese and brant, which arrive about the first of October, and remain until the last of March. Very plentiful.

Black duck, about the same as above.

Broad bills, arrive about the 15th of October.

Cub-heads, dippers, and red-heads, habits similar to broad bills. Arrive in October and remain until about April 1st.

Gray ducks and teal arrive about Sept. 1st, leave in November, and come again for a short time in spring on their northern migration.

English snipe make their appearance about April 1st remain but a short time, go north, and return in October on their way south.

Wilson snipe, robin snipe, curlews and yellow legs come about the first of May, make a short stay, return in July, and remain till October.

Willets remain and breed in salt marshes.

Blue-fish appear about the middle of May, and leave in October.

Sheepshead appear about the 10th of June, and leave in October.

Striped bass, found in the rivers on the coast the entire winter; more plentiful in summer.

White perch come early and remain late; chiefly found in brackish waters and in rivers.

Black bass bite from June 1st, and cease about November 1st.

King fish or bard, come in July, and remain until October.

Flounder, summer, oblong in shape and comes in June, staying till October.

Flounder, winter, is the proper flounder, and is a winter fish; comes in October, and leaves in May.

The high school girl condemns the phrase "tumble to the racket" as vile slang. She says "precipitate in the direction of the clamor" is a more elegant expression.

THE NEGRO VOTE.

Signs of Disintegration—No Longer Solidly Republican.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—The last of the solid negro vote submissively led to the polls for the Republican ticket has been seen. A split broad and deep has taken place beyond the power of Douglass or Bruce to close. At the next election the vote will be divided between the two parties, though it is probable that where the colored people have not their own candidates, the Republicans will still have the larger part.

One feature of the movement of the negroes for independent action is the establishment of newspapers controlled by themselves. In nearly every Southern State there is such a paper, while in some places more than one has been established. In every instance, it is believed, the idea of independent action and of choosing between the parties "like white folks," as one paper expresses it, is upheld. Lynch, of Mississippi, formerly a member of Congress, one of the ablest of the colored leaders, is in open alliance with the Democrats and supported by a large following in the election of local officers. It is expected that the colored vote in the State will be about equally divided. Lynch claims that he will get more than half to go with him.

In Georgia, there are districts where the colored vote is absorbed about equally by the two parties. It is some time since the colored votes of that State have ceased to respond to the call of the Republican leaders. In Florida, an independent paper is about to be established by some of the foremost colored leaders, who have heretofore acted with the Republicans and held office, and some of whom are still in Federal employment.

Certain Republican leaders view with satisfaction the breaking up of the colored vote. The solid colored vote under the Republican banner was one factor which contributed to the existence of the solid South. It is obvious that present movements among the Southern negroes looking to independent action in politics are destined ultimately to effect important results to parties as well as to the negro race in the South. —N. Y. Sun.

AGAINST THE N. J. CENTRAL LEASE.

A bill has been filed in the Court of Chancery by Alfred Mills and John Lingerwood, executors of Stephen Vail, deceased, praying that the lease of the New Jersey Central R. R. to the Philadelphia and Reading be annulled and that a receiver for the Central be appointed. Mr. Vail was one of the incorporators and was the first President of the Central. The road paid ten per cent. dividends until 1877, when it became financially embarrassed in consequence of the falling off of the coal trade, and as the local business has been increasing, they claim that it can now pay more than six per cent. the rate at which it has been leased, and that if economically managed would again pay ten per cent. The estate holds 2,046 shares of the Central R. R. Co's stock.

They further contend that the P. & R. pays no dividends and has no hopes of paying any, and cannot pay its debts. The bill is based on the decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals in the case of Black vs. The Delaware and Raritan Canal Company, in which it is alleged it is held that after shareholders have entered into a contract by legislative sanction and expended money on the plan mutually agreed upon, the scheme cannot be radically changed by a majority, and a dissentient stockholder cannot be compelled to engage in a different undertaking without impairing his contract with his associates and with the State.

The statement that Lake Hopatcong is 600 feet higher than Lake George, is very likely to be news to some readers. The long journey up the Hudson, the heights of the Highlands, and the approach to the foot hills of the Adirondacks, are singularly deceptive. As a matter of fact, some places in New York city are about as high as Albany's Capitol, and the fall in the Hudson from Albany to New York is almost imperceptible. Our New Jersey lakes really needed only a gentle "boom" with good hotel accommodations, to give them the advantage of Lake George. They are quite as cool, as free from insect annoyances, and much more accessible. A couple of hundred thousand could be invested at Hopatcong or Greenwood Lake with better results than at most resorts.

The Heavenly Bodies.

The heavens above will present a brilliant spectacle to the earth below during the month of September. Venus reaches superior conjunction, the preparatory step that will make her the peerless starry gem of the evening sky in the near future. *Uranus arrives at con*junction and joins the whole array of outer planets now congregated on the sun's western side as morning stars. Saturn is in quadrature and will soon come beaming above the horizon in the early evening. Mars contributes to the show his conjunction with the star Delta Geminorum. Mercury appears for a short season in the glowing West, his last evening exhibition for the year. Jupiter foreshadows the supremacy of his later reign. Our nearest celestial neighbor, the moon, takes on her loveliest phase, that of the Harvest Moon. Even the great sun himself adds to the attraction of the month in his charming aspect at the autumnal equinox, when in harmonious equipoise he illumines the earth from pole to pole and day and night balance each other in celestial scales.

PRESENT POWER!

To-Morrow a long way off when help is wanted to-day.

Comfort is never in a hurry. Pain and distress are in hot haste. It is to the "friend in need"—the friend who does something now—that the old adage pays the compliment of being "a friend indeed." That they do not keep the sufferer in suspense is the salient excellence of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS. The plasters of other days—whether porous or otherwise—said "Wait until to-morrow; We can promise nothing on the spur of the moment." But pain unrelieved, like hope deferred, maketh the heart sick. Benson's plasters act on application. They permeate, soothe, warm and heal, containing as they do, chemical and medicinal agents of the highest efficiency. Their motto is now, and the genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of each plaster. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

POETRY.

THE DUDE.

He has the form of a man,
But minus the brain;
Wears toothpick shoes,
And carries a cane.

Is a street corner loafer
Who flirts with the fair,
But sensible girls
Of him should beware.

If married or single
Makes no difference at all,
So he makes a mash
At concert or ball.

It is the [illegible] missing link
In Darwin's plan,
To make his theory complete
About the monkey and man.

For the only difference
Between the monkey and dude
Is: One dresses esthetically
While the other goes nude.

New England should not
Import dudes to this shore;
Our country is full,
Completely run o'er.

Were Darwin alive,
Who would need to explain
That the dude is the link
He searched for in vain?

And it seems quite too bad,
The poor old man
Should have died too soon
To finish his plan.

THE BAD BOY'S FATTED CALF.

The Prodigal Son Business Doesn't Work, But He Turns Up A Winner On The Old Man.

"Hello, got back again, have you?" said the grocery man to the bad boy, as he came in the store looking tired, with his clothes soiled, and a general appearance of having been sleeping in freight cars with cattle, "Your pa told me he expected you had run away for good and that you might not come back. Where you been?"

"Chicago," said the boy, as he took out a toad stabber knife and proceeded to take the ulster off a smoked herring. "Been playing Prodigal Son, in two acts. But times have changed since that young fellow in the Bible went off on a tear and came back and the old folks killed a young cow for him to eat, and fell on his shirt collar and cried down the back of his neck. They don't receive prodigal sons that way in our ward. They fill a prodigal son's coat tails full of boots, and he can't find cold veal enough in the house to make a sandwich."

"I thought your folks were pious, and would be inclined to overlook anything," said the grocery man, as he charged the herring and crackers to the bad boy's father. "You don't mean to tell me they went back on the teachings of the good book, and warmed your jacket?"

"You have guessed it the first time," said the boy. "This prodigal son business is all right in theory, but in practice it's a dead failure. You see at Sunday school the lesson was about the prodigal son, and the minister told us all about how the boy took all the money he could scrape up and went away to a distant country and painted the towns red and spent his money like a countryman at a circus, and how he took in all the sights and got broke, and got hungry and took a job at the stockyards feeding pigs, and he was so hungry he used to help the pigs eat their rations, and finally he thought of his home, where they had pie, and he went home expecting to be fired out, but his pa was tickled to see him, and set up a free lunch of calf on the half shell, and hugged the boy and made him feel bully. When we got home pa and ma talked about the lesson, and pa said it was one of the most touching things he ever heard, and told me to think of it and it would do me good. Well, the more I thought of it the more I felt like trying the prodigal business on, and I told my chum about it, and he said he hadn't had any vacation and he would go off prodigaling with me if I would go, and we could see the country and have a good time and come back and be received with open arms. Well, we got all our money together, and a brakeman on a freight train, that goes to our church cause his wife sings in the choir, he hid us in the caboose, and we went to Chicago. O, my, but we had a good time. I never saw money wither the way it did with us. We eat about twenty times a day, the first two days, and then our appetites left us, because we didn't have any more money. The first two nights we slept in a two-shilling lodging house, the third night we walked around, and the four night we slept in the police station. When our money was gone, half the fun was gone. If a fellow can walk around with money in his pocket he feels good, even if he don't want to buy anything, but when the money is gone he feels bad, and wants to buy lots of things. We waited two days for our brakeman, and when we got on his train he put us in a cattle car, and it was vile. I traded my collar-button for a postal card, and wrote to pa that the prodigal would put in an appearance at nine p. m., and for him to prepare to fall on my neck, and to send down to the meat market for a hind quarter of fatted calf, and have plenty of gravy. You wouldn't believe it, but there was no carriage at the depot, and we had to walk home. I could have overlooked that, if there had been anything to eat when I got to the house, but there wasn't enough for a canary bird. Pa was there however, and I was just going to hold out my neck for pa to get on to weep, when he grabbed it with his hand and came near twisting it off, and then he turned me around and began to play bass drum on my clothes with his feet. I never was so annoyed in all my life, honestly. It was not the treatment I had a right to expect, after they had told me about the prodigal son of ancient times. As quick as I could catch my breath I asked pa what he thought the prodigal son of the Bible times would have thought if his pa had mauled him when he came home, and what kind of a story it would have made, if it had told about the old man taking him by the neck and kicking him all over the room instead of falling on his neck and weeping, and giving him a veal pot pie. Pa said he wasn't running any old back number prodigal sons, and he thought his way was the best, and he sent me to bed without any supper. That settles the prodigal business with Hennery. No more fatted calf for Hank, if you please," and the boy got up and shook the herring peelings off his lap.

"Well, how did your chum come out?" asked the grocery man, with much interest.

"Oh, he hasn't come out yet. He is in the lockup," said the boy. "His ma put the police onto him, and when he showed up they run him into the police station for a tramp. I think we have both demonstrated that this climate does not agree with the prodigal business, and however much they try to teach us the beauties of such stories they do not expect us to try to imitate them. When I go to Chicago after this I shall go in a parlor car, with lunch enough to last me, and a return ticket. I don't understand it at all. Now I didn't do half the mean things in Chicago that the prodigal son of old did in the far off country, and yet he got taffy when he got home and I got my spine broke. It may be all right, but they do things different in the old country, you know."

"If I understand the kind of a prodigal son your are," said the grocery man, as he sprinkled the floor from a wash basin, preparatory to the semi-annually sweeping out, "you have got even with your pa before this for his outrageous treatment. That is, mind you, I don't suggest anything for you to play on him, but from what I know of you the account is evened up before now. Am I right?"

"Well, I should remark. Any person who thinks I cannot resent such an insult makes a mistake as to the sort of a prodigal son I am. We had company at dinner to-day, and pa is alwas in his element when we have company. He prides himself on his carving. We had a roast of beef, and before it went on the table I took the steel that pa sharpens the carving knife on and made two holes right through the roast and then I took a rawhide whip that pa basted me with once, cut it in two and run pieces of the rawhide in the holes of the beef. Pa began carving with a smile and asked the minister if he would have his beef rare or an outside piece. He was bearing gently on the carving knife, when the knife struck the rawhide and it wouldn't go any farther. Pa smiled and said he guessed he had struck a barbed wire fence, and he turned the roast around and cut again and he struck the rawhide. The minister drummed with his fork and spoke to ma and said, 'We had a splendid meeting Wednesday night,' and ma said it was perfectly gorgeous, and pa began to perspire and turn red in the face, and he said some words that would sound better in a brewery, and he tried to gouge off some meat but it wouldn't come, and the minister said: 'Brother, you seem to be having a monkey and a parrot time with that roast,' and that made pa mad and he said he could carve his own meat without any sky pilot's interference, and ma said, 'Why, pa, you should not be impudent,' and pa said he could whip the butcher that sold him that piece of work ox, and he sent the beef out to the kitchen and the company ate cold liver. The girl set the meat in the ice chest, and pretty soon I went down cellar, 'cause I didn't like cold liver, and pulled out the rawhide, and I had all the fatted calf I wanted, and I gave the rest to that lame dog you see me have here a spell ago. Oh, a boy can get enough to eat if he has any originality about him. I think if pa would show a Christian spirit, and wear slippers when he kicks me. I would do anything to make it pleasant for him, but when a man wears out hunting boots on his own dear little prodigal, I think the prodigal is apt to get hard. Don't you?"

The grocery man admitted that perhaps the boy was right, and he raised such a cough sweeping out that the boy coughed, took a few peaches off the top of the basket and went out whistling, "Home again from a foreign shore."

DISCONTENT.

There comes a time in the life of every man when he devoutly wishes for a change. If he be a merchant he sorrowfully casts his eyes toward the banker, as that individual carelessly rolls by in his carriage. The banker, with outstanding loans and secret speculations, rides by the neat trim cottage of the independent laborer, and would gladly exchange his luxurious surrounding for the peace of mind that the poor man ought to possess. The poor laborer can see no pleasure in his lot and he turns with a groan from the sight of the sleek, well-dressed politician, who, since the election, passes him by unnoticed. The politician in an idle hour drops into the little ivy-overgrown church and listens in envy to the sacred word as preached by the pure-faced, blue-eyed minister, who reflects in many tones and gestures the love of a pure, undefiled and immaculate Savior. His life with all its twining and twisting, its wire-pulling and scheming, its betrayals and promises he would gladly give for the peace and contentment of this man, and yet the mild, pure, blue-eyed parson is not content; he would fain change places with most any man. His congregation is illiberal, unjust, miserly. It does not even thank the Lord for the gift of such a man, but on the contrary speaks fretfully, ill-temperedly, growlingly, in order that it may keep him humble. It is afraid that if he learns that he is a man of ability that they will have to raise his salary and they would rather lie, play the hypocrite, do anything that is mean rather than draw an extra cent from their well filled purses. They spend hundreds of dollars for their enjoyments, and cents for their religion. The poor parson is aware of this and devoutly wishes that the Lord had called him to some other work. Thus the world rolls on. Everybody believes everybody else happier than himself. The spirit of dissatisfaction is everywhere abroad and causes man to give himself trouble over nothing. The only man who is content with his lot is the one that owns one in a cemetery and occupies it. And it is very probable that even then his spirit is complaining that his lodgment must be alongside of a set of scoundrels instead of out yonder in the corner by the side of men good and great. But such is life, and perhaps death.

AN ACCIDENT.

A man at Long Branch recently entered a restaurant and said.

'Have you got any clam-chowder?'

'We have,' replied the waiter.

'Bring me a plate.'

A plateful was placed before him, and he set to work with great gusto. After he had taken about a dozen spoonsful he drew a pair of opera glasses from his pocket and looked intently at the chowder for some time.

Then he jumped in the air and shouted 'Eureka!'

'What's that?' asked the proprietor.

'I've got it,' yelled the diner.

'Got what?' asked the restauranteur.

'A clam.'

'Great Scott,' yelled the proprietor 'he's got the clam!'

And before the diner could say a word, the proprietor picked the clam up in a pair of gold pincers and bore it triumphantly to the kitchen, threw it back into a large boiler of chowder, and said:

'Who dealt the chowder to that dark-haired man over there?'

'I did,' said the assistant cook.

'Then you are discharged for dealing out the clam that we used for flavoring purposes.'

A RARE OLD BIRD.

"If it wasn't for us plumbers you reporters would go dry for funny items," remarked a plumber on Saturday to the reporter who called to inquire whether it would be cheaper to have a hole in his penstock pipe soldered up, or turn up the house, abandon the lot, and move out into the country and dig a well.

"Yes," you fellows are funny to everybody excepting your employers, but it's a serious matter to them," retorted the reporter.

"But the funniest thing ever said about a plumber has never found its way into print. A few years ago I was down to the Rouge on Sunday shooting, and killed a bird the likes of which I had never seen before. It was a water fowl, but what a fowl it was! It was all beak, wings and legs, and principally beak. I fetched it home, and the next morning took it up to Prof. Sill and asked him what it was?"

"Goodness knows!" exclaimed Sill, "I never saw one before, but from the length and size of its bill it must be a Plumber bird."

HONESTY.

How many honest people are there in the world? Some will say that all men are rascals, others that men are generally honest and both, to a certain extent, speak the truth. Take the world over and the majority of men are honest. They can be trusted with the interests of their fellow-beings and execute their trust with fidelity. They will render to every man his just due and be particular that no one is wronged even a pennyworth, and yet the question comes again and again are we really honest? In short how many of us are in the strict sense of the word honest? Policy, fear, pride, position cause us to be upright, but how many in heart would do as they do if they thought there would be no danger? How many men are there who would not gladly take $50,000 or a $100,000 if they were sure there would be no danger of detection? How many would resist a bribe of $50,000? Ah! the human heart is deceitful and desperately wicked, and doubtless there are many people in the world who honestly believe that under no circumstances would they do wrong, but they flatter themselves that they do not know their own hearts. They would be astonished to see themselves as they really are. The temptation and the seeming sureness of never being found out is sufficient to cause many heretofore stainless men to fail. Make the secrecy of the guilt positive and how large would be grow. It is doubtless true that all men are not rascals, but it may also be added that nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand has his price.

When the morning Pennsylvania Railroad train on the Long Branch Division was passing Woodbridge, Saturday morning, the engineer observed a man leaning down with his head over the rail. He was recognized as David Baker, a resident of Woodbridge.

Millie Christine, the two-headed colored girl with Doris' circus, which exhibited in Easton recently, severed her connection with the show at Reading, she having asked for and been granted a cancellation of her contract, owing to having wearied of travel, as well as being disinclined to go South, in which direction the circus turns direct from Harrisburg. Mr. Doris not considering her a very strong card for that particular section of country, was quite willing that she should withdraw, all the more so because of the fact that she has been costing him about $1,000 per week—$1,000 as salary and $100 in the shape of expenses for herself and attendants.

Democratic Nominations.

For Governor,
LEON ABBETT,
of Hudson County.

OUR CANDIDATE.

The Democrats of New Jersey have been exceedingly fortunate in their selection of Governors. No State in the entire Union can boast of a more illustrious array of Executives than Democratic New Jersey. They have been, without exception, citizens of marked ability, unsullied private reputations, and faithful servants of the people. To that honorable list the Democracy now propose adding another of equal merit. As a worthy successor of Parker, Randolph, Bedle, Mc Clellan and Ludlow, ranks of Hudson.

Leon Abbett,

He possesses within himself every requisite for an honest, efficient and dignified Chief Magistrate.

He will be Governor of the whole State—not the Agent of special pecuniary interests.

He has talents of the highest order.

He is a statesman, thoroughly acquainted with public affairs.

He knows the rights of the people.

He will prove competent to propose and bold to execute.

He numbers personal friends by thousands, among all political parties, for the well grounded reason that he personally deserves friendship.

VOTE FOR LEON ABBETT.

$5,000.

Although ludicrous, there was significance in the words of the enthusiastic Camden delegate when, springing to his feet in the Republican State Convention, with eyes aglow and arms distended, he loudly predicted that Judge Dixon would be Governor elect "by five thousand dollars."

By $5,000.

The gentleman had no doubt been diligently studying the Dorsonian theory of elections, and therefore, the substitution of the word dollars for majority was quite natural.

By $5,000.

Talleyrand held that the diplomatic use of language was to conceal real meaning.

The gentleman from Camden is evidently no diplomat.

He had learned from high Republican authority that dollars could sometimes destroy the sanctity of suffrage, and that knowledge caused him to speak out hastily in meeting.

By $5,000.

If the Camden delegate and his political associates will figure up the enormous sum expended three years ago in the violent but vain effort to wrest New Jersey from the Democratic party, he and they may discover that $5,000 is only a meagre portion of the corruption fund then raised and used.

No! Mr. Delegate! Not by five thousand, five hundred thousand, nor by five million dollars, can you deprive the voters of New Jersey of their honest majority.

It will be cast for Leon Abbett.

AWFUL.

Republicans!

We are not going to quote the utterances of a Democrat.

Not a word.

You cannot charge us with harsh or ungenerous partisan language.

It don't belong to us.

We are about repeating what a prominent head of your own political household has recently said.

He never sat at our table. He laid the corner stone of your party temple. He worshipped there for years.

His name is Wendell Phillips.

In a letter advocating the re-election of Governor Butler, of Massachusetts, Mr. Phillips, your eminent founder and asserted brain carrier, thus publicly spoke—

"I distrust and despise the Republicans as hypocrites and time-servers."

"As double dealers."

"As soulless carrion masquerading in the grave clothes of their honored predecessors."

"They have no right to seek their candidate among high-minded and honorable men."

"Let them choose a fitting leader from among the Tewksbury marshes, those peddlers of poor men's bones."

Shades of Lincoln and Sumner!

What do we hear?

Republicans! Friends! Patriots!

If that be the opinion of the father of your grand moral party, what are we outsiders to think?

What odor fills the air!

'Tis not of sweet flowers.

Awful!

Scatter disinfectants—or we faint!

As Leon Abbett and Judge Dixon are both first-class extemporaneous speakers, and the people of New Jersey fair minded and honest, why not have joint discussions throughout the State, as was the style in the palmy days of old? We have no fears that the effect of such a joint controversy will be of great benefit to the Democratic party, and we advise the State Committee to endeavor to perfect some such plan. It will bring out all the truth, and show conclusively the mettle and principles of the candidates. Let us have a square stand-up fight, with New Jersey as the ring and the people as the referee.—Eliz. Herald.

LEON ABBETT SPEAKS.

Senator Mc Pherson and ex-Gov. Mc Clellan [illegible] a Mass Meeting.

The first mass meeting of the campaign in New Jersey was held by Democrats last Monday evening in the Academy of Music, Newark. Leon Abbett, the nominee for Governor, was present, and received an enthusiastic greeting from about 2,000 persons, who crowded the hall.

Mr. Andrew Albright presided, and first introduced Senator Mc Pherson. Mr. Mc Pherson said:

"I have known Mr. Abbett for many years, and no man in the State or out of it has more of my confidence. If elected he will uphold the Democratic idea in government. During the twenty years of Democratic rule in New Jersey there has never been a dollar stolen from the Treasury or an improper appointment made."

Gen. McClellan, after a volley of cheers, said:

"I come to congratulate the Democrats of Essex county on the auspicious opening of the campaign, and to impress upon them the importance of success, in the interests of the State and the nation."

Upon being introduced to the meeting, Mr. Abbett received hearty cheers. He said:

"I intend to speak throughout the State, and answer the malignant charges of my enemies. I denounce the general charges, and challenge my traducers to point to the vote and the act of mine which was wrong.

They say my record on railroad taxation is not sound, and that I am a slave of corporations. There should be some evidence to support these accusations. I ask the Republican party to point to my record where I voted for corporations as against the people and against equal taxation. I want them to show where I have championed monopoly. They can never do it, for there is no such record.

They say I have been an attorney of corporations. It's my business to be an attorney. But I never sold to any client my political convictions."

Mr. Abbett then read clippings from the files of the Newark Advertiser, (Rep.) showing that in 1875 he opposed a bill to relieve insolvent railroad companies from tax, and at other times in his career as State Senator voted to tax railroads. He showed that he fathered a bill which procured for the employees of the Central Railroad of New Jersey $400,000 wages from the receiver of the road.

STURDY DEMOCRACY.

New Jersey is a staunch and steadfast Democratic State. There can be no fear that it will faint or falter now, when the outlook is encouraging enough to urge all Democrats to prudent acts and faithful work.

Since the tide of Republicanism set in with the election of Lincoln in 1860, all through the dark days of Democracy, New Jersey stood firmly by her principles and her colors. Only twice during that period has her vote for President or Governor been cast away from the Democracy; once in 1872, when Grant received a majority over Greeley of 15,000 and again, in 1865, when a Republican Governor was elected by 2,789 votes.

Here is the record of the State on the votes for President and Governor:

1860—Douglas, D., President maj.		4,500
1864—McClellan, D., President	"	7,300
1868—Seymour, D.,	" "	2,880
1876—Tilden, D.,	" "	12,500
1880—Hancock, D.,	" "	2,000
1872—Grant, R.,	" "	15,000

For the Democratic candidate for Governor in 1862 the majority was 14,500; in 1868, 4,600; in 1871, 5,900; in 1874, 13,200; in 1877, 12,700, and in 1880, 651.

In 1865 only did New Jersey give a majority against the Democratic candidate for Governor, who was defeated by 2,789 votes.

The majority for Grant over Greeley in 1872 in fact illustrated the firmness and consistency of the Democracy of the State.—World.

DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE.

Ex-Speaker George O. Vanderbilt, Chairman of the late Democratic Convention, has appointed the following State Committee, to serve until the next Gubernatorial Convention—At Large—John R. McPherson, Gottfried Krueger, Rufus Blodgett and Manning Freeman. First district, Richard Jenkins; Second, A. J. Smith; Third, John H. Laird; Fourth, Samuel T. Smith; Fifth, Garret Ackerson, Jr.; Sixth, J. H. Eastwood; Seventh, A. A. Hardenbergh. The committee will meet next Saturday, at noon, at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, for the purpose of organization.

THE TWO LEONS.

When Leon Gambetta was a candidate before the French people, the aristocrats, the men who wanted strong government, the men who hated the people, could find no language vile enough in which to denounce him. But he was a defender of their rights, and the more he was defamed the more the people rallied around him, and the larger the majorities by which he was elected.

The nomination of Leon Abbett, a man of the people, is the signal for the love of strong government here, the haters of the people, to open their sluice gates of party malignity and try to bespatter him. But the more they abuse the more the people will rally about him. He will be elected too. History repeats itself.

SKETCH OF OUR CANDIDATE.

Leon Abbett was born in Philadelphia, October 8, 1836. He studied law with District Attorney Ashmead, of that city, and was admitted to the bar in 1857. In that year he moved to New York and began the practice of law there. In 1865 he was admitted to the New Jersey bar and was appointed Corporation Counsel for Hoboken. His home is in Jersey City and his practice largely in the New Jersey courts. He was Speaker of the State Assembly in 1868-69 and served four years in that body. In 1875 he was elected to the State Senate and was President of that body in 1877. He was chairman of the New Jersey delegation to the National Convention in 1876, where he labored zealously to secure the nomination of Joel Parker for President.

LEON ABBETT'S ACCEPTANCE.

The Committee appointed to inform Hon. Leon Abbett of his nomination for Governor by the Democratic State Convention, called upon that gentleman at his residence last week. In reply to Chairman Allen McDermott, Mr. Abbett said:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: I appreciate fully the great honor that the Democracy of New Jersey have done me, and the confidence they have placed in me in selecting me as their standard bearer. My views on the political questions before us I will state at length in writing later on. I only say now that I am in hearty accord with the platform adopted by the Convention, and that I accept the nomination. I say further that if untiring, unceasing work on my part can bring back to New Jersey its old Democratic majority, can bring back not only the control of the Executive, but the control of the Legislature, it shall be done. I shall know no faction. Every man who works for my election is to me a Democrat. The Democrats that will be rewarded will be the ones who do the work of the campaign. So far as the people as a whole are concerned, I know I can give them a government that can satisfy them.

This is not a fight for myself, it is a fight for triumphant Democracy.—Leon Abbett.

Leon Abbett is the workingman's friend. Judge Dixon is an aristocrat, who hates and despises the Democratic party and everything Democratic.

Every legitimate effort of labor to better its condition, enhance its rewards and protect its rights, commands the sympathy and support of the Democratic party.—Democratic Platform.

The people should only be taxed so much as is absolutely indispensable for the frugal conduct of their public affairs—not one cent for surplus and no unnecessary taxation.—Democratic Platform.

Judge Dixon, Republican nominee for Governor, has not as yet resigned his seat from the Supreme Court Bench. Neither will he. He knows full well that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

How thoroughly cut and dried the proceedings of the Republican Convention were, may be gained by the fact that Hon. Wm. Walter Phelps distributed printed slips of his speech among the delegates.

If untiring, unceasing work on my part can bring back to New Jersey its old Democratic majority, can bring back not only the control of the Executive, but the control of the Legislature, it shall be done.—Leon Abbett.

The Orange, N. J., Monitor, edited by Sidney Genung, formerly of the Westfield Monitor, this county, comes out square in its last issue for Leon Abbett and the Democratic party. Sidney's head is level. Keep on with the good work.

Democrats need not be told of the importance of thorough organization in the campaign now beginning. A President is to be elected next year and New Jersey will want to keep herself solid for Democracy this Fall. Democrats now fully realize that there is nothing to be gained by fostering petty spites and plotting to wreak vengeance upon this or that man or set of men. Let us as Democrats and well-wishers of our State and nation band together as brothers, and continue Union in her place among the Democratic strongholds of the State.

* * *

The laboring men of New Jersey should never forget that to Leon Abbett they owe their freedom from the tyranny of the scrip-wages system of South and North New Jersey. It was his voice and his vote which passed through the Senate the bill requiring wages to be paid in money. Everybody now recognizes the justice of the law; but Leon Abbett was the first man outside of the districts affected to hear the appeals of the working men, and, by his ability and his influence, to compel a compliance with their righteous demands.—True American.

LEON ABBETT'S LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE

To Messrs. Allan L. Mc Dermott (Chairman) and Thos. E. French, Henry D. Winton, Jacob Hendrickson, John Westcott, Walter H. Miller, Wm. L. Newell, Wm. H. F. Fiedler, Daniel C. Crean, Richard S. Kuhl, Jas. R. Bergen, Wm. Robinson, David S. Crater, Edmund Canfield, Clifford Horner, Wm. H. Gillen, Wm. G. Cassper, John D. Bartine, Samuel T. Smith, John T. Dunn and William L. Hoagland, members of the Committee appointed by the Democratic Gubernatorial Convention, held at Trenton, September 13th, 1883:—

Gentlemen—I am deeply sensible of the honor conferred upon me by the Democratic Convention in nominating me for the office of Governor of the State of New Jersey.

I accept the nomination, and shall endeavor to secure a victory so decisive that it shall embrace in its triumphs the Legislature as well as the Executive.

I endorse the platform of the party; and as Governor, I shall feel bound by it in the administration of State affairs.

I deem it proper to emphasize and supplement some of its declarations of principle and action.

The tariff resolutions meet with my hearty approval.

The manufacturers and workingmen should remember that it was the vote of a Democratic United States Senator from this State that saved the industries of New Jersey during the last session of Congress.

The tariff is a subject for national and not for State legislation, and the Governor has no power to act upon it; but if my efforts can influence legislation on that subject, no mill, factory or workshop in the State of New Jersey shall be closed, and no workman thrown out of employment.

Referring to the question of convict labor, I am opposed to contracts which give the profits of the labor of criminals to contractors. All the profit that can be derived from their labor should be paid directly into the treasury. Such a policy would not only be just to the State, but it would also protect the manufacturer and mechanic from unfair competition. Give criminals employment, but not at the expense of honest labor. I do not want in New Jersey busy prisons, and empty workshops.

I shall favor all measures which tend to improve the condition of the workingman.

The agricultural interests of the State will, at all times, command my earnest attention, and every measure tending to the encouragement and protection of this industry will receive my approval.

The fisheries, and all other interests and industries in our State, which provide food and employment for our citizens, should be fostered and encouraged.

The prudent and economical management of the affairs of the State by the present Democratic administration, has relieved the people from the burden of a direct State tax. I approve of this policy, and such tax shall never be imposed with my consent.

Officials, when appointed by the Executive, owe their duty to the whole State, and the paramount consideration in selecting men for positions, should be to secure an efficient public service.

I believe in local self-government, and am opposed to the creation or continuance of Legislative Commissions.

I favor the simplest and most economical form of government for city, borough, town and township. Where complicated and expensive forms of municipal government still exist, they should be abolished, and there should be substituted a simple form, with legislative limitations upon the power of taxation, and the creation of debt; so that neither extravagance nor corruption shall be able to impose heavy burdens upon the people.

My views upon the subject of taxation of corporations were clearly and fully expressed in the proposed Amendment to the Constitution of the State, offered by me May 17th, 1881, as a member of the Constitutional Commission. I earnestly urged the adoption of these amendments, which will be found fully reported in the proceedings printed by the State in 1882. At that time I advocated among others the following:

1. "That the real and personal estate of every corporation, foreign and domestic, except that of municipal corporations of this State, shall be taxed the same as the real and personal estate of an individual, and all laws that establish a different rule are hereby repealed.

2. That no law shall be passed, or contract made by or on behalf of the State, or any municipal corporation, by which the power of taxation shall in any way be impaired or abridged."

I am now, as then, in favor of equal taxation for all—corporations and individuals.

I am opposed to monopolies of every kind. I believe in equal rights for all, and exclusive privileges for none.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen of the Com., your obedient servant,

Leon Abbett.

According to the notice given last week, the congregation of All Saints Episcopal Church, Scotch Plains, will celebrate the anniversary of the opening of their church next Sunday. The Rev. Wm. D. Walker, D. D., of New York city, will preach in the morning. Mr. Arthur and his choir from St. Ann's Church, Brooklyn, will furnish the music. Services will begin at 10½ a. m., and 4 p. m.

S. review service appointed for next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. All are invited.

Democratic Mass Meeting!

LEON ABBETT IN PLAINFIELD.

Hon. Leon Abbett, Democratic candidate for Governor, will address a Mass Meeting to be held in Vandeventer Hall, Plainfield, N. J., Thursday evening, Oct. 18th. Other prominent speakers will also be present.

THE fireman's parade of Oct. 11th is booming.

THE Council meet in regular meeting next Monday evening.

ON and after Monday next, your letters will only require two cent postage.

WHEN a hen retires for the night it is quite proper to speak of her as a rooster.

IN another column will be found the official notice to register—where, when and how. You'll lose your vote if you neglect this requirement.

BOYS and girls are offered an opportunity of being taught the art of correct singing, at but a small cost, by joining Mr. Embury's singing class advertised elsewhere.

SOME New Jersey boys are making a living by selling sparrows. Hotels and restaurants find a large call for them, sparrow on toast taking the place of reed birds.

MR. Nathan Robins of Metuchen, received first premium on his celebrated bull, "Jack May," and 2d premium, on "Violet Rex," also a very fine Jersey, at the State Fair last week.

AT one o'clock to-day, in Laing's Hall, there will be sold at auction a quantity of very handsome household furniture, consisting of mattresses, carpets, crockery, shades and other articles.

IT is intimated that Robert Randolph the colored ex-policeman of our city, has again been tendered a position on the force. "Bob" always did his duty when he was one of the city's guardians.

MR. S. V. Woodruff the proprietor of the Hotel Netherwood, pays the residents of Plainfield a compliment in his card elsewhere, besides extending them a very cordial invitation to attend a closing ball to-morrow evening.

THE business of Taylor's market, that has been closed during the summer, was recently purchased by Messrs. Wm. E. Gardner and James Van Winkle of this city, who will shortly re-open the establishment on North avenue.

BURGLARS entered the residence of Mr. Antonie Debaud, at No. 103 East Front street, just after midnight Wednesday morning, but awakening the occupants they were obliged to hurriedly decamp with little plunder.

EX-POLICEMAN Geo. Eaton, having received assurance of gaining a position on the police force of Newark, will remove thence with his family, next week. Mr. Eaton has the well wishes of his many friends in Plainfield for his future prosperity.

THE course of entertaining lectures to be given in the Scotch Plains Baptist church, begins Oct. 9th, with a lecture on "Humor and Humorists", by the Hon. John Y. Foster of Newark. Subsequent subjects and speakers we will announce later.

MRS. Lo Adams of 42 West Front St., announces for Oct. 9th her Fall opening of hats and bonnets, embracing all the latest fashions and a large variety of styles of trimming. Dressmaking has recently been added, and at her establishment ladies may be assured of a perfect fit and satisfactory work.

THE business out-look at Edsall's appears bright and encouraging, judging from the fine display of Fall and Winter goods shown there and the numbers who visit the store daily. We are told that their trade has increased each year since they began business here. Doubtless printer's ink, with wide experience, has had much to do with it.

WE understand that the Telford Pavement Company have disposed of their property at the "Notch," North Plainfield, to a party who will immediately put in new and improved machinery for cracking stone for macadamizing purposes. Our citizens should now see that certain thoroughfares in this city are macadamized, as this will afford them a cheap means of furnishing material.

FASHION has decreed that the innocent swallow must now suffer to help the milliner. It is asserted that taxidermists throughout the country are making it a business to engage boys and others to kill swallows, which are afterward prepared by those artists for the market to be used as ornaments on ladies' hats and wearing apparel. The law of this State imposes a penalty of $10 for the killing of any insectiverous bird, and as the swallow comes under that category we hope that all law-abiding citizens will see that the penalty is imposed should any case of killing these harmless birds come to their notice.

A Card of Thanks.

Prompted by feelings of the deepest gratitude, I choose this mode of thanking my friends in and out of Plainfield for their kind sympathy and assistance shown me in the hour of need and affliction, and in contributing to honor the memory of a dear departed wife and mother.

FREDERICK SCHRÖDER.
19 Plainfield avenue.

The Opera House.

Contractor Isaac Melbourn has a large force of workmen engaged in excavating for the foundation of the Stillman Music Hall. With such an indefatigable pusher, no fears need be entertained but that his part of the contract will be performed before its term of limitation. At Mr. Melbourn's brick yard on Somerset street, North Plainfield, the fires were lighted last week to burn in one kiln, 800,000 brick to be used in the construction of the above building.

Personalia.

William Conklin, only son of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Conklin of this city, died at the residence of his parents on Front street, Saturday evening, in the 25th year of his age.

George P. Suydam, Esq., has returned from a Summer's rest to the labors of his profession, much improved in health and lacking in none of his former abilities in the court room.

The Rev. Elston M. Dunn, formerly postmaster of this city, and now preaching in Milton, Wis., is visiting old friends in Plainfield. He will occupy the pulpit of the Seventh Day church, next Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Scribner of West Second street, celebrated their wooden wedding, last Friday evening, in a very enjoyable manner. The numerous presents received from their host of friends, were largely assorted and highly appreciated.

Miss Addie Weaver of North Plainfield, entertained a number of friends during Wednesday evening of last week, at the residence of her father, Peter Weaver, Esq., on Grove street. The occasion celebrated the seventh anniversary of her birthday.

More Incendiarism.

An unoccupied dwelling at Green Brook, just back of Dunellen, belonging to Mr. Charles Vail, was fired by some unknown person last Tuesday morning at about two o'clock. It was a total loss, being uninsured.

Adjourned.

The sale of Plainfield real estate for delinquent taxes of 1881 was commenced as announced on Wednesday when ten pieces of property were sold, and an adjournment was then made for one week, viz., to Wednesday, October 3d next.

Leon Abbett to speak in Plainfield.

Hon. Leon Abbett, Democratic candidate for Governor, and other prominent speakers will address a public meeting in Vandeventer Hall, this city, Thursday evening, Oct. 18th. Mr. Abbett will also address a public meeting at Rahway, October 17th.

A Good Plan.

It would cost but little more in the beginning and less in the end, if our Street Committee and Commissioner would repair our thoroughfares with crushed stone, as the Central Times this week suggests. If such a plan was adopted our streets would improve—now they are merely patched and repatched, and grow worse daily.

Attention, Sons of Veterans!

There will be a meeting of sons of veterans on Thursday evening, Oct. 4th, at Sons of Temperance Hall, White and Stelle's building, corner Park avenue and Front street. All sons of honorably dis*charged soldiers, sailors or marines of* the late war are earnestly requested to be present.

J. H. CARNEY, Secretary.
C. A. BURLINGAME, Chairman.

N. J. G. & F. P. S.

The officers of the New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society for the ensuing year are as follows:

President—James S. Vosseller.
Secretary—W. L. Force.
Treasurer—Wm. E. Jones.

The Equinox Storm.

What is generally termed the equinoctial storm, which appears at this season of the year, broke along the Southern coast on Monday last, and although the tides were unusually high, but little damage was done. The sea washed a great distance inland at low beach spots. No serious marine mishaps are reported. At Asbury Park the storm washed away a small portion of the road planking on the sea front.

A Mystery To Be Further Investigated.

Peter Ritter, the lad who is accused of being in the company of young Walter Scribner when the latter was shot recently, was brought before Justice of the Peace Horton, Monday, on a charge of manslaughter preferred by the dead boy's father, and committed to the Somerset county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury. It is expected that the latter body will make a thorough investigation of the matter.

A Rather Expensive Racket.

Young Dady, whose skirmish with the Plainfield police force we recorded last week, was brought before the city court last Thursday afternoon. George F. Suydam, Esq., appeared for the accused, whose former plea was withdrawn and that of "guilty" substituted. A fine of $60 was then imposed and paid, which with other costs makes Mr. Dady's circus quite an expensive amusement.

A Year Ago Last Saturday

The great freshet did so much damage in this county, and the Grove street bridge with others, was washed away, carrying down with its debris into the seething waters a score of people, but luckily no lives were lost. On Sunday thousands visited the various scenes of destruction caused by the flood and viewed the surroundings. No event in years caused so much excitement as the flood of Sept. 23d, 1882.

Attention Democrats! Over the Brook!

Per call of the chairman of the last county convention, the Democratic voters of the township of North Plainfield are requested to meet at the old school house on Friday evening, Oct. 5th, at 8 o'clock, to nominate five delegates to attend the county convention, to be held at the Court House, in Somerville, on Thursday, Oct. 11th, at 10 a. m., to nominate a sheriff and member of Assembly, to be supported at the ensuing election.

End of a Telephone War.

RED BANK, N. J., Sept. 23.—Telephonic communication throughout Monmouth County was opened yesterday. For weeks certain property-holders in this town and a lukewarm Board of Town Commissioners have retarded the work by first delaying in giving permission to erect the poles to carry the wires and then, after the permit was given, to prevent the erection of the same. Finally property-holders, who recognized the advantages to be derived from the telephone, gave the company the right of way free of charge and the through circuit of the county was established.

The State Fair.

The State Fair at Waverly last week was a great success. The attendance each day was very large, and on Thursday it is estimated that there were 50,000 people present. Many state nobilities were present, including Governor Ludlow and son; next-Governor Leon Abbett, escorted arm-in-arm by Andrew Albright; seven out of the Congressmen, including Mr. Mc Adoo and a number of other leading men of the State. The display of products and cattle was fine, and the trotting the best witnessed on the track in years. Credit is due the officers of the Association for the admirable success of the Fair. There was no disagreeable feature to mar the enjoyment of the occasion during the whole progress of the Fair.

Prepare Winter Clothing Now.

Sudden changes of temperature, and cold, penetrating winds may now be looked for, and it is prudent to be ready to meet them promptly. Strong, vigorous persons, in full blood, may resist a fall of twenty or thirty degrees in the thermometer, but none are sure of doing so. A change from 50 deg. to 40 or 30 degrees, before the system is inured to cold is more felt than 20 degrees in December or January. So, good warm under and outer clothing should be had for instant use when an unexpected northerly blast comes. A cold caught in autumn is apt to last a long time, if it does not chance to terminate fatally. Let the winter apparel be looked over at once, mended and remodeled, and new clothing ordered. Tailors and seamstresses, if to be employed, will be over-busy, and less accommodating later on than now, and fabrics are in more variety at the stores, and cost no more now than later. To doubly protect the throat and lungs, line the undershirt inside, both back and front and well down the waist with warm, soft flannel. Give special care also to the feet and limbs. Home-knit stockings of soft wool are by far the best. Line the knees and heels of children's stockings with flannel.

A Limited Excursion.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent avenue church, has arranged an excursion to Mauch Chunk and over the renowned Switch Back. It will take place Saturday of next week, Oct. 6th. The tickets are limited to 300 at $1.75 each, with the intention of making the party as select as possible.

Somerset's Fair.

The 14th Annual Fair of the Somerset County Agricultural Society will be held on their grounds in Somerville, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, October 2d, 3d and 4th. If either day is stormy it will be continued one day. All classes open to State. A grand display of horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry. Farm products, machinery, ladies' work of all descriptions, etc. For list of premiums or further information apply to Wm. S. Potter, N. J.

Closing The Season.

The Fifth Annual Picnic of the A. O. H., No. 4, of Plainfield, took place during Thursday of last week, in Wooden's Grove, after a week's postponement on account of the weather. Music was furnished by Cahill's celebrated band, and a long list of dances, including many a reel and jig, was indulged in. The floor manager was Mr. John Duffy, and the Committee, Messrs. David Barry and Jas. Caulfield. No more satisfactory an affair in every particular has been ex*perienced this season.*

Death of Oliver Pierce.

Oliver Pierce, a well-known resident of Elizabeth, died in that city on Friday afternoon last, after a long illness from a complication of diseases, aged 65 years. For fifteen years Mr. Pierce was Clerk to the Board of Freeholders of Union County, and for over twenty years he was Court Crier under the successive administrations of Judges Haines, Depue and Van Syckel. He was a prominent Odd Fellow and was held in high esteem by all who knew him for his affable and courteous manners and honesty.

Dr. Bliss' Farewell.

The Crescent avenue church, Sunday morning, was crowded with the members of its congregation and the friends of its retiring pastor, assembled to hear the farewell address of the Rev. Dr. Bliss. The sermon dealt chiefly with the past history of both the city and the church, and was a most interesting and instructive discourse. No one was forgotten—all were included in the pleas*ant memories of the resigning pastor, and* his sincere expressions of regret at leaving seemed to be called forth by kind remembrances of every one.

The Opera House Front.

Since our last issue, Mr. Charles E. Jacques, the architect, has finished the plans for the building to be erected on Front street through which is to open the entrance to the Opera House. On the lower floor is to be a handsome store, above it the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, and over that another story. The front is to be of brick and built up to the frame buildings on its left; the completion being postponed until the leases on the adjoining property have expired. Work is to commence at once. The entire structure to cost $6,000.

Straw Hats

One by one the straw hats which have done good duty during the Summer are going into Winter quarters, although a few persons continue to hold to the reminders of Summer from the fact that they have not decided what style to wear for the Winter. The big bell rung two weeks ago, but if it was heard it was not heeded. There is no law to prevent a man continuing to wear a straw hat until the first of next January if he chooses to, but a regard for fashion indicates that it would not be in very good taste. Black hats are now in order, although a number of gentlemen have determined to hang on to their straw ones until the weather gets cooler than it has been for a week past. Hatters anticipate no more sales for them until 1884, and then a new crop will appear.

Grants of Reparian Lands.

The special committee appointed by the last Assembly to investigate the manner in which the reparian rights of the State were being granted away, met at Jersey City recently. The fact came out that a mile of water front at Asbury Park had been given to James A. Bradley on a perpetual lease for $140 a year. Other tracts of water front now of immense value, it is stated, have been granted away on similar terms, and a large proportion of the reparian land of the State has been sold for little compared with the value which subsequently developed. The committee ordered to be prepared for them a report of all grants of reparian lands made by the Commission, with the amount paid as rent or purchase money, and also a report of the amount of reparian land sold and unsold in each county. The committee adjourned until Nov. 15th.—Elizabeth Journal.

The Best of the Season.

Saturday, Oct. 6th. Autumn excursion to the "Switzerland of America" under the auspices of the Young People's Association of the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church, by a special limited train, making no tedious stops at every station, going through in quick time. The opportunity is a rare one to enjoy the changing foliage, a charming trip across N. J., and along the banks of the Lehigh River, the exhilirating Switch-Back experience, the curiosities of a mine on fire for more than thirty years, a cave in which ice is continuously forming, at Summit Hill, and the wonders of Glen Onoko. Tickets, which are limited in number, can be obtained if applied for at once from members of the committee: J. K. Myers, J. B. Coward, C. A. Baynon, L. M. Daniel, Roger Murray, I. C. Pierson, or of Frank H. Gardner, at City National Bank. Excursion fare to Mauch Chunk and Glen Onoko $1.75. Tickets for the Switch-Back will be sold on the train at 50 cents. Train will leave Plainfield at 8:15 a. m., stopping only at Evona. Returning will leave Mauch Chunk at 6 p. m.

Fighting Over a Prisoner.

PHILLIPSBURG, N. J., September 24.—Last Saturday night when the train from Trenton, bearing Peter Schmull, "the dude horse-thief," arrived here a lively fight occurred between the detectives as to who should have the honor and the expected reward for his capture. Detective Zerman, of Trenton, and Detectives Simons and Johnson and Chief Police Tilton of Easton Pa., engaged in a vigorous battle for possession of the prisoner, who was quite unconcerned as to his fate. Mr. Simons wanted him for several thefts in which there was no reward; Johnson wanted him for a case where there is a reward of $150. The latter and Zerman rushed the prisoner into a room apart from Simons. Black-jacks were freely used in the fight which ensued on Simons trying to get the dude away from Johnson. To add to the difficulty politics entered into the question. Johnson is a Democrat and Simons a Republican. Chief of Police Tilton, who is a Democrat, took sides with Johnson. After much strife Schmull was handed over to the latter detective and committed to jail for trial.

THE Fifth Annual Fair of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Agricultural Association was a success.

It Won't Work.

Elsewhere we publish for the last time "an ordinance to amend an ordinance" relating to the morals etc., of the city of Plainfield, and upon such publication its provisions become a portion of our city's laws. In what way its third section will effect the transaction of business on Sunday, is not yet shown, but it is believed by many that no trade or occupation now carried on comes under the provisions. As Sunday papers cannot be bought the day before, such business is held to be a case of necessity, while barbers do not deal in any merchandise and at no place of business, to our knowledge, are "wares" or anything else "openly exposed for sale." Our Council seems to have missed its aim.

Fire at Dunellen.

Sunday evening last, just after church services had commenced, the fire alarm bell was struck, and the fire companies turned out in response to an alarm occasioned by a bright light in the direction of Dunellen. Two of the companies, No's 2 and 3 went as far as Evona before turning back. The fire was in Dunellen, some scoundrel having set fire to a large barn belonging to Mr. John Apgar, situated in the heart of the village. The building, which was occupied by Mr. Chas. Hoff as a livery and exchange stable, was entirely consumed. Most of the material in the structure was removed, although considerable loss was entailed by the destruction of harness, etc., which was consumed before willing hands of citizens could rescue them. Dunellen, as well as Plainfield, has fire bugs that need looking after.

A Slight Fire.

By some means unknow, a conflagration was started just before noon of last Friday, in the roof of a frame building on Front street, opposite Van Deventer Hall. The upper part was occupied as a dwelling by a colored family, and in the lower part was located the laundry of Gee Wah. Both of these tenants, however, with the help of the public, were able to remove their property before the floods of water thrown on the roof began to pour through the ceilings and run down the stairs. Steamer No. 2 was off duty, but Warren and Gazelle responded promptly to the alarm. Although the former was first "on the ground" and had her hose laid before the arrival of No. 1, yet the latter had two streams on the fire before the boys from over the brook got to work. The track was also on hand, and its members cut open the roof through which the flames were drawn. Apart from the damage occasioned by water and the destruction of the roof, the loss was slight.

The Essex and Union County Line.

The line between Essex and Union counties has for some years been a matter of dispute, and certain residents have been undecided as to which county they lived in. The matter was taken to the courts and a commission decided that a part of the property in question belongs to Essex, and Clinton township then assessed it. The Legislature then passed an act defining the line, and the property went back to Union. In the meantime the residents paid no tax, and Essex County Freeholders, at a late meeting, refunded to Clinton the amount of county tax it had paid in but never was able to collect. Union county had the supposed line surveyed and monument stones planted, but Essex refused to acknowledge the correctness of the survey, and would not pay any part of the expense. It also directed Engineer Owen to examine the line as defined. The result was that he reports the following errors: Stone next to land, O. S. Halsted, 2 feet south; Drake Mill bridge, 2 feet 8 inches; stone, Burnet avenue, 27 feet north; Baker road, 5 feet 3 inches north; Springfield avenue, 106 feet 10 inches; road from Springfield to South Orange, 100 feet north. It will be seen that most of them give Union County more land than it is entitled to. Essex county has accordingly taken measures to protect itself, and the County Council will at once communicate with Union county.—Newark Advertiser.

A Card from Mr. Woodruff.

In return for the many kindnesses and favors of my friends in Plainfield and vicinity during the past season, I propose to throw open the Hotel Netherwood on Saturday evening, Sept. 29th, for a Grand Hop and Promenade, and shall be glad to welcome all who may desire to participate in the festivities of the occasion and visit the Hotel.

Much of the flattering success of the Hotel the past season is due to the kind words and good wishes of the residents of Plainfield, and I desire in this public way to extend my warmest thanks and express my sincere appreciation.

It has afforded me great pleasure to have had as my guests many of the best and most widely known people of the country who have remained continuously during the season and who were unanimous in their expression of the beauty of the country—the picturesque and unsurpassed surroundings—the healthfulness of the location, and the courtesy and kindness of the residents—and I trust that my successor another season, in case of a change of lessee, may meet with the same kind consideration and success that have attended my efforts in the management.

Dancing will commence at 9 o'clock. Train leaves Plainfield for Netherwood at 8:40 and returns at 10:41 and 11:41. The dining room will be open a la carte for salads, cake and cream from 9 o'clock until midnight. Full orchestra. Fireworks and illumination.

S. V. WOODRUFF.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Mr. Gideon Smalley, of New Market, well-known among horsemen as an able handler of trotting horses, is the possessor of a wonder in horse flesh, well named "Marvel," for he is a marvel in speed. Recently his fast going qualities were applauded by a large concourse of people at the Monmouth county Fair, where although he gained really the second place in a contest with "Billy Button" and other fast horses, in the 2:40 class, he was given third money. "Gid," says it will take more than one thousand dollars to purchase "Marvel."

The question of jurisdiction is being permitted to play havoc with the black bass and young of other game fish in the Delaware River, which are now being slaughtered by the thousands by eel weirs. State Fish Commissioner Francisco Wood of Schoharie county, has just completed an eel weir destroying tour along the Delaware River, between Narrowsburg, Sullivan county, and Hancock, Delaware county, a distance of 38 miles, and the only portion of the stream which comes under his control. The Sheriff of Pike county, Pa., has not destroyed the weirs between Narrowsburg and Port Jervis, as it his duty to do. Below Port Jervis there seems to be a question as to who has the authority to remove the weirs.

One of the largest pearls in the world was recently discovered in the pearl fisheries off Lower California. It is the size of a lime, measuring one inch in length by three-fourths of an inch in thickness.

The strength of a man's tendency to sleep in church was illustrated recently in Lewistown, Me., where a burglar was found in sound slumber in a pew of St. Peter's with his kit of tools scattered around him.

THE FAIR.

Bad Weather to Start With—Entries Light, but Trotting Excellent—A Large Attend*ance and a Success in General.*

The equinoxial weather of Monday last was certainly not conducive to the successful beginning of an out-door exhibition, and the Fifth Annual Fair of the Union and Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association did not, during its "first day," give promise of being as satisfactory to those concerned as was desired. Tuesday's sun, however, warmed the spirits of the reasonably disconsolate officers and directors, a brisk wind that continuously threatened destruction to the tents, dried the roads, and entries in all classes were rapidly recorded as the morning progressed. Yet the entire loss of the day especially set apart for the receiving of exhibits was felt, and but a light display in each department resulted.

Some very fine cattle was noticeable among the few shown, and although the variety of sheep and swine was small, many good specimens could be seen. The usual lot of pigeons that make the circuit each year was on hand, and a few chickens. In the vegetable department the display was better than elsewhere, a good deal of the credit of which being due the rivalry of President Holly and Vice President Robins as "breeders" of the luscious mangel-wurzel. One exhibitor had seventeen kinds of water-melons—a display that would have caused a colored brother to expire from covetousness—while potatoes as big as pumpkins and pumpkins as big as the grand-stand were shown in prolific profusion. And stranger yet, not an exhibitor present but who had selected his fruit or vegetable "just as it came"—he had "lots home a great deal bigger."

In the ladies' department was the customary quilt of 4-11-44 pieces patched together, and the knitting of an aged and blind lady, who was born a century ago and still did her own house-work. The art department was as usual made up of about a half-dozen specimens of local talent—one of which, this year, being a one-legged girl hanging upside-down in a second-hand hammock. Eight jars of preserved fruit, ten bilious-looking biscuits and two dyspepsia breeders called sponge-cakes, completed the programme of edibles. In the same building, Messrs. Carney Bros., of Somerset street, made a handsome display of stoves, Mr. L. M. French of carriages, Messrs. Ford & Stiles exhibited a bed for invalids, as endorsed by the physicians in attendance upon President Garfield, Mr. A. Vanderbeek a case of handsome guns and pistols and Mr. Thomas Worth showed a fine assortment of harness.

The "inclemency of the weather" in the beginning had no effect on the side-shows. No lack of "refreshment" stands was observable, and the assortment of ways to try your strength by different means, and your skill in divers directions, was, as usual, extensive. You could win a cigar by knocking a baby over with a base-ball, or a "beautiful article of jewelry" by throwing a ring over a nail. Invitations to "try your luck! All prizes and no blanks," and "a schooner of beer and a hot sausage for five cents," mingled together and floated with the autumnal breezes and the strains of the Goodwill Band, over the fields and far away to the distant horizon gilded by the roseate hue of the refulgent sun.

On Wednesday, Hon. Leon Abbett, Democratic candidate for Governor, Hon. Andrew Albright, and other prominent men of the State were present, and received the homage due them from the large assemblage present.

Yesterday (Thursday) there was about 6,000 people in attendance; the number of ladies was also larger than on any previous day. Among notable persons present was His Excellency, Governor Ludlow.

The trotting during all the days of the Fair was especially fine, and attracted general attention. The decisions of the judges were fair and received the commendation of the spectators. Want of space renders it impossible for us to expatiate at length upon the merits of either horses or drivers. Below we give a summary of each day's race as far as received up to the time of going to press. The judges of the racing were Messrs. J. V. M. Willis, of Monmouth, O. T. Waring of Plainfield and A. L. Odel, of N. Y.

WEDNESDAY'S RACES.

The bicycle races called forth very little enthusiasm—the entries being confined to the two counties alone, barred out all possibility of exciting contests between experienced riders. None but members of the Plainfield Bicycle Club took part, and the first and second prizes in both races were won respectively by the same contestants. The first heat of the half-mile was made by L. W. Serrell, Jr., in 1.44½, with Geo. H. Craig second, and R. Pound third. The time of this heat was decidedly good, when is considered the wind and track resistance, and the fact of its being the winner's first race. The second heat was ridden in the same order, the time for the first man being 2.07½. The mile race was won by L. W. Serrell, Jr., in 4 minutes; Craig second in 4.10, and D. Runyon third. Mr. A. H. Chamberlain of Rahway, who was entered but arrived too late to start in the half-mile, rode that distance against the winner's time, making it in 2.01.

The funeral of John Freeley, the flagman who was killed on the Central ave. crossing on the 19th inst, took place on Saturday morning last. Interment in the St. Mary's Catholic cemetery, Plainfield, N. J.

The good work still goes on! The residents of Elm street now come to the front with a subscription list, in amount, enough to purchase thirty car load of crushed stone for that street. What street will be the next?

The baptismal services were performed at the Baptist church, Elmer street, on Sunday evening last by the Rev. Mr. Marrett, the occasion being the baptism of Mr. E. L. Marrett, the brother of the officiating clergyman.

The residents of our town were disturbed in their slumbers on Saturday evening last by loud singing and vulgar remarks by some of our young men who had indulged in too much beer, which they purchased by the pail full. There is a law to punish these offenders of the peace and it ought to be enforced.

Henry Littell, the horse and harness thief, who has resided, a large portion of his life, in the State Prisons of New Jersey and New York, and who was arrested about a month ago by an officer in Elizabeth for stealing harness from Oliver Crane of Union, pleaded guilty before Judge McCormick on Wednesday last and was sentenced to two years' hard labor in State Prison. He will hardly survive his term of imprisonment, as he is suffering from Rheumatism and dropsy. Little was one of the parties who was connected with the Miller Bond robbery which occurred in our town in June 1867.

As to autumn millinery a furore for fancy feathers will prevail during the Fall. The pluckings from the ostrich will be all but superseded by plumage from gayer birds. There is no such thing as successfully imitating nature in the way of plumage. Flowers and leaves can be made that can't be told from the genuine, but feathers are beyond counterfeiting. So every feather you see on a bonnet has been on a bird; every bill that is upturned in millinery has sung its song in birdland.

PRESENT POWER!

To-Morrow a long way off when help is wanted to-day.

Comfort is never in a hurry. Pain and distress are in hot haste. It is the "friend in need"—the friend who does something now—that the old adage pays the compliment of being "a friend indeed." That they do not keep the sufferer in suspense is the salient excellence of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS. The plasters of other days—whether porous or otherwise—said "Wait until to-morrow; We can promise nothing on the spur of the moment." But pain unrelieved, like hope deferred, maketh the heart sick. Benson's plasters act on application. They penetrate, soothe, warm and heal, containing as they do, chemical and medicinal agents of the highest efficiency. Their motto is now, and the genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of each plaster. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

COMIFERA

For the Head, Scalp and Hair.

Thousands write us, on arriving home weary, the brain overworked, and tired out, that after bathing with Comifera they feel refreshed and ready for another day's work. It soothes, exhilarates and strengthens the head and brain. Ministers, doctors, lawyers, bankers, brokers, merchants, bookkeepers, mechanics, clerks, housekeepers, sewing girls, and every one who feels languid, depressed and exhausted should use it. It eradicates all diseases of the scalp and skin, removes dandruff, and keeps the hair soft and silken. We ask you to try it, and after using one-third of a bottle, if not satisfied return it to the dealer, and your money shall be refunded.

POETRY.

GOLDEN RULE NUMBER TWO.

When judging brother let it be
With kindness and with charity
Chide him not tho' he may have err'd,
Until thou hast his pleadings heard.
If then at fault, nor wilt retract
From doing wrong in deed and act,
Then with kindness, give there reproof,
And from all anger stand aloof.
Let the one trait be found with thee,
That there no fault in others see,
Hast of thine own enough to guard
To keep them under and in ward.
What tho' within thy brother's eye
A mote therein there seem'st to spy;
But do not thou him guilty doom
Whil'st there's within thine own a beam.
He may a heavy burthen bear,
Nor strong in mind, borne down with care,
More pity needs, or helping hand,
Than stern reproof or hard demand.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

ON ACCOUNT OF A CARD.

'I shall never forget my experience in a mountain district of Arkansaw,' said Capt. Melivine, when the conversation had turned upon adventure. 'There are many pleasant occurrences that we forget, but an affair of horror remains with us. The memory of a pleasant dream soon passes away, but the recollection of a nightmare becomes a mental landmark. Some time ago I was instructed by my employers to repair at once to the White Oak mountains and buy all the cattle that a reasonable sum of money would induce to leave the rugged trails.'

'I boarded a railway train and was soon rushing toward my destination. Sociability is a prominent feature of my nature, which I suppose is an heirloom left by long experience as newspaper reporter; and I had not been long on the train until I had formed the acquaintances of several gentlemen, among them a United States deputy marshal, who gave me his card with an evident air of pride in being connected with so prominent an institution as our government. At a small station, a long haired man, a genuine native of Arkansaw, I surmised, boarded the train and took a seat opposite me.'

'I was desirous of hearing him talk in his quaint dialect, and moved over, and addressed him and handed him my card. He looked at the card significantly and carefully placed it in an old black pocket-book. He eyed me nervously for a moment and then asked:

''Whar mout yer be goin'?'

'White Oak mountains,' I replied, 'I get off at Patsey station.'

'He looked at me with at earnestness, an uneasiness of gaze that I could not understand, and said:

''I reckin you'll find it right pleasant up thar. Best lot of fellers yer ever seed, an' they ain't afeerd, lemme tell you.'

'I could not divine why their physical courage should in the least add to the pleasure of my visit, but supposing the remark grew out of his admiration for men who are not 'afeard,' and that such information would lighten, in charming anticipation, the fatigues of the journey, I did not ask him to explain. He did not seem to 'cotton' to me, as the planters sometimes say in expressing predilection, and he left his seat and stood near the door. I approached him again, feeling more than ever an interest in him, and asked him if he had ever been among the White Oak mountains.

''Have I got fingers and toes?' he replied.

''I can answer assuredly concerning your fingers, and can speculate with chances in my favor in regard to your toes,' I said in facetious attempt.

''Wall, then, I've been thar.'

''Many cattle in that country?'

''Yes, and yer'll find some of them putty hard to han'le, lemme tell yer.'

''My friend, I must confess that you puzzle me. I have asked you several very civil questions, expecting civil answers, but you are so evasive that I can get no satisfaction.'

''Yer're goin to school, hain't yer?'

''Yes.'

''Talk Latin, I reckin'.'

''My knowledge of Latin is limited, sir.'

''It's what they call a dead talk, ain't it?'

''Yes, it is a dead language.'

''Then yer mout need it ar'ter a while.'

''I don't understand you. Your meaning is as dead to me as the language in question is to the unlettered world.'

''So much the worst for yer. I reckin' yer air sorter proud o' yer lernin' and it may be all right to fling out yer book business at every man yer see, but it don't speak o' very sound sense, lemme tell yer. In my county when a man gets to spoutin' like you've been doin', we put him down as a grinnel an' don't have nothin' more to do with him.'

'By this time the train was slacking up at a station. The brakeman shouted 'Patsey', and, in a moment more I was standing on the platform. The next business to be transacted was to hire a horse, which I did after considerable trouble.'

Just as I mounted and started across the rugged country, I saw my long-haired acquaintance on a mule, riding rapidly in the direction I was to take. I called to him, but he made no reply.

'My instructions were to call on a man named Harvey. I learned that he lived about fifteen miles from that station, and when night came on I had considerable trouble in pursuing the right course. Hurrying clouds obscured the moon, and could only get an occasional glimpse of the narrow and deflecting road.

'Suddenly my horse stopped and snorted. I urged him, but he would not proceed. I dismounted to ascertain the cause of his fright, when I was seized, and, despite resistance, bound and gagged. There seemed to be quite a number in the party of captors, for while bound to a horse and hurried along, I heard numerous suppressed voices. We must have traveled several miles over a country rough with ravines and almost percipitous with hillsides. When we stopped I was rudely lifted from the horse and taken inside a log house built so close to the mountain side that an immense rock formed a side wall of the structure. I was placed upon a bench and my hands were untied. I saw around me ten or twelve rough looking men, heavily armed. They were fierce in action and determined in expression. I had pleaded with them, ere they put the gag in my mouth, but now they had restored to me the use of articulation, I sat mute and almost stupefied. At every turn I saw great copper vessels, and off to the right, where my eyes inadvertently wandered, I saw a rude corn mill and a pile of corn.

''So you've come out here to take us to the penitentiary, eh?' said a large, grizzly-bearded man, stepping in front of me.

''No,' I replied, I never heard of you before. I came to this country to buy mountain cattle.'

''An' I reckin you've found more of 'em than you can buy.'

''I don't understand you. I don't know why I was brought here. I never harmed any of you, and why you should inflict punishment on me is something I don't understand.'

''Oh, he's powerful innocent,' exclaimed a fellow, who looked at me with an expression of blood-thirsty revenge. 'He don't know what we mean now because he ain't got his crowd with him.'

''That's the way he's tryin' to work it,' exclaimed a man who leaned against one of the copper vessels, 'but turn him a lose an' he'd show us.'

''Gentlemen, you—'

''Gentlemen,' repeated a score of voices. 'Did you hear that? He's gittin' powerful meek.'

''Young feller,' said the grizzly bearded patriarch, 'we're going to put a mighty tellin' lesson afore your eyes. We're citizens of this here Amerikin gover'ment, and don't want to be pestered in the exercise of our natr'l rights. Our forefathers fit an' bled for the 'stablishment of this Newited States, an' we think we've got a right to make whiskey when and whar we please.'

''Now you're talkin'; put it to him,' chimed the chorus.

''You may be a brave man,' continued the patriarch, 'an' may be dischargin' your duty, but it's our duty that you don't. We could have killed you easy enough without puttin' ourselves to the trouble of fetchin' you here, but we wanted to furnish an example to a young feller that turned traitor. We want to hang you rite afore his eyes and then hang him.'

'A groan arrested my attention, and looking around, I saw a young man bound hand and foot, stretched upon the floor.

''That young chap,' continued the grizzly leader, 'went down to Little Rock some time ago, and as we found out by your raid, turned traitor on us. Ef it hadn't been for him you wouldn't now be so close to whar the revelations of the gospel ends and whar the real work of eternal punishment begins. Hold the young feller up and let the sinners look at each other.'

'Gentlemen, I never saw the young fellow before, I declare. There must be some mistake here. What do you think my business is, anyhow? For God's sake do not act until you know what you are doing! Heaven knows I did not come here to harm anyone.'

'That talk mout amount to a good deal afore a judge an' jury, but afore us it only amounts to what it's worth.'

'What am I charged with. Give me a chance to defend myself.'

'It wan't expected that you'd want a chance. A man that is so bold as to come rite out as you have done oughter know if he's tuck thar ain't no chance fur him. Fetch the rope, Josiah!'

The young man addressed immediately appeared with the rope. I begged and prayed, but they slipped a noose over my neck, and, throwing the rope over something above, tightened it.

'Before you murder me,' I gasped, tell me what I've done.'

'You are a deputy United States marshal on the hunt of distillers,' replied grizzly beard.

'I am not. I am a cattle buyer. No one can prove that I'm a deputy marshal.'

'I reckin' I kin,' replied a voice and before me stood the long-haired man I met on the train.

'I did not tell you that I was deputy marshal!'

'No, but yer give me yer ticket,' and he produced a card bearing the name and address of 'J. M. Pelter, United States Deputy Marshal.'

'Then I realized how the mistake had occurred. The deputy marshal had given me his card and when I introduced my*self to the long-haired man, I had, with*out noticing it, given it to him. I made an elaborate explanation, and in proof, told them to search my pockets, where they would find several cards bearing dif*ferent names, but would find at least fifty* bearing one name, which was my own. They did so, and took the rope from my neck, and also liberated the young man who they thought had turned informer.

"I was soon liberated and allowed to mount my horse. The grizzly man gave instructions in regard to the road to Harvey's, and bade me good-night in a spirit of friendship. When I had gone about fifty yards some one called to me stop. I did not know whether to fly or obey, but knowing that the distillers could, by their knowledge of the country, soon head me off, I stopped. Pretty soon old grizzly appeared.

'Here,' he said, handing me a bottle, 'take the moonshine along with you. It's the best, an' along towards the turn of the night you'll find it mighty strengthenin'. Don't say anything about our pleasant meetin' fur you mout be sorry fur it. Good bye.'

JUDY'S MISTAKE.

Forty odds years ago, long before pigs were subject to municipal restraint that now attend their keeping within city precincts. I lived in Jersey City, we had a large garden, etc., and at the request of our Irish servant we bought a pig which she took sole charge of, who with kind treatment and care became much attached to her—they really were quite fond of each other, it was rather an uncommon looking animal, quite black with unusually large flopping ears and a caudal appendage the extreme end of which resembled a fishes tail; it was very tame and would follow the servant around like a dog when let out of its stye. We named her Black Betts. Now Judy was a devout Catholic and their being no church in Jersey City she attended one in New York. Having a new costume she thought to display it one fine Sunday and took unusual pains with her toilet thereby consuming extra time, intending to create a sensation, in which she succeeded, hurrying with break-neck speed to catch the boat (from the foot of York street in those days) not aware of the devoted fol*lower just at her heels until* as she was passing through the gate the ferry-master remarked; "Judy, that is a fine dog of yours!" "Shure, I have none sur," she replied and looking back beheld her 'dar*lint pig' crowding past her. Alas for the* time wasted on that elaborate toilet, for when Black Betts had been safely escorted home it was too late for church, but it was no fault of piggies that both were not there. The shouts of laughter which greeted the return of the twain; her dejected mein and disappointed air of the would-be rotary of fashion, the unconscious cause of it flipping that fish-like appendage from side to side, as it grunted its satisfaction at not being parted from its beloved friend and companion were too ludicrous ever to be forgotten. Doubtless Judy better realized that day than if told by priest that (wo)man is born to disappointment and one's life is but vexation of spirit when shared with a hog.

LITERARY NOTES.

William Swinton, well-known as the war correspondent of the New York Times, and more recently as a writer of school-text-books, is about to begin the publication of a Weekly, to be called Swinton's Story-Teller and consisting exclusively of choicest complete tales,—from four to six in each issue. He has already enlisted the pens of many of the star story-writers of the United States and England. We think Mr. Swinton right in believing that there is a keenly and widely-felt appetite for first-class short stories, and if he works up to his ideal, he should achieve a flattering success.

The Art Amateur for October is a treasure for home art workers. Its designs include three for China Painters (primroses for a vase, harebells for a plate and poppies for a plaque), three for Embroidery—a letter case, a photograph fraem and a bellows; a charming hawthorn panel for Wood-carving, a dozen pleasing figures for sketching on linen and a mul*tiplicity of monograms and jewelry designs.* There are valuable articles on etching, drawing in red, and other art topics, with some good examples of crayon work; the Munich and Boston art exhibitions are reviewed and attractively illustrated; there are some excellent pictures of Boule work and one of a remarkable Henri Deux cabinet inlaid with ivory, and many practical suggestions for home decoration and furnishing. Price, 35 cents; $4 a year. Montague Marks, publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

Richard Grant White bewails, in the October Century, the desecration by commerce of New York Bay, and has a satiric word for The Colossal Statute of Liberty. "Once largely, brightly, almost nobly beautiful," he says, "it has now become, save for its mere size, the most commonplace of scenes, a miserable panorama of wharves and warehouses, factories, breweries, shops, and shanties: everything that gave it charm and dignity has disappeared, to be replaced only by sordid ugliness. The very islands which sat like little gems upon its waters, roughly enameled with bits of warlike *masonry, are now concealed with shape*less brick and mortar, of which the only merit is that it protects something from the weather. And on one of these it is now proposed to erect a huge, sham-sen*timental*, melodramatic image of bronze, that will merely illustrate its own absurdity, and light up the surrounding poverty of prosperity."

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for October, is altogether, a most interesting and edifying number. A characteristic article by the editor (Dr. Talmage) "Shams in Religion"; No. XI. of "Religious Denominations in the United States—What is the Christian Church; or, Who are the Disciples of Christ?"; "The Kingdom of Cho-Sen"; "The Life and Character of Gen. Robert E. Lee"; "Mount Vesuvius and Around Naples"; "Santa Fe and its Churches" and the continuation of "Among the Nations of the North," are prominent articles, many of them finely illustrated. "Mr. Burke's Nieces" is continued, and there are stories, sketches, essays, etc., by Harriet Brown, A. E. Alexander, Eben E. Rexford, F. M. Holmes, etc., and poems by Annie Matheson, A. E. Dennis, Mrs. W. Fawcett, Chas. D. Bell, D. D., etc. In the Home Pulpit is a sermon by Rev. Dr. Talmage; and brief articles, paragraphs, and an entertaining and instructive miscellany make up this number. Price 25 cents, or $3 a year, postpaid. Address Mrs. Frank Leslie, publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

The North American Review for October presents a most attractive table of contents. Senator N. P. Hill writes on "Gold and Silver as Standards of Value." In "Some Aspects of Democracy in England," A. V. Dicey makes clear to the American reader how it is that, while all the forms of monarchy and aristocracy persist in Britain, the democracy, or, in other words public opinion, absolutely controls the action of the government. Under the title of "Co-operative Distribution," the Rev. Dr. R. Heber Newton gives an instructive historical sketch of the rise, progress and fluctuations of co-operative merchandizing in the United States during the past fifty years. Prof. W. Boyd Dawkins writes of "Early Man in America." The possibility of "Astronomical Collisions," is considered by Prof. C. A. Young. Moncure D. Conway discourses learnedly upon the "Saint Patrick Myth." Van Buren Denslow, in an article on "Board of Trade Morality," makes a vig*orous defense of the practices of* the Corn Exchange. Frederic Harrison contributes an article on "Histories of the French Revolution." Finally, the Rev. E. E. Hale presents an inventory of the volume and distribution of "Social Forces in the United States." Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York. $5.00 a year, 50 cents a number.

The September Magazine of American History is one of the best numbers of this standard publication yet issued. The leading article is by Gen. John Cochrane entitled "The Centennial of the Cincinnati." The second article, "A Baltimore Penny," is an extremely interesting contribution from H. W. Richardson, of Portland, Me. "The Geographical Nomen*clature of Louisiana," by Norman Walker* of New Orleans, is a paper of exceptional value, containing much new material, and delightfully readable. Wharton Dickinson, of Pennsylvania, contributes a bio*graphical sketch of "John Dickinson*, LL. D., the great Colonial Essayist." Col. T. Bailey Myers discusses the origin of the Medal of the Cincinnati. The eminent historian, James Schouler, furnishes several charming pages on "Lafayette's Tour in 1824", and Visitor appears with an unpublished letter of Washington to Mrs. Richard Stockton. The Original Documents contain unpublished letters of Baron de Steuben, George Clinton, Lafayette and Gen. Bloomfield, together with a document executed just a century ago, by which Philip Van Cortlandt was made Brigadier-General by brevet. The departments of Notes, Queries, Replies, Societies, and Book Notices are admirably well sustained. Publication office, 30 Lafayette Place, New York city.

Democratic Nominations.

For Governor,
LEON ABBETT,
of Hudson County.

ESSENTIALS.

There are two essential qualifications for a good Governor, namely:

Practical familiarity with the detailed affairs of State, or, in other words, with statesmanship.

Decision of character equal to the prompt and proper discharge of every official duty, devoid of fear or favor.

Without those essentials, a man may wear the title of Governor, but at the same time be little else than a figure-head.

Leon Abbett will be the Governor of New Jersey in deed as well as name.

He knows all the requirements of the office, and will carefully consider and wisely decide for the public welfare each one of the multitudinous questions that are sure to arise.

No other kind of Governor is safe for the people.

A citizen may as a jurist be eminent, as a merchant or manufacturer successful, as a lawyer fluent, as a farmer intelligent, and as a politician ambitious, yet, unless a thoroughly trained statesman, his induction into the Gubernatorial chair would be like sending a vessel to sea rudderless.

To be efficient as Governor he must be a statesman, both by inclination and experience.

Such is the Democratic candidate.

Vote for
LEON ABBETT.

A new law makes it necessary for you to register before you can vote.

COLORED VOTERS.

There is an increasing spirit of independence among colored voters throughout the United States and it speaks well for their true appreciation of citizenship.

They are tired of being nothing more than partisan drudges, of chopping wood and carrying water for the sole benefit of Republican bosses, and consequently, we find them boldly asserting freedom of opinion and the right to vote for whom they please.

That makes them citizen freemen, the contrary shackles them as political slaves.

At the South the colored vote is largely on the side of the Democratic party, for the just reason, such voters know and value the fact that the Democrats are their most reliable friends.

A kindred sentiment is rapidly spreading Northward. In the city of New York flourishes a Colored Democratic Club, and in Ohio many colored citizens are earnestly supporting the Democratic candidate for Governor, because, as they openly declare, he is the best man. So, likewise, are they doing in Massachusetts. So should they do in New Jersey.

Colored men of legal age and residence are fully entitled to suffrage. That is a high privilege conferred upon them by citizenship, and an important attendant duty is to exercise such privilege manfully and according to their own thoughtful judgment, without coercion or dictation from any quarter.

Around that intelligent and self respecting standard colored voters are fast rallying.

SOUND DEMOCRACY.

"I care nothing for myself, the triumph of sound political principles as represented by the Democratic party is what I wish for and aim to secure."

Such are the uttered words of Andrew Albright, and they express nobility of character and genuine political loyalty.

Mr. Albright was a prominent candidate before the Democratic State Convention for the Gubernatorial nomination; he received a large vote there in, but the moment a majority of the delegates registered their preference for another, there was not and there is not to-day a more earnest and sincere advocate of the election of Leon Abbett than the worthy citizen of Essex, Andrew Albright.

It affords us pleasure to thus applaud Mr. Albright. He is a true-hearted Democrat, because with him the will of the majority is supreme, and principles are of far greater value than any personal considerations.

If you want to vote hereafter you must register Oct. 16th.

That the Democrats made no mistake in nominating Abbett is apparent from the fact that the Republican papers of the State with one accord denounce him as a "bold, bad man."—Sunbeam.

It is claimed that because Mr. Abbett was at one time retained as counsel of a corporation he is therefore a monopolist. Then we suppose that every lawyer who has ever defended a murderer is himself a murderer.

It is said that one of the principal reasons why Judge Dixon will not resign and take the stump is in the hope that he may be confounded in South Jersey with Judge Nixon, who is deservedly popular, and so gain many votes.—True American.

The Newark Republicans held their city convention Friday evening last and renominated Mayor Henry Lang. For Water Commissioner Frederick Kuhn was nominated and for Tax Commissioner Marcus S. Richards. The Democrats held their convention on Saturday and nominated ex-alderman James Smith for Mayor. Smith refused the nomination, and another convention was held and Joseph B. Haines nominated.

The State press, favorable to the election of Hon. Leon Abbett, should follow the example of the great New York journals, who when the Sand Lot orator, Denis Kearney, a few years ago, made it a point to denounce and revile the newspapers, ignored his name from their columns. In this case those independent (?) journals, kept alive by so-called Democratic assistance, for the purpose of abusing and reviling the Democratic candidate for Governor, should be ignored by the legitimate press of the State, and not advertised, as is desired by them, in the quoting of their remarks and editorials.

The Board of Registration meets Oct. 16th. See legal notice.

ORGANIZATION OF THE DEMOCRATIC STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

The newly appointed Democratic State Central Committee met at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, on Saturday last, and organized for the campaign by selecting as President Hon. John R. McPherson; Secretary, John H. Laird, of Monmouth county, and Assistant Secretary, John Noonan, of Jersey City.

STATE CONVENTION OF FIREMEN.

Upwards of two hundred delegates, representing about fifty-five departments of the State, met in annual convention at Dover, Morris county, on Tuesday of last week. The convention was held in the Opera House, and Gen. Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic, presided. Rev. W. W. Halloway, Jr., offered prayer, after which an address of welcome was delivered by Mr. Gibson, of the Dover Era. After the transaction of business, at three o'clock the delegates were taken in charge by a committee of citizens, and headed by the Dover Band, marched to the Mansion House, where a fine dinner was partaken of. The delegates, including those from Elizabeth, were afterwards shown the various objects of interest in the city, including the rolling mills, and received many attentions at the hands of the Dover people. An election of officers resulted as follows: President, Bird W. Spencer, Passaic; Secretary, William H. Brown, Newark; Treasurer, John Kiernan. The Convention adjourned to meet at Hoboken a year hence.

The Board of Registration will sit to receive your name Oct. 16th.

HIS ANSWER TO THEM ALL.

At an immense ratification meeting held in Trenton last Friday evening, in honor of the nomination of Hon. Leon Abbett, Democratic candidate for Governor, there was unbounded enthusiasm over the speeches of Attorney-General Stockton, Leon Abbett and others. In the course of his remarks Mr. Abbett said:

"It is easy to denounce men in general terms, but give me the law or vote or the public utterances wherein I have been false to public trust. I defy its proof, and I say that a man who is not ready to produce the evidence of any slander he utters, is unworthy the name of man. I am prepared to meet evidence, but no man can be prepared to meet vague talk and slander. My answer to it all is, the Democratic convention has made me the standard-bearer of the party, and the people on the sixth of November will answer it in such thundering tones that it will lie away in the grave where all such mean things should be laid.

I say to-night that I have pledged no man anything. I stand before the people unpledged, free to do my duty to the whole people of the State as my best judgment at the time shall determine. I say more than that—I know in this fight no clique or faction. I know in this fight only Democrats and Republicans. I know the men that will stand by me to make this fight a successful one. I don't care whether they have been opposed to me in the past. They had a right to differ and dislike me, as I claim the right to differ and dislike them, but if they stand in this issue shoulder to shoulder with the great army of the Democracy, I know them hereafter as Democrats and as nothing else; and I wish that when the fight comes next year for a National triumph, to stand at the head of New Jersey's victorious hosts with such a majority as shall thunder in their ears no uncertain sound. And I pledge you and the people of this State, that if the voice of the people place me where a long line of honorable predecessors of Democratic Governors have sat, I will do no act that will not receive the sanction and approval of every honest and virtuous man in this State."

The 16th of October is the time set for voters to register.

The Newark Evening News, an anti-Abbett journal, says: "Unless Judge Dixon resigns he must resign himself to defeat in November."

Among the names prominently mentioned in connection with the Democratic candidacy for Sheriff of Somerset county, is that of Freeholder Nelson V. Staats, of Franklin township, a very worthy man for the position.

The Democratic State Convention of New York nominated the following ticket which is considered an exceptionally strong one:

For Sec. of State—Isaac H. Maynard.
For Comptroller—Alfred C. Chapin.
For Treasurer—Robert A. Maxwell.
For Att'y General—Denis O'Brien.
For State Engineer—Elnathan Sweet.

No wonder the Republican office-holders and wire-pullers froth at the mouth when Leon Abbett's name is mentioned to them. He will carry the State this Fall and organize the fierce Democracy so thoroughly this year and next that little Jersey will stand as firm as a rock in the Democratic columns of 1884. "Abbett and '84 will be the rallying cry."—Banner.

Levi D. Jarrard did not attend the recent Republican Convention, as he had been in the habit of doing with so much prominence for so many years past. A little matter of law detained him in Canada, otherwise he might have been in Trenton on Tuesday of last week—but not in Taylor Hall. However, "Cul" Barcalow aided the party by his presence and his advice.—Sunbeam.

Some of the Republican papers affect much "injured innocence" because Judge Dixon is alluded to as an Englishman; if the Democrats should nominate a native of England for Governor, wouldn't we hear of it and very loud too! The N. Y. Truth referring to this subject says no Englishman was ever elected Governor of any of the United States, and it don't believe ever will be—and also thinks that the nomination of Dixon must have been engineered by some enemy of the Republicans of New Jersey, to make their defeat more certain.

The Trenton True American reminds its readers that when the failure of the New Jersey Southern Railroad threw its workmen out of employment and defrauded them of the scant wages for which they had already worked for nearly six months, it was Leon Abbett who, in the Legislature and in the Courts, secured the passage and enforcement of a law which made the wages of workmen on railroads a prior lien on the receipts of the company. By this law and through the personal exertions of Mr. Abbett the employees of the New Jersey Southern Railway received every cent of their wages, which, but for him, would have been wasted in useless litigation. And so in every position to which he has been called his abilities and his energies have always been at the disposal of the weak and the oppressed.

STATE ITEMS.

The 28th annual exhibition of the Hunterdon Co. Agricultural Society, held at Flemington last week, was a success financially and socially.

The Fifteenth Regiment Association, at their reunion at Newton, elected General E. L. Campbell, of Trenton, President; Captain E. D. Halsey, Secretary, and Captain A. A. Haines, Treasurer.

A valuable bed of white sand has been discovered near Woodbury, and is being developed by the Woodbury Glass Works. The bed is supposed to contain thousands of tons of the sand, enough to supply the Woodbury factories for years.

In the United States Court at Trenton the case of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. against the New Jersey Central, with reference to the running of trains over the Long Branch road, was adjourned until March by mutual consent of counsel.

The fourth annual reunion of the First Regiment of New Jersey Cavalry will be held at Trenton on October 11. It is claimed that no regiment that went to the war took part in as many engagements or lost as many men as the First N. J. Cavalry during the war.

St. John's Roman Catholic Church of Trenton, which for nearly a generation has held thousands of devout worshippers, was destroyed by fire on Sunday night last. The loss is estimated at about $40,000. The cause of the fire is a mystery. The insurance will amount to about $20,000.

The Trenton assessors this year for the first time assessed the telephones of the Delaware and Atlantic Telegraph and Telephone Co., which controls the Trenton Telephone Exchange. The valuation is fixed at $12,500, $50 apiece for each of 250 telephones. A compromise was finally effected by which the Telephone Co. will pay tax upon a valuation of $4,000.

The sale of hypothecated Rahway city bonds at the office of E. N. Miller, Newark, on Wednesday evening of last week, brought together a fair number of bidders. The first lot offered was sold for 20 per cent., but the price soon advanced, and 24 was realized on the last lot, which probably represented the real value of the bonds in the eyes of the bidders.

New Brunswick is excited over the charge made by a young girl named Lavina Saunderson, who avers that a companion named Lizzie Snider enticed her to a house of ill-fame in Washington street, Trenton, kept by Lou Watson. The Saunderson girl afterward had the Snider girl arrested for perjury. Both girls have placed themselves in an embarrassing position by their charges.

Thursday morning of last week at about half past eleven o'clock, a fire broke out in the cattle sheds at the Waverly Fair Grounds and that building, which was some 300 feet long, and the poultry building, which was 200 feet long and 50 feet wide, were soon a mass of ruins. President Clark appealed to the Elizabeth Fire Department, and Rolla Engine with Continental Hose was soon on the grounds. The burned buildings were worth about $3,000 and were insured. While the above fire was raging, a barn on the Hotel premises, near the grounds, was also burned, and the Hotel was, with considerable difficulty, saved.

It is necessary for you to register your name before the Registry Board, Oct. 16th.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

In spite of the threatening skies the anniversary services of All Saints church, Scotch Plains, were very well attended. The Bishop was unfortunately unable to be present, but his place was well filled by the Rev. Mr. Walker of New York, who delivered a most admirable discourse on Prayer. The subject was treated in a thoroughly earnest and practical way. The objections of those who claim that, as the universe is ruled by law, therefore prayer must be useless, were satisfactorily answered, while the great privilege granted to man, of entering into communion with the Father, was dwelt upon as a priceless blessing. Mr. Walker added to his sermon some happily chosen words of sympathy with the congregation in their anniversary gladness, and made a strong appeal to the friends of the church present, to help lift the debt which, as he said, cuased a dark cloud to rest over the church. The Rector made a brief financial report, stating that within the nine months which have passed since the church debt was burdened, one tenth of the bonds have been cancelled, while the running expenses of the church have been provided for. As to the music, little need be said. The mere fact that Mr. Arthur and his choir had it in charge is sufficient to vouch for its excellence. Such a musical treat is seldom to be obtained away from the large cities. In the afternoon the Rev. Mr. Murphy, of North Plainfield, delivered an eloquent and practical sermon from the text, "Why stand ye here all the day idle?" At the close of the services the choir sang Rossini's "Sing and rejoice" which formed a most appropriate and beautiful ending for the day of rejoicing.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Collector Connoly is around the present week with the tax bills for 1883.

The Rev. Mr. Clements occupied the pulpit of the M. E. church last Sunday.

Empire Engine Company, No. 2, held their regular monthly meeting on last Tuesday evening.

Joel Moffett has removed the past week to his new residence, corner of Park and Mountain avenues.

Lewis C. Thice is the grand juryman from our town at the present term of the Union County Courts.

The Westfield Athletic Club held their regular Fall meeting at their Club room on Wednesday evening last.

Hank Dougherty has recently purchased the celebrated horse "Fear Not." Look out for him on the road.

John De Long has purchased during the past week the house and lot on Park street, belonging to Joseph E. Crosby.

The Health Board met on Monday evening last. The only business of importance was the appointment of a Township physician.

On Monday night our town was nearly in total darkness, owing, we understand, to the change of lamp-lighter; the new man not understanding his business.

The entertainment by Alfred E. Pearsall, of humorous and dramatic readings, given in the M. E. church last week, was well attended, and all left well pleased with the exercises.

The Town Committee met at Town Rooms on Monday evening last, it being the time appointed by law to levy the tax on dogs. They fixed the rate at 25 cents, and ordered the Assessor to levy the same.

Under the State law the Fire Department ought to hold at least two meetings a year. The one in our town has now been organized and incorporated over seven months, and has not as yet held any meeting.

John L. Roulston has rented the house corner of North avenue and Elm street, from Robert French, and removed into the same. It was recently occupied by Mahlon H. Ferris, who has rented of James T. Pierson, corner of Central ave. and Broad street, and moved therein.

Last week at the Public School, the children had their first exercise in a fire drill. Both floors, containing about 300 scholars, were emptied in one minute and ten seconds. With a little more practice the teachers will be able to get the scholars out in one-half that time. Each class has its officers.

The regular monthly meeting of Westfield Bucket & Engine Co., No. 1, was held on Tuesday evening last. There was more than an average attendance. Two new members were elected. The meeting was presided over by their new foreman, Charles Wall, and considerable interest manifested in the welfare of the company.

Jane Miller, wife of Hiram Miller, who was a native and former resident of our town, died at La Salle, Indiana, the present residence of her husband, on Friday last. The body was brought to Cranford to Mrs. Dunham's, mother of the deceased, from which place the funeral occurred on Monday last. Interment in Fairview Cemetery.

On Monday night, Hewlett Perrine, who had been to the town and partaken of too much fire water, started for home on his way up Clark street. He drove his horse attached to a spring wagon and ran into hackman Urmston's new buggy, throwing the occupant, Geo. Urmston, out and breaking the wheels and shafts and doing a damage of nearly fifty dollars to the same.

John L. Roulston, who has been proprietor of the saloon, corner of North avenue and Elm street, for the past five years, has sold out his interest in the same the past week to John J. and Geo. Wahl, of New Providence. The new proprietors received their license on Tuesday last from the Union Co., Courts. If they only keep the place as quiet and orderly as it has been by Mr. Roulston, against whom there has never been any complaint, it will be a satisfaction to the public.

TIRED ALL OVER!
What Rested and Refreshed a Weary Man in Memphis.
"It never amounted to an acute pain, but continued to be a dull weary ache in the small of my back," writes Mr. James Thomas, of No. 20 Madison street, Memphis, Tenn. "This was an old experience, and one became dull music. I was tired all over, with pain in the lower limbs, and a habit of laying awake of nights. Recently I tried one of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS and was decidedly relieved within twenty-four hours. It may have been Providence that did the work, but I give the credit to Benson's porous plaster." Mr. Thomas' reverential idea does him credit, but Providence works by agents, and among them Benson's plaster ranks first as an external remedy. It acts quickly to relieve and healing, and renders life better worth living. Price 25 cents. Look in the middle of the plaster for the word CAPCINE. Ask your physician about it. An Interesting Relic.

Mr. M. M. Thorn, of this city, has been forwarded by friends, a copy of the Times and Expositor published at Adrain, Mich., which contains an account of the finding of a valuable document, which is the official list of the premiums awarded at the first fair ever held by the Lenawee, Mich., County Agricultural Society. As the name of Mr. Thorn appears in it as an exhibitor, the document is doubly interesting to him. The fair was held at Adrain, Mich., Oct. 9th and 10th, 1849, and Mr. Thorn was awarded premiums for best lot of sweet potatoes, paring machine, plums and pears. The paring machine was afterward placed on exhibition in the Crystal Palace, and was destroyed when that institution was burned.

The firemen were also furnished with a lunch at Waverly Hotel after the fire.

Hon. Leon Abbett in Plainfield.

We last week announced that Hon. Leon Abbett, Democratic Candidate for Governor of this State, would address a Mass Meeting at VanDeventer Hall, this city, on the evening of Oct 18. Since arrangements were made for such meeting, it has been found necessary to change the date of the meeting in consequence of the many engagements of Mr. Abbett to speak in various parts of the State. It is therefore now announced that HON. LEON ABBETT will positively address a Plainfield audience at Van Deventer Hall, SATURDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 13th.

Fraternal Favors.

This morning, Robert S. Davis, Esq., proprietor of the Philadelphia Evening Call, intends running a special train from this city to transport the employees of the Potter Press Works and their families to Fairmount Park, where, with the employees of that paper and their families, a day's enjoyment will result. The latter say of the former: "These workmen built our present Scott Web Perfecting Press, and are now hard at work on the duplicate we ordered a week ago. We want them to see Philadelphia, where the Evening Call is published with such great success. What feature of our city can they more enjoy than Fairmount Park, the finest in all the world?"

October 16th is registration day.

To Those In Authority.

Whoever is vested with authority in the Plainfield Fire Department to control the actions of the fire companies in cases of fires or alarms of fires, should at once see to it that all the available force of the Department is not allowed to go to the extreme limits of the city, and even beyond it, whenever an alarm or fire occurs, and thus leave the heart of the city unprotected in case a fire should break out there while all the fire apparatus are a mile and a half away. It is not necessary for all the steamers to be sent to such distant fires as have recently occurred. One steamer surely should be left behind to protect the heart of the city. A word in time and prompt action on this suggestion, may save us from a disastrous fire some time.

The Classis.

The Classis of Raritan will meet in its stated Fall session on the Second Tuesday, Oct. 9th, at 10 a. m., in the First Reformed at Raritan. Synodical dues are to be paid at this meeting

The Classis of Monmouth will meet in stated session in the Reformed Church at Keyport on Monday, Oct. 15th. Rev. W. H. Phraner or the Rev. Geo. W. Labaw, his secundus, will read an essay. The President, Rev. S. P. Brokaw is expected to preach the sermon.

The Vocal Society.

Following the circular addressed to former members of the Plainfield Vocal Society asking their assistance in the reorganization of that association, a meeting was held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, Tuesday evening, for such purpose. There were present about fifty ready to commence active work, and the meeting showed an enthusiasm that assured success so far as the vocalists are concerned. About one thousand dollars will be necessary to carry out all preparation and the attendant expenses of three concerts, which it is proposed to raise by the help of subscribing members. Tickets for the concerts will be sold only on subscription—four tickets for the entire course at $10. In the past these entertainments have been justly considered the most pleasing and thoroughly satisfactory concerts given, and it is to be devoutly hoped that our citizens will liberally contribute to the accomplishment of the same again.

Bring out your friends on registration day.

The Courts.

The October term of the Union County Courts was opened on Tuesday last by Judges Van Syckle, McCormick, Harper and Hyer, the attendance being unusually large. The following is a list of the Grand Jurors for the term:

James S. Green, 6th ward, Elizabeth, Foreman; Richard Frobwein, 1st ward; Wm. Connelly, 2d ward; Ernest Meyer, 3d ward; Hampton C. Williams, 4th ward; Wm. M. Oliver, 5th ward; J. Madison Watson, 7th ward; Erastus G. Putnam, 8th ward; Rowland M. Stover, Plainfield; J. Frank Hubbard, Plainfield; Louis F. Wadsworth, Plainfield; Wm. J. Leonard, Plainfield; Isaac S. Miller, Rahway; Elw. McQuckin, Rahway; Frederick Eyer, Rahway; Christian Ehrlich, Rahway; Lewis C. Thiess, Westfield; Chas. L. Avery, Cranford; Bradford Jones, Jr., New Providence; Clarence Agnes, Springfield; Cornelius W. L. Martine, Fanwood; Wm. Bloodgood, Clark; Milton C. Lowden, Linden; Stephen F. Baker, Union.

Judge Van Syckel charged the jury in an impressive manner, dwelling particularly upon the killing of a human being, there being three cases liable to indictment for that offense coming before the Grand Jury. The list of causes for the term is unusually large, the Supreme Court list having 24 cases. The Circuit Court 31, Argument 2, Quarter Session 1, Jury Appeal 1, Justices' Appeal 6; total 65. The jail list has 18 cases in all; three for murder, five for burglary, two for adultery, two for cutting and maiming, two for assault and battery, one each for obstructing an officer, bigamy, grand larceny and entering and stealing.

At The Netherwood.

Even when compared with the past successes of the season at the same place, the Complimentary Reception and Hop, given by Mr. S. V. Woodruff at the Hotel Netherwood, to his friends in this city last Saturday evening, was unsurpassed in its many enjoyable features. A large number from Plainfield arrived about nine o'clock, immediately after which an unusually fine display of fire-works was given which lasted almost an hour under the charge of an expert sent by the manufacturers. Following this a sextette of musicians selected from Thomas' Orchestra of New York, opened the ball with a waltz composed of combined airs from "The Queen's Lace Handkerchief;" and thereafter the devotees of the dance enthusiastically whirled away the hours until midnight. Those who favored quieter enjoyment promenaded in couples beneath the hundreds of many-colored lanterns that illuminated the piazza, or partook of iced-creams and salads in the brilliantly lighted dining room. The event was thoroughly satisfactory, and the complete gratification of all resulted—for which attainment entire credit is due the generous and courteous host who brought it about.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The Board of Directors will meet this (Thursday) evening at 8 o'clock. Every member is requested to attend.

The Bible study will be held in the Y. M. C. A. parlor, Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock. Every young man in Plainfield is welcome.

The Boy's Branch meets every Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The autumnal reception on Tuesday evening, September 25th, was largely attended, and the programme furnished by Prof. Bradford Williams, very much appreciated. The audience was kept in constant laughter by Mr. Williams' facial expression of different persons.

The prayer meeting topics for October, November and December, will be ready for distribution this week, and may be had at the Secretary's desk.

All branches of work are now wearing a new aspect and give promise that this year will be the most successful one during the existence of the Association.

Now is the time to join the Association. You can have all its privileges, except the star lecture course, for $2.00. Hand your name to any of the members and they will see that you become a member and are brought into the work.

Fire at Netherwood.

Sometime after midnight of Tuesday, the residence of Walter S. Graham, Esq., on Woodland avenue, Netherwood, was destroyed by fire and its contents entirely consumed. Mr. Graham states that he was aroused by his little dog, and looking from the window of the room saw some persons unknown upon his premises. He fired one or two shots from a revolver at the strangers, who disappeared, and almost afterward he saw smoke coming from the windows of the laundry. So rapid was the spread of the flames that Mr. and Mrs. Graham and servant had the greatest difficulty in escaping from the house, and only saved the few articles of apparel they could seize and wrap around them.

The alarm was rung in this city and those of the Department that were awakened responded. No. 2's Company assisted in dragging No. 3's engine to the fire, as their own apparatus is off duty, and No. 3 is stored in their house while the latter Company's house is undergoing repairs. They succeeded in getting first water from a private well near by, while Gazelle's Steamer dropped its suction in the Hotel's cisterns and thereby procured a steady stream. The journey through the mud from this city consumed so much time, however, that nothing was left to save when the firemen commenced work.

The loss was a total one. The house was owned by Chas. Hyde, Esq., of this city, and insured for $4.500 in the Citizens of New York and the Springfield Insurance Co., of Mass. Mr. Graham's furniture was insured for $5,000 in the Continental and his piano for $1,000 in the German American. In another column he publishes his offer of a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the supposed incendiaries. The dog that awakened Mr. Graham and nine cats out of fifteen household pets, were consumed.

The Firemen's Parade.

The Parade of the Plainfield Fire Department, to take place during Thursday afternoon next, promises to be a very showy affair. Besides our own companies, many visiting firemen will join in the march and be afterwards entertained by the Plainfielders. Gazelle Engine Co., No. 1., have invited Somerville Eng. Co. No. 1, the Truck officers of the same place and the Chief and his two assistants. They will have Winckler's Band of Trenton of 20 pieces. Plainfield Engine Co., No. 2, had invited Neptune Steamer and Hose Co. 2., of New Brunswick, but they were unable to come. They will therefore entertain a delegation of firemen from New Brunswick, Rahway, Montclair and vicinity without apparatus. No. 2, has engaged the Milltown Cornet Band of 20 pieces. Warren Engine Co. No. 3, will not entertain any visitors and will be headed by a drum corps. Zephyr H. & L. Co. No. 1, will have as their guests the following; Eli. Bates, Chief N. Y. Mr. T. J. Gillies was the only nominee and received the unanimous vote of those present.

Mr. Polak moved that the vacancy of clerk in the Fourth Ward be filled. Carried.

Mr. J. A. Demarest was nominated and elected to such office.

Mr. Polak moved an appropriation of $250 to be expended on the streets, which was tabled.

The Council then adjourned.

FIRE MATTERS.

At a special meeting of Alert Hose Co. No. 1, of Plainfield, N. J., held Tuesday evening, Sept. 25th, 1883, the following resolutions were passed:

WHEREAS, At a special meeting of this company held on the 28th of August, called for the purpose of ascertaining the wishes of the members of the same, as to a proposed parade, it was decided by a unanimous vote, that we, as a company, were opposed to such parade, and at that time it was generally understood that a majority of the companies of the department were of the same mind. And denying, as we do, the right of the Fire Board or the Chief Engineer, to order any company to parade or to appropriate the people's money for such purpose; therefore be it

Resolved, That we decline to take part in the coming parade; yet asserting that we are at all times ready and willing to perform any legitimate duty, lawfully required of us, and ready to turn out with our apparatus for inspection at any place, on any day and at any reasonable hour, that the Fire Board or the Chief Engineer may order.

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to transmit a copy of these resolutions to the Fire Board and the Chief Engineer.

Monday evening last Gazelle steamer, No. 1 was taken to the fire well corner of Seventh street and Broadway, for the purpose of testing "Prunty's Automatic Relief Valve and Combination Spray and Distributing Nozzle," a valuable invention, now in use in the fire departments of the principal large cities of the United States. By the use of this nozzle the pipeman is enabled to control the water passing through the pipe without stopping the engine, shutting it completely off when necessary in changing a line of hose from one locality to another, or in entering a burning building without deluging the surroundings with water. The Valve and Nozzle gave fair satisfaction at first, but in consequence of sand somewhat clogging the valves, the agent, Mr. Street, decided to send out another valve which has an attachment to it to allow the sand to be blown out when becoming necessary, and another trial will be given at an early date. The attachment to each engine of the Prunty patent, will cost $125, but it is thought that the amount will be well expended by the advantages to be derived from its use, provided they can be worked successfully on engines when taking water by suction from sand wells as ours are compelled to.

SOMERS' ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA cures Chills and Fever quickly and surely. It is a sovereign remedy for all diseases that have their origin in Malaria. It relieves Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, etc., and in most cases actually cures them. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

Dyspeptics, Read this:—William Collins, Clark, Mich., writes us: I consider that my life has been saved by the use of that most reliable medicine, Coe's Dyspepsia Cure. For many years I suffered with Dyspepsia and used many medicines which were highly recommended, without relief. I am now permanently cured by the use of Coe's Dyspepsia Cure, and upon my recommendation many others, to my personal knowledge, can testify to its great merit. It has never failed to cure.

Ask yourself if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cents, to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will Cure your Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup, and Whooping Cough at once. Mothers do not be without it. THE PAPERS OF MR. BUCHANAN.

III.

MR. BUCHANAN'S POLITICAL CREED.

The following extracts are taken from a letter written by Mr. Buchanan, in 1839, to a friend in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, shortly before the State failed to pay the interest on its public debt. The internal improvements, for the construction of which the great bulk of the debt was contracted, consisted of 793 miles of railways and canals, completed in January, 1843, and 140 miles of canals in progress and nearly completed at that time. In 1839, when Mr. Buchanan wrote this letter, the principal chain of works in progress was that between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, extending nearly the whole length of the State, a distance of 395 miles, and connecting the Atlantic with the Ohio river and the great Western waters. The debt contracted for canals and railways before January, 1843, was $30,533,629.15. The first failure to meet the interest on the State debt at the time it became due was on the 1st of August, 1842. The interest then falling due amounted to $871,000. It was paid in certificates, bearing interest at 6 per cent., and two succeeding dividends were paid in the same manner. These certificates and the interest accrued upon them remained unpaid in January, 1844. Then arose what was called, and nearly became, the "repudiation" of the State of Pennsylvania, about which Sidney Smith wrote his famous letter, and which was subsequently avoided by the public spirit and integrity of the people of the State. The foregoing facts explain Mr. Buchanan's anxiety in 1839:

LANCASTER, 29th June, 1839.

* * * The acknowledged leader of the Democratic party, in his day, was the author of the Declaration of Independence. This party has passed through a fiery and fearful ordeal since the commencement of General Jackson's administration. In the violent political struggles which since that period have in rapid succession convulsed the country, many of our most distinguished leaders have either become neutral or deserted to the enemy; but the people have still remained true to their own cause. Their motto has been, as I trust it ever may be, "Principles, not men." The party is now founded upon a rock against which neither the winds nor the waves can prevail. It has been purified in the fire of persecution. We have lopped off all the branches of false doctrine which a selfish expediency had engrafted upon the venerable oak of Democracy; and, freed from parasites and creepers who adhered to it solely for the purpose of sustaining themselves, it now stands forth in its own naked strength and grandeur, "moored in the rifted rock, proof to the tempest's shock."

The two great political parties in this country owe their origin to the very nature and structure of the Federal Constitution. Under whatsoever names they may be called, they must continue to exist while that instrument shall endure. The abandonment of old names and the adoption of new ones have never yet changed, and never will change, the principles of our political opponents. They have resorted to the expedient from the characteristic belief in the "gullibility" of the people, and have always been disappointed. When you apply to them the touchstone of principle, you find them to be always the same under every disguise.

The fundamental principle of the Democratic party is a firm and abiding reliance upon the virtue and intelligence of the people. We hold it as a canon of our faith that the people are capable of self-government, and require no extraneous influence to make them tread the path which leads to the greatest good for the greatest number. Hence we have been ever jealous of the exercise of any power or any influence over them by the Federal Government, which the people of the several States, in their sovereign capacity, have not clearly granted under the Constitution of the United States. The Democratic party, therefore, have from the beginning advocated a strict construction of the Federal Constitution, and have always opposed every invasion of State rights.

On the contrary, our opponents, whatever name they may have assumed, have ever advocated an extension of the powers of the Federal Government by a loose construction of the Federal Constitution, and have thus endeavored to create what they have always admired, a strong government. Distrusting or denying the capacity of the people for self-government, for the purpose of influencing them they have from the beginning sought an alliance with the money power. If the present were the proper occasion, their whole history might be called in proof of this position, from the day the first Bank of the United States was chartered until the feelings of the Democracy of Pennsylvania were outraged by the treacherous desertion of some of its favored leaders, and the consequent revival of that institution which had been doomed to destruction by the Democracy of the Union.

How simple and beautiful are the principles of Democracy when carried out faithfully and fairly into practice! The Federal Constitution confers no power upon the Congress of the States over the question of domestic slavery in any one of them, much less does it grant the power to the people of any one State to interfere with this delicate question within the limits of another; and therefore Democracy is willing to leave the question of abolition to be decided by those to whom it constitutionally belongs.

The Federal Constitution confers no power upon Congress to charter a Bank to the United States, and by thus allying the Federal Government with the money power to create a combination which might prove too strong for the people. Democracy is therefore opposed to this usurpation. It is true that on two occasions this "vagrant power" to create a bank, as Mr. Clay formerly characterized it, has been exercised by Congress under the pressure of a fancied necessity. The result has manifested that principles are immutable and eternal; and whenever they are made to yield to temporary expediency, they always vindicate themselves in the end by inflicting ten times more suffering than was sought to be averted by their abandonment.

The Federal Constitution recognizes gold and silver as the only standard of value; and therefore Democracy desires, without injuring the State banks, to dissolve the connection — unfortunate for both — which has heretofore existed between them and the Federal Government, and gradually to return to the ancient practice of collecting, keeping, and disbursing the public revenue in the constitutional currency, through the agency of responsible officers, instead of irresponsible banks.

It was the glory of public men among the ancient Romans to be liberal of their own money and parsimonious of that of the people. Economy is a cardinal principle in Democratic policy. Generosity in individuals, when they can afford to be generous, is a noble trait of character. To be extravagant with the money of others is rank injustice to them. The representatives of the people, therefore, whatever disposition they may choose to make of their own money, ought to guard with extreme care the money of the people with which they are intrusted. It is a disregard of this Democratic principle which has swelled to such an enormous amount the State debt now entailed upon ourselves and those who shall come after us. Who has not deplored the extravagant and profligate waste of the pub*lic money to subserve corporate, local* and individual interests, in which the people generally had no concern, during the period of the late State administrations? It is high time that these abuses should be corrected. Our debt is annually increasing, while we are compelled annually to borrow money to pay the interest upon it. Our public improvements, upon which we relied to pay this interest, have as yet yielded but little more than was necessary to keep them in repair and operation. The interest and the honor of the State equally require that the main lines should be completed. This can only be accomplished by the most rigid economy. In our present embarrassed condition, how absurd is it in itself and how unjust to the people of the State, to be squandering their money upon objects of a mere local character, or bestowing it in aid of wealthy chartered companies! Thanks to our present Executive, he seems determined to arrest this profligate expenditure; and he may rest assured that no administration can now be sustained in Pennsylvania which shall not observe the most rigid economy. The time has passed for being generous; we must now seek only to be just, and to keep our faith with the public creditors, without taxing the people, if that be possible. The excellent principles so clearly stated and so forcibly maintained in the late financial report of one of your own Representatives, are those on which the Democracy ought to act, at least until the public improvements shall become productive.

* * * * * * *

Yours very respectfully,
JAMES BUCHANAN.

A bolt of lightning struck the ground near East Thompson, Mass., in front of a pair of horses. One of them was killed and the other, a bay, is now coal black and much faster.

Old pugilists are reported to be discouraged about the state of business at present. There is not as much interest in the ring as there used to be, good men are scarce and matches are interfered with.

A few pretty American girls are creating quite a sensation in England. Pretty girls are so numerous in this country that they seldom attract attention, save when the top of another woman's parasol catches in their back hair and pulls off their switches.

The Chief of Police who was at the head of the Philadelphia Police Department when Charley Ross was stolen, has recently died and among his effects are two letters never given to the public. They show that Charlie Ross was in all probability killed by Mosher and Douglass in Nov. 1874.

We favor a tariff for revenue, limited to the necessary expenditure of the Government, and so adjusted as to give protection and encouragement to home productive industry and labor, without producing or fostering monopolies.—Democratic Platform.

A correspondent who took notes of the delegates to the Republican Convention telegraphed to his paper "there is not a short-hair among the delegates; neither is there a workingman." The people have nothing to expect from the Republican party and nothing in common with it.

A farmer in Essex county had five of the fresh air fund boys from New York, and a tough lot they proved to be. The first forenoon they were on the farm they hung the farmer's large pet Newfoundland dog to an apple tree, and in the afternoon they placed his light wagon across the railroad track as a train was approaching, and the wagon was knocked into smithereens.—Malone Palladium.

Speaking of the New Jersey Republican Convention, the World says it "was filled with Federal office-holders, notorious legislative lobbyists, the agents of railroads and of the Standard Oil Company, prohibition fanatics and men who have been under indictment for official misconduct. It was a body without character, without enthusiasm and apparently overshadowed by the cloud of impending defeat.

A few months since, when a train passed Fargo, a wealthy passenger was struck with admiration over the tender manner in which a young lady led her aged grandmother along a path near the track. Seeking an introduction, the man of riches married her in a few weeks, and now every time a train pulls into that burg at least a dozen maidens can be seen trotting their old grandmothers up and down the track.—Bismarck (Dak.) Tribune.

A band of gypsies traveling through the country with a performing bear found that they could no longer restrain the animal, and accordingly they camped on Garrett Mountain and tied the bear to a tree, expecting to tame him. The animal broke loose and for some time roamed about the mountain, the gypsies not daring to approach. Word was sent to Paterson, and a number of hunters with rifles and torches looked for the bear Saturday evening, but failed to find him. He was last seen going in the direction of Montclair.

POETRY.

THE THREE CENT STAMP.

Good-by, old stamp, it's nasty luck
That ends our friendship so.
When others failed you gamely stuck,
But now you've got to go.
So here's a flood of bonny tears,
And here's an honest sigh—
Good-by, old friend, of many years—
Good-by, old stamp, good-by!

Your life has been a wearied one,
With curious phases fraught—
Sometimes a check, sometimes a dun,
Your daily coming brought;
Smiles to a waiting lover's face,
Tears to a mother's eye,
Or joy or pain to every place—
Good-by, old stamp, good-by!

You bravely toiled, and better men
Will vouch for what I say;
Although you have been licked 'twas when
Your face turned t'other way.
'Twas often in a box you got
(As you will not deny),
For going through the mails I wot—
Good-by, old stamp, good-by!

Ah, in your last expiring breath!
The tale of years is heard—
The sound of voices hushed in death,
A mother's dying word,
A maiden's answer soft and sweet,
A wife's regretful sigh,
The patter of a baby's feet—
Good-by, old stamp, good-by!

What wonder, then, that at this time
When you and I must part,
I should aspire to speak in rhyme
The promptings of my heart.
Go, bide with all those mem'ries dear
That live when others die—
You've nobly served your purpose here—
Good-by, old stamp, good-by!

THE QUAKER ARTIST.

'I tell thee now, Richard, that thee'll never get a cent of my money if thee keeps on with this devil's work.'

The speaker was Friend Joseph Harris, and he held at arm's length a small picture in water colors, the features of which were hardly discernable in the gloom of the winter morning.

Friend Joseph had been at the barn, as was his custom, to fodder the cattle and feed the horses before breakfast, and had discovered the humble bit of art in a nook in the granary.

He did not have to be told that it was his son Richard's work, whose inclination to such ungodly pursuits had been the distress of his parent's lives.

Full of suppressed wrath Joseph burst into the kitchen where the family were awaiting breakfast, and without preface addressed his son with the threat he considered the most dreadful he could use—that of disinheritance.

It meant something, too, for in spite of his plain surroundings, Joseph Harris owned nearly 200 acres of land worth easily $150 an acre, and his visits on the first of April of each year were not to pay interest, but to receive it.

A tall, straight figure, he was nearly sixty years of age, but as vigorous as a youth, with quick motions and sharp black eyes, indicating a violent nature chained for life by the strict discipline of the Society of Friends.

His son Richard, now turned of twenty-two, was of a different mould, short and stoutly built. His face at a first sight seemed heavy and vacant, but this was in fact the abstraction of the dreamer. His soft brown eyes, and hair clustering in thick curls over his low and broad forehead, made amends for his somewhat common place features.

The moment his father entered the kitchen Richard felt that his secret labor has been discovered, but his anxiety was more for it than for himself. He rarely dared face his father's anger, for Joseph Harris, like many of his sex, made up in severity at home for the smooth and passionless exterior he maintained abroad.

'Will thee give it to me, father?' said Richard, advancing toward the outstretched hand which held the sketch, while the hand's owner contemplated it with unspeakable disgust.

Poor little painting. It was a fragment of an autumn afternoon, during which Richard had been husking corn in "the hill field", and which had abided in his memory clothed with the halo of a hundred day-dreams.

There was a corner of a woods, the foliage half green, half shading into tints of brown and red. A rivulet leaving a piece of meadow still gay with autumn flowers and green with wet grass, flowed *rippling and sparkling out of the sun*light into the shade of the dying leaves. What great courage and hope it must have!

Richard followed in thought its waters as they flowed on to Chester creek and then to the stately Delaware river, and far out till they met the mighty ocean which washes the shores of all the world.

And as he mechanically plunged his husking knife into the shucks and turned out the golden ears one after the other, he humbly took his lesson to himself, as was his wont, and said: 'I too must have courage, firm hope. Why should I not go forward in my study of art with great faith? I must, I will.'

And to fasten the vow he had painted two studies of this little piece of meadow as a constant reminder, snatching the time on the first days and fifth days, when his father and mother were at meeting, and he and Mose Riddle, the colored man, were left to look at the stock.

One copy he had sent on a venture to a commission house in New York, the other he had hidden in the barn.

It had acquired a kind of sanctity to him, each tree had become a symbol of rebuff or danger he was fated to encounter in his future life. He had, moreover, described it to Sibbilla Vernon, and had *promised this sole confidante of his as*pirations that he would bring it over some time and let her see it.

But Sibbilla lived two miles away, and as her parents were also strict members of the Friends, who regarded every work of art as profanity, this would have to be managed with due caution.

Richard's first impulse, therefore, was to secure the picture. But his father had a double cause of displeasure and his anger was deep.

He had agreed to give Richard a fourth share in the profits of the farm this year, and not only was this painting business an ungodly amusement, but also a loss of precious time and money. It must be stopped.

'I'll put it where it deserves to go, and where thee will follow unless thee turns thy steps from the world and its follies. But the fire that thou wilt meet will be that which is not quenched, and where the worm dieth not.'

With these words, which friend Harris spoke slowly and with that slight chanting intonation which characterizes the utterances of the speakers in meeting, the solemnity of which was further increased by the use of the formal 'thou,' instead of the usual 'thee', he stepped to the kitchen fire-place, where a goodly fire was burning under the crane, and striking the picture against the corner of the mantle-piece, tore a ragged split through its centre and threw the whole into the flames. In a moment it was a shriveled cinder.

There are certain natures whose inherent strength can only be developed by a violent shock. Full of latent power, their weakness comes from a native humility. They distrust themselves through a genuine admiration of others. Such was Richard Harris. But the necessary shock had come.

He gazed a moment at the cinders, his face crimson, but the severe discipline of the society and the family exercised the sway that it usually does even on the very young among Friends.

'Father,' he said, with a low and even tone, 'I repeat what I have often said; I have no light that there is evil in painting; but as thee thinks there is, I shall bid thee and mother farewell to-day and seek employment elsewhere. I shall not ask thee for any share in thy estate.'

Taking his hat from the window-sill, he passed out of the kitchen door, leaving his father speechless with amazement at this rebellious utterance, and his mother —a poor weak woman, constantly in misery between carrying out the severe rules of her husband whom she feared, and yielding to her tenderness for the boy whom she loved—wiping her tears without emitting any sound, either word or sob. As for his two sisters, they sat demure and motionless through the whole scene, at heart rather pleased at it, as they had no sympathy with their brother's taste for forbidden arts, and thought him a queer, wasteful, uncomfortable member of the household. Moreover though younger than he, they were not too young to see at once the pecuniary advantage to them of this renunciation of his share of the estate.

Richard went toward the barn and took a seat in the nook of the corn-fodder stack that was built along the side of the barnyard.

He did not feel the cold, raw air of the early morning. His mind was too full of the step he was about to take and what had led up to it.

Now or never he must renounce the teachings of the society, throw aside the coat with standing collar and the quaint broad brimmed black hat, give up the language, reject the counsels of the venerable forces of the meeting who would surely be appointed to visit him, *and prove recreant to the revered pre*cepts of Fox and Barclay. All this was meant by a pursuit of his strong bias for art.

Why was he born with it? Whence came it? These questions he often asked himself. For six generations his ancestors had never touched a brush or palette; not a painting or a statue, nor a musical instrument, nor any drama or work of fiction had been allowed in their houses. How had he been created with a passion for color and form, with a love of poetry and music, which neither the dreary farm work nor the colorless life, nor all the frigid, deadening discipline of the society could quench?

Going back to his earliest memory, he could recall that when four years old he was left for a few hours at the house of Mike Willis, an Irish tenant on a neigh*boring farm, and that Mike's wife had* kept him in the utmost bliss by showing him a colored print of the virgin and the infant, and telling him the pathetic history as it pictured itself in her warm Irish heart.

But what was the horror of his parents next day when he bolted into the room when they were at dinner and called:

'Mudder, mudder come and see God.'

His parents ran to the door to see what this strange appeal meant, and lo, there on the floor of the front porch, chalked in rude but faithful outlines, were the child, with rays of glory round his head, and the mother by his side holding a cross. He could still recall the scowl that came over his father's face, and his mother's impetuous rush for a bucket of water and scrubbing-brush. Nor had forgotten the violent shake and immediate spanking he himself received for his artistic endeavor.

His memory leapt till he was a boy of ten, and to his intense delight and effecting a trade of a barlow knife for a box of paints. Many an hour of joy had they given him, hiding himself in the garret of the old house, in the back part of the hay mow near the dusty gable window, or in a little hut he had built in the woods. But his prying little sisters betrayed him one day, and not only was his treasure confiscated, but he himself was tied to a bedpost by his mother, and given such a whipping as would have discouraged most youthful artists.

Later in life, when he was too old for such vigorous measures, many lectures had been received on the frivolity of such tastes and the wickedness of ministering to them.

These scenes passing through his memory convinced him that it was in vain to battle with such inflexible rules, and to be free he must leave the farm and its associations.

There was but one which really held him. That was Sibbilla Vernon, the daughter of rigid parents, her mother even a "public friend," whose voice at monthly and quarterly meetings was familiar to all members of the society. Sibbilla was not an unusual type of the advanced thought of her sect. Calm, self-possessed, clear-headed, she had announced when but fifteen, to her family that her own conscience was her guide, and that in all essential matters she would follow it.

From childhood she and Richard Harris had delighted to play and talk to*gether; and though no word of love, no* kiss and no caress had ever passed between them, both their families and themselves considered their union merely a matter of time and money. Nor did this absence of the usual passages of love seemed to any one concerned a strange circumstance. They were accustomed to the repression of all outward show of feeling. In neither household had the children ever seen a kiss exchanged among its members, young or old.

Though devoid of any passion for art herself, Sibbilla understood and respected the forbidden tastes of her lover. She looked upon his peculiar abilities as gifts of God for use in his life, and she quietly but firmly put aside the traditions of her sect, which condemn them indiscriminately.

'Wilt thou presume to deny the many testimonies of Friends, both in England and America against these sinful arts?' her mother would ask; being a 'public Friend' of considerable fame, she never employed the incorrect nominative 'thee' even in family life.

'Mother,' replied the daughter, 'they spoke for their day. I must act in mine by the light I have, not by theirs.'

Her mother wisely avoided argument, trusting that the spirit would enlighten her daughter in time. Leaving the fodder stack, Richard walked across the field toward the plain brick house which was Sibbilla's home. His mind was made up. He would go to New York and devote himself to the study of art. He had saved since his majority about $300. He had youth strength, talent, love—was that not enough? Would Sibbilla approve of it? Would she make the serious sacrifice it involved?

As he approached the house it was about ten o'clock, and all the males were out at work.

He knocked at the front door, instead of the side door as usual, and Sibbilla herself opened it and gazed at him with considerable surprise in her hazel eyes, quickly changing to an expression of pleasure which Richard did not fail to note and which filled him with both joy and anxiety.

'Why Richard, what brings thee here at this hour?' was her exclamation.

'Sibbilla,' he said, 'I wish to see thee," and, stepping in, he closed the door, and they both stood in the wide hall, obscurely lighted by the transoms at each end. He paused a moment to recover his con*trol, and then spoke in a low, vibrating* tone: "I am going to leave the farm in order to study art. I shall have to give up my membership in the society, as thee knows. Father says he will leave me nothing if I do, and I know that thy mother agrees with him. But I am not afraid. All I ask is that thee approve of my decision and will become my wife as soon as I am able to offer thee a home.'

At that supreme moment of resolve all the strength which for generations had been matured by the noble theories of self-reliance, all the passion which for generations had been muffled and smothered under the narrow Quaker system of formality and repression, burst forth and were expressed in the face of Sibbilla Vernon. She seemed to rise in stature, and, laying one hand on his arm, and passing the other round his neck, she said:

'Richard, I will come to thee then, or I will go with thee now.'

The tone was low and the words without haste, but he who heard it felt in his inmost soul no oath could be stronger.

'Thank God and thee,' he uttered, and for the first time in their lives each felt the magic meaning of a kiss of love.

Seated on the 'wooden settee,' which is the common furniture of the country hall, he told his father's words and action, and his own unalterable determination to seek his fortune in art. It was agreed that they should be married by a magistrate as soon as Richard should have an income of $700 a year.

Full of quiet joy he went home, announced his intended marriage and immediate departure, packed his trunk, and told Mose to have the dearborn ready at 6 o'clock in the evening to take him to the railroad station. After the 5 o'clock supper the members of the family maintained almost entire silence, his mother quietly crying and his father reading the 'Book of Discipline,' his favorite literature.

The dearborn drove up with Mose, who had been up to the station with the milk, and stopping at the country store, which was also the post office, had brought a letter for Richard. It was rather unusual for any member of the family to receive a letter, and therefore Mose announced it with considerable emphasis, addressing his master by his first name, as is the custom in strict families.

'Joseph, hy'ur's a letter for Richard. Hiram sez it's a letter from York, and 'pears as if it mout be on business.'

Joseph took the letter, and resisting a strong inclination to open it, passed it to his son. It was from the firm in New York to whom he had sent the copy of his picture, and it read:

NEW YORK, Jan. 18, ——

DEAR SIR:—We have the gratification of informing you that the study you sent on sale has attracted great attention of one of our patrons, to whom we have parted with it for $500. Deducting commission, storage, insurance, delivery, etc., as per inclosed statement, leaves a net balance of $372.63 for which you find our check herewith. You mention a duplicate of the study yet in your possession. We will take that at the same figure, cash on delivery, and will give you an order for five more studies to be completed within a year.

Respectfully,
SMILES, WILES & CO.

As he read the letter the check fell from his hand on the table. The sight of the colored and stamped paper was too much for his father. Glancing at the large amount, as much as he received for the best wheat crop his farm could raise, he snatched the letter from his son's hand and eagerly read it. Richard stood by in silence.

'What does he mean by the duplicate study?' said his father in an uncertain voice.

'He means,' said Richard quietly, 'the picture you threw in the fire this morn*ing.*'

A new light dawned upon his father's mind. So long as his son's taste seemed nothing but a time and wasting form of idleness it had no redeeming features; but the incredible fact that there are people willing to pay hundreds of dollars apiece for such vain images as now stood before him. He was too shrewd to misunderstand it and its results.

'Richard,' he said, with a softened voice, 'I desire thee would postpone leaving us for a few days. Thy mother and I will accompany thee to the city, and will be present at the ceremony. I think Sibbilla's parents will also not refuse to attend.'

As he went he said to Mose, who was waiting with the dearborn:

'Mose, thee should always be slow to anger, and avoid the committal of rash actions when out of temper.'

Coleridge was once asked by a lady if he believed in ghosts. He replied; "No, Madam, I have seen too many to believe in them."

"Even among de animals a kind ack is recollected longer den a mean one," says Uncle Mose. "A dog may forgit a place whar somebody kicked him, but he neber forgits de place whar somebody give him a piece of meat."

Our colored brethren are holding a camp-meeting not far away, and one of them, holding forth from the text, "How old art thou?" said in his opening. "Brethren, this am a question that must be answered in the affirmative."

"Statira Jane," said a fond mother the other morning to her daughter, "did Daniel Johnson kiss you on the steps last night?" "No, mamma, he did not." If the fond parent had said mouth instead of steps it would have troubled Jane to reply.

We know a young lady who wouldn't fib for the world; but when anybody asks her about her shoes, what number she wears, she always replies "two." As she has two feet, she of course speaks the truth; but this shows the difference between lying and diplomacy.

TARRING A RAT.

Rats are wonderfully clean animals, and they dislike tar more, perhaps, than anything else, for if it once gets on their jackets, they find it most difficult to remove it. Now, I heard it mentioned that pouring tar down at the entrance of their holes was a good remedy, also placing broken pieces of glass by their holes was another remedy. But these remedies are not effective. The rats may leave their old holes and make fresh ones in other parts of the house; they don't, however, leave the premises for good. I thought I would try another experiment—one I had not heard of before. One evening I set a large wire-cage rat-trap, attaching inside a most seductive piece of strongly smell*ing cheese, and next morning I found,* to my satisfaction, that I had succeeded in trapping a very large rat, one of the largest I had ever seen, which, after I had besmeared him with tar, I let loose into his favorite run. The next night I tried again, and succeeded in trapping another equally big fellow, and served him in the same manner. I could not follow these two tar-besmeared rats into their numerous runs, to see what would happen; but it is reasonable to assume that they either summoned together all the members of their community, and by their crestfallen appearance gave their comrades silent indications of the misfortune which had so suddenly befallen them; or that they frightened their brethren away, for they one and all forsook the place and fled. The experiment was eminently successful. From that day in 1875 till now, 1883, my house, ancient though it is, has been entirely free from rats; and I believe that there is no remedy equal to this one, if you can catch your rat alive. They never come back to the house again.—Chamber's Journal.

Democratic Nominations.

For Governor,
LEON ABBETT,
of Hudson County.

"The agricultural interests of the State will at all times command my earnest attention, and every measure tending to the encouragement and protection of this industry will receive my approval."—LEON ABBETT.

CONTEMPT.

False pretenders abound, and meanest among them are some of the self-styled independent journalists of the present day.

We respect open political opponents, those Republican editors who, as unmasked partisans, advocate their side and criticise as freely as they please our side.

That is honest.

But for those scavengers who publish papers and solicit support under the avowed non-partisan pretense of candor toward all parties, and then fill them with malicious falsehoods and vulgar abuse of Democratic candidates and Democracy in general, we harbor only contempt.

"The tariff is a subject for National and not for State legislation, and the Governor has no power to act upon it; but if my efforts can influence legislation on that subject, no mill, factory or work-shop in the State of New Jersey, shall be closed, and no workman thrown out of employment."—LEON ABBETT.

THE RIGHT MAN.

Throughout the entire State of New Jersey, from the hills of Bergen to the sands of Cape May, popular enthusiasm on behalf of the Democratic candidate for Governor, Hon. Leon Abbett, prevails.

Wherever he goes the people cordially welcome him and the favorable impression he creates is universal.

Leon Abbett is a man of the people, in manners affable and in expression frank.

There is no aristocratic exclusiveness about him, no haughty bearing, no canting hypocrisy, but honest and straightforward he comes squarely up to the sound Jeffersonian standard of government, and possesses within himself the statesman ability and courage to discharge for the public good the responsible duties of the high office for which he has been nominated.

His manly worded letter of acceptance shows that the principles of equal and exact justice form his political creed, and will in every particular sway his official action.

As Governor he will be the right man in the right place.

Vote for
LEON ABBETT.

"I favor the simplest and most economical form of government for city, borough, town and township, with legislative limitations upon the power of taxation and the creation of debt, so that neither extravagance nor corruption shall be able to impose heavy burdens upon the people."—LEON ABBETT.

INDORSING LEON ABBETT.

The mass meeting of the Jersey City Democracy last Monday night, at the Catholic Institute, to ratify the nomination of Hon. Leon Abbett and the county ticket, was the largest ever held in the city. The enthusiasm was immense, particularly when allusions were made to Judge Dixon's non-sympathy with the working classes.

Ex-Mayor Charles H. O'Neill presided and Congressman McAdoo was the first speaker. The substance of his remarks were that the "Republican party must go," and that appeared to meet the minds of the vast audience. Hon. Samuel J. Randall followed in a long speech, in which he arraigned the Republicans severely for their measures and that the time had come for their departure. He had just returned from Ohio and predicted Democratic success. He thought there was no danger for New Jersey and that she was looked to as a keystone in the Democratic arch, which was sure to overshadow the country next year.

Hon. Leon Abbett followed in a brilliant speech, which was received with great enthusiasm. Senator Eccleston, of New York, and others followed. The demonstration was a success in every particular, and it augurs well for the success of the ticket in Hudson Co.

The platform was occupied by the leading Democrats of the city and county, also many from New York, who were attracted by the announcement that Mr. Randall would address the meeting.

"I believe in local self-government and am opposed to the creation or continuance of Legislative Commissions."—LEON ABBETT.

They say that Jonathan Dixon, the Republican candidate, sings this to an old tune:

I want to be a Governor, I want to very bad,
And if I am defeated by Abbett I'll be mad.
But since the outlook's doubtful, and
since I am a Judge,
Until election, hang me, if from the bench I'll budge.
And then if Leon winneth—and wisdom says he will—
And I am forced to swallow disaster's bitter pill,
I'll wrap the ermine closer the deeper in "I'm snowed"
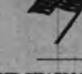
And never more be heard on till Gabriel's horn is blowed.

"I am opposed to monopolies of every kind. I believe in equal rights for all, and exclusive privileges for none."—LEON ABBETT.

Monday last was a gala day among the American Germans. There was an immense parade in Philadelphia, embracing twenty thousand persons, in honor of the establishment at Germantown of the first Teutonic colony. The day was also generally celebrated in other cities of the States. The parade in Newark was especially fine. Many of our Plainfield citizens witnessed the proceedings there.

The Democrats of Monmouth county had a bitter County Convention on Monday of last week over the nomination of County Clerk. Dr. J. H. Patterson, of Shrewsbury, was nominated over J. C. Arrowsmith, present incumbent.

OH! HIE! OH!



CROW, CHAPMAN, CROW!

Ohio Goes Democratic by 10,000 Maj.

NEWARK CITY DEMOCRATIC!

Iowa Republican by a Reduced Majority!

The October elections in Ohio, Iowa and Newark city have resulted in grand Democratic victories. In Ohio Judge Hoadley is elected Governor by at least 10,000 majority, and the State Legislature is Democratic. The latter is of more importance, as by this a Democratic U. S. Senator is secured. In Newark city the Democrats elected their Mayor, Joseph Haynes and a majority of the Board of Aldermen. In Iowa the Republican majority is reduced to very small figures. Taken altogether the victories are such as to cause the heart of every Democrat to beat with joy and pride. The results foreshadow the success of the Democratic party in the Presidential contest of 1884. The people have spoken. The Republican party must go.

John H. Chisholm was found guilty of murder in the first degree by a jury on Saturday afternoon in Newark. His crime was the shooting of his wife. She had left him and lived with her mother. On the afternoon when she was shot she was sitting at an open window when he approached her and asked her to go home with him. She refused, whereupon, a witness says, he shot her. He claimed that he had a pistol, which she attempted to wrest from him, and it went off accidentally. The jury believed that the shooting was of purpose, and accordingly convicted him.

"I am in favor of equal taxation for all—corporations and individuals."—LEON ABBETT.

The Board of Registration meets Oct. 16th. See legal notice.

Robert Beekman, a butcher doing business on Eighth avenue, New York, while gunning on Monday last at Cold Springs, L. I., was shockingly wounded by the accidental discharge of his gun. Beekman was in the act of climbing a fence, holding the gun by the muzzle. The trigger caught in the fence. The greater part of the charge took effect in Beekman's right arm and the remainder in his face.

If the enemies of Leon Abbett wish to make his election sure, they need only to keep up a running fire against his personal character. That will put him in the attitude of a persecuted candidate, which will ensure him support from sympathy where he might otherwise lose from indifference.—Plainfield Times, Rep.

"I shall favor all measures which tend to improve the condition of the workingmen."—LEON ABBETT.

See the legal notice in another column about registration.

There will be a grand Democratic rally of all the voters of this city and elsewhere at Van Deventer Hall on Saturday evening next, Oct. 13th, at which time Hon. Leon Abbett and other prominent speakers will be present and address the people upon the living issues of the day. There will be a full house on this occasion. It will be necessary to go early to get a seat.

You cannot vote unless you register.

"I am opposed to contracts which give the profits of the labor of criminals to contractors. All the profit that can be derived from their labor should be paid directly into the treasury.—Give criminals employment, but not at the expense of honest labor. I do not want in New Jersey busy prisons and empty workshops."—LEON ABBETT.

You will lose your vote if you do not register.

Dr. Quimby, the Prohibition nominee for Governor, has withdrawn from the field. The Prohibitionists will probably have no candidate of their own, but it is expected that they will support Judge Dixon.

The Board of Registration will sit to receive your name Oct. 16th.

The Democrats of Hudson county have nominated for State Senator Wm. Brinkerhoff, and for Director-at-large of the County Board of Freeholders, Patrick Govern.

It is necessary for you to register your name before the Registry Board Oct. 16th.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

J. F. Hughes is the happy father—a boy, the event occurred on Saturday last.

Frank Godschalk has gone to Easton, Pa., to spend his vacation.

A question is bothering the mind of one of our residents. Whether this is the year 1883 or 1884; he has spent some valuable time figuring on the same.

Ludlow V. Clark, Esq., who has been quite sick the past week is slowly convalescing.

Mr. Keiper has rented for a year from Oct., the home of Mr. Burdell on Fourth avenue, Oakland, and occupied the same the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frazee, who have been at Ocean Beach for the Summer, have returned again to our town, and occupy their residence on Sussex street.

The P. & R. Railroad Company are putting crushed stone on North avenue, in front of their lands adjoining, and in front of the depot.

A friend of George Todd's told him if he would give his pigs a dose of about a teaspoonful of arsenic it would make them thrive and grow. Mr. Todd did so one day last week. The result was two dead pigs.

The Society of V. S. C., was reorganized on Wednesday evening, October 3rd, by the election of Wm. J. Alpers, Pres.; Chas. W. McQuid, Secretary, and Frank Harbison, Treasurer. They have engaged the services of Professor Austin of Brooklyn, N. Y., for the season to furnish music for their different sociables.

Would it not be best for the people of our town to have a special election authorizing the Town Committee to expose the amount of money raised for a Stone Crusher last year. In the purchase of crushed stone for the several road districts the amount, $700, raised and expended now would be of great benefit to our roads; and we doubt those who have subscribed for the purchase of a stone crusher would be willing that their subscriptions be expended.

Selecting A Pastor.

At the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church on Sunday, Oct. 7th, Rev. K. F. Ketcham, D. D., preached a sermon appropriate to the circumstances of that congregation, and gave them useful advice as to the spirit and the principles which should guide them in the selection of a minister.

Immediately after the morning service as moderator he presided over a meeting of the congregation, at which, on behalf of the officers, Mr. Wm. H. Sampson presented a plan of procedure to secure a successor to Rev. J. C. Bliss, D. D., whose pastorate terminated on Sept. 30th.

The plan and recommendations were unanimously adopted as follows:

"When our Pastor announced his resignation and declared his intention of leaving this pulpit and charge, it was thought advisable by the session of this church, to confer with the deacons and trustees and take counsel with them as to the course to be pursued in securing a pastor. Agreeable to such prevailing sentiment, the elders, deacons, and trustees met and fully considered the situation.

We carefully went over the whole matter, discussed it from all standpoints and ascertained, as far as possible, the existing sentiment among our people, before we decided to take any action.

We had several meetings of the boards as you are aware prior to the acceptation of Dr. Bliss' resignation by the church. Thereafter the officers thought it wise to counsel with other churches which had recently secured pastors for vacant pulpits as to the course they pursued in securing them. We found that the Westminster Presbyterian church at Elizabeth had recently passed through such an experience; that they had selected a committee composed of men from the elders, deacons, trustees and congregation, to secure a pastor, and, with satisfaction, had succeeded in calling the Rev. Dr. Gillespie to that church. We were informed that the course pursued by them in selecting such Committee was very acceptable to that church. And congregation, and were advised by them to take the same course, if possible, in securing a pastor for our church.

Encouraged by the success of the Westminster church and acting somewhat upon suggestions made by them, and largely upon the opinions of our own people, the boards came together and conferred as to what plan we could unite upon to fill our vacant pulpit, as soon practicable. After such conference we came to the unanimous conclusion that it was best to select a committee of eleven, composed of three from the elders, one from the deacons, two from the trustees and five from the congregation at large, and present at this congregational meeting, the names of the gentlemen whom we would respectfully recommend as such committee. Before selecting that committee however, care was taken to get the names of those whom the people of this church would accept as representative men who are not only capable but willing to assume the responsibility of procuring a pastor who will be acceptable to us all, if possible. Each of the boards selected its own representatives upon the committee and at joint meeting, selected the five who would serve from the congregation at large.

Now we wish to say that in selecting these gentlemen we took into consideration the importance of the object sought to be attained. And we also wish to say there has been no intention of the official boards at any time to act, save in the interest of the whole church and congregation, and their future welfare. On the contrary, each individual officer fully realizes the delicacy of his position and the importance of the work. Our only desire has been to lay before you for your consideration such names as would be acceptable to you, believing that if we erred in these selections, you would quickly right all our errors.

If it is your desire that there should be a larger committee, or that it is advisable to have a smaller one than eleven that matter is now in your hands for action. If the gentlemen whom we have (as we can assure you) selected with great care are not those whom you desire shall take up this important work, we ask you to name others upon whose shoulders this task shall fall. All the gentlemen whose names we present, have been conferred with and each one, while not desirous of serving on such committee, has kindly expressed a willingness to do so and foregoing personal considerations have expressed a willingness to do all that is possible to secure for our church an acceptable minister.

With these preliminary words I am requested by the elders, deacons and trustees, to present to you the following named gentlemen as the committee which shall recommend a pastor for our vacant pulpit.

From the Elders:—Messrs Henry C. Squires, Israel C. Pierson, John K. Van Arsdale.

From the Deacons:—Mr. Stephen R. Struthers.

From the Board of Trustees:—Messrs Chas. Place, Isaac W. Rushmore.

From the Congregation at large:—Messrs Leander N. Lovell, Henry B. Newhall, John W. Murray, Ephriam Miller, Wm. T. Kaufman."

Subsequently the committee met and organized for work by electing officers as follows: Charles Place, Chairman; John K. Van Arsdale, Secretary; Israel C. Pierson, Corresponding Secretary.

Miss Anna W. Townsend, daughter of Charles H. Townsend, Esq., of Clifton, Staten Island, formerly of this city, was married Tuesday to Mr. J. H. Scribner, of Stapleton. Owing to a recent death in the bride's family the marriage was very simple. There were no bridesmaids and no reception at the house. The bride entered the church upon the arm of her father, who gave her away, and was met by the groom at the altar. She wore a traveling dress of dark cloth and a red velvet hat. At her bosom was a corsage bouquet of Marechal Niel roses, and in her hand she carried the family prayer book. Mrs. Scribner is a sister of the recent bride of Mr. Randolph Rodman. Dean Rodman, of Grace church, this city, assisted in the ceremony.

He May Get More Than He Wants.

Some frost-bitten tramp, Tuesday night of last week, stole a blanket from a line at the corner of Washington and Third streets, where it had been hung for an airing. As it had just been taken from the bed of a patient lying ill with scarlet fever, it would serve the thief right to catch the disease.

Minstrels.

Our city is to be favored with plenty of minstrelsy during the next few days. This (Friday) evening at Van Deventer Hall, our old favorites the New Orleans will again entertain the public in their unexcelled way. Monday evening at the same place, new candidates will appear. Full particulars of both shows will be found elsewhere.

Shot Himself.

A pistol in the hands of Chris. Angerbower, a lad of fourteen, exploded last Monday, and the ball almost tore away the index finger of the left hand. The victim, who was standing at LaGrande and Franklin avenues at the time, hurried to the residence of Dr. Fields, where the wound was dressed. It is hoped that the finger can be saved.

A Good Beginning.

A second meeting of the reorganizers of the Plainfield Vocal Society, was held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, Tuesday evening. Quite a large attendance was present and the reports of the active workers were very encouraging. Over $600 the required $1,000 was shown to be already secured—half of it from new subscribers. The success of the affair is consequently assured.

Traveling Like His Betters.

Our English cousins would have been surprised had they walked into the smoking-car of the five o'clock train from New York, last Saturday evening, and discovered President Arthur occupying one of the seats and presenting to the conductor the customary passenger ticket. The accidental President was on his way to try the bass fishing at Secretary Frelinghuysen's farm, near Raritan.

Look After The Boys.

The worst thing that can befall a boy is to have the liberty to stay out at night. This is too often a fatal privilege, because it is during the hours of the night that most of the mischief is planned and executed. The boys who are permitted the freedom of the public streets at all hours of the night are the boys who fill our penitentiaries and work houses and bring sorrow upon their relatives and friends. Parents, see to it that the boys are kept out of the streets at night, and away from the pernicious influences they encounter there.

The anniversary of the Plainfield Relief Association will be held in Trinity Reformed Church on Tuesday evening, Oct. 16th, at 8 o'clock. Brief reports of the years' work will be read and addresses will be made by the Rev. Mr. Raymond and Ex-Mayor Randolph. Minstrels.

Of the Original New Orleans Minstrels that will again appear at Van Deventer Hall, this evening, Oct. 12th, the Daily News of Batavia, N. Y., says:

"A large audience greeted the New Orleans Minstrels last night, and the entertainment was in all respects satisfactory. The clog dancing excellent, and the character sketches were all brimming over with fun. There was a noticeable absence of vulgarity, but the laughter was not decreased thereby. The troupe is composed of men who understand their business, and consequently please the public, and their general appearance on the street or on the stage, is much in their favor."

The Parade.

As our paper is being printed, the inspection, review and parade of the Plainfield Fire Department is in progress. The finest of weather and other circumstances surrounding the event, will undoubtedly combine to make this one of the parades to be long remembered. Visiting firemen from other places are being entertained, the city has put on its holiday air, and the mottoes of welcome, decorations along the line of march, smiling faces and gay attire of the merry maidens, the sun-lit sparkle of the apparatus, the enlivening strains of the bands, the sturdy tread of our protectors, and—everything, unites in a grand celebration. Next week we will be able to report at length the success of the day and evening.

Died.

Upon the Government reservation near Warrington Navy Yard, Florida, on Saturday morning 6th inst. Francis Sutherland, wife of Isaac M. Holcomb of this city. The death of this estimable lady has in the fullest sense created an irreparable void in her own home circle, as also in that of the community of her acquaintances here and elsewhere. She had for some months previous to her journey to the South, been in delicate health and believed, as did also her friends at home, that a change of climate and the pleasure incident to a generous visit with her only daughter, the wife of Capt. A. S. Taylor, in command of the U. S. Marine forces there, would be a benefit to her. In this, during the early part of her visit, she was not disappointed, but in her residence in camp to which she was removed with her daughter's family the hardships were too great for great for her, and through which without apparent disease she passed away. The report unintentionally circulated that death occurred from yellow fever is false in every particular.

P. B. C.

At the annual meeting of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, held Tuesday evening, Mr. Harold Serrell was re-elected President, and other officers chosen as follows: Secretary and Treasurer, R. Pound; Captain, D. M. Runyon; Sub-Captain, Geo. Craig; Bugler, W. Serrel.

The First Brick.

There is one man in this city who should command from this time forth the good-will of the public. He is a Mason by name and a mason by occupation, and Wednesday morning at eleven o'clock he laid the first brick in the Opera House. The Republicans will leave the White House and take their hands out of the Treasury in '85, Kings may die and be forgotten, cyclones will destroy the work of ages, but Theodore Mason will be remembered by this community long afterward.

Somerville's Fair.

The Fourteenth Annual Fair of the Somerset County Agricultural Society, held last week, was most successful. The stock entries were 394 and in other classes 802—all of unusual excellence. The Speed Department, also, was particularly satisfactory, the following being the winners and the best times. 3 year-olds, half-mile heats, Lady Emma, 1.49. 5 year-olds, Marvel, 2.43. 2.45 class, Selim, 2.41½. Sweepstakes, Sciola, 2.33¼. County teams, E. Babbitt and mate, 2.54. 4 year-olds, Lady Superior, 3.06. Stallions, Gen. Knox, 2.38. Spec. County, Marvel, 2.42½. 3.00 class, Selim, 2.40½. Free for all, Billy Button, 2.29½.

Runaway Accident.

Last Sunday morning as Mr. Samuel Q. Lawson, of Seventh street, was riding through Park avenue, in company with a friend, behind his valuable horse, he attempted to brush a fly from the animal's back with a whip, and in doing so dropped one of the lines. The horse gave a spring, and in pulling on the other line, the animal was turned around sharply, upsetting the buggy and throwing the occupants out. With the wreck of the vehicle the horse ran as far as the depot where he was caught, but he was so dreadfully cut about his hind legs as to render him almost worthless. The gentlemen escaped with slight bruises.

Fine Workmanship.

A visit through the Carriage Repository of Mr. L. M. French, on Somerset street, this city, discloses some fine workmanship in carriages, phaetons, buggies, etc.; in fact we doubt if any similar manufactory in this State can produce a more elegant turn out, of style or durability, than can be seen at Mr. French's factory. By strict attention to business and employing only the best of workmen, this gentleman has built up an enviable reputation in the carriage business, which is increasing to such an extent that he is contemplating adding an addition to his already large factory. Parties in search of a good carriage at reasonable figures should consult Mr. French before making a purchase.

Death of Freeholder White.

Freeholder Thos. White of Elizabeth died at his residence 846 Elizabeth ave., that city, last week. His death was due to a complication of diseases, the most serious being Bright's disease of the kidneys. Mr. White was born in the county of Cork, Ireland, in 1832, and he came to this country in 1845. Politically, Mr. White was Republican, and two years ago was elected a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Elizabeth. He served so acceptably that last year he was re-elected by a handsome majority. His second year would have ended May, 1884. He was an exceedingly popular man among those with whom he associated, and his popularity seems to have had its foundation in his invariable courtesy and affability, his thoroughly honest dealings, and his kindness and liberality. He had a pleasant word for all, and oftentimes more than a word when he saw that it was needed. He won the respect of his fellow men by acting towards them in a fair, straightforward way, and listening to them as kindly as though he had a personal interest in them.

Seriously Clubbed.

During the progress of the Somerville Fair last Thursday, one of Plainfield's citizens received injuries which may yet terminate fatally. It seems that Mr. Hugh O'Donnell, proprietor of the Fourth Ward House in the lower part of this city, termed the "Boulevard", was tending a bar under the Grand Stand at the Fair, and during the day a row occurred, in which it is claimed some women were insulted. Shortly after the row, a young lad named Stephen H. Austin, in company with others, all under the influence of liquor, approached O'Donnell's bar, and began to use abusive language, and charged the latter with insulting the women. O'Donnell denied doing so, and disclaimed any knowledge of the affair. After some talk over the matter O'Donnell offered to shake hands with Austin for friendship's sake, and had reached out to shake hands, when the latter raised a heavy cane that he had in his hand and dealt O'Donnell a heavy blow across the forehead, making a large gash in his head. Austin immediately started to run away, and was followed by State Detective Keenan of Metuchen, and, just as he attempted to climb over the fence, he was seized by the detective and taken before Justice A. P. Sutphen, where a charge of atrocious assault was made against him, and he was lodged in jail. Bail to the amount of $2,500 was offered, but was refused, as Doctor Wagener had given a certificate that O'Donnell is now at his home in this city, under the charge of Dr. Boone, who states that his condition is very critical.

A Generous Firm.

Some few weeks since a new evening paper was started in Philadelphia, called the Evening Call. Its proprietor and editor, Mr. Robert S. Davis, purchased at the time one of the celebrated Web Perfecting Printing Presses, manufactured by C. Potter Jr., & Co., of this city, and finding that the increasing popularity of his paper demanded more presses, ordered the construction of another of the same kind of Potter & Co. So well pleased was Mr. Davis with the press that he offered to Messrs. Potter & Co., a free excursion of all their employes to Fairmount Park, Philadelphia. The gentlemen named accepted the invitation, and accordingly on Friday last eight cars well filled with the firm's employees started from this city on their day's enjoyment. They were escorted to Belmont Mansion in Fairmount Park upon their arrival at Philadelphia, headed by the Evening Call band, and were given a magnificent dinner, after which an entertainment was given in the building, also dancing indulged in until the time for departure. Before the start for home, the employees of Potter & Co., presented the proprietor of the Call with a handsome American flag which will hereafter fly from the top of the Call building. One feature of the excursion was that any employee who failed to attend the excursion would have his day's wages deducted. Those who attended received a full day's wages. It is needless to say that there were only two or three instances in which an employee failed to attend and that was in consequence of a failure to catch the train. The generosity of both Messrs. Davis and Potter & Co., are commendable in their affording this day's enjoyment to all who attended.

Try Again.

The Westfield Chemical Engine Co. will, next Tuesday evening, be again the guests of Zephyr H. & L. Co., No. 1, and another trial of the soda-water apparatus will be made. Just as hot a fire as the last will be built, and this time the Westfielders will show the doubting public of this city that they can control it easily.

Resolutions of Regret.

At a meeting of Noah's Dove Encampment No. 28, I.O.F., held this 4th day of Oct. 1883, the following resolutions were offered by a committee, on the death of brother Oliver Pierce, P. C. P.:

WHEREAS, Almighty God, in his allwise and inscrutable providence, has seen fit to remove by death from our midst, our beloved friend and brother, Oliver Pierce, P. C. P.

Resolved, That while we deeply deplore our loss, we humbly bow to the will of our Heavenly Father in this dispensation and that we have, each of us, lost a personal friend and brother of our beloved order, who was ever ready with his kind and tender heart to perform a noble act toward his brother, and that we have lost a true and efficient supporter of our noble order, but who for some time past from bodily affliction has been unable to be present with us, yet always pleased to hear from us.

Resolved, That in the death of our beloved brother, Noah's Dove Encampment, No. 28, has met with an irreparable loss, another link in the fraternal chain is broken, and while we deeply feel this great affliction, which is has pleased Divine Providence to lay upon us, we would extend to his beloved wife and friends, our cordial sympathy and heartfelt sorrow for the great loss which they have sustained, in the hope that from the world of labor and care, he has been transported to enjoy happiness and bliss in the celestial Lodge above.

Resolved, That our brother has endeared himself to every brother of this Encampment, and that this Encampment room be draped in mourning the usual time, and that a copy of the above resolutions of our deceased brother be entered on the minutes of the Encampment, and a copy of the same be sent to his afflicted wife, and also published in the Plainfield and the Elizabeth papers.

How to secure Health. It seems strange that any one will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood when Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is, indeed, a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has often proven itself to be the best Blood Purifier ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula and other disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria, all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious Complaints and all diseases indicating an impure condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, etc. It corrects indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

LIFE IN A FRONTIER TOWN.

In a letter dated Flagstaff, Arizona, a correspondent of the New York Tribune says: "Poker Bill" is a professional gambler. His place of business is in one of the dozen rude log huts burrowed into the hill side and shaded by the pines. Thence "Poker Bill" emerged the other morning, wearing a grim and truculent aspect, and started rapidly down the so-called street. The loungers who sit all day beneath the deer's head nailed to the front of the chief store, roused themselves from their patient waiting for somebody to "set up the pizen," and originated the proposition that "somethin's up."

For once they unwittingly told the truth. "Poker Bill" took his way down the track to the depot—a term applied to a freight car fitted up as an office. Presently he returned to his cabin, and when he reappeared his six-shooter was belted to his side. The loungers became visibly animated. When "Poker Bill" was seen to be bound for the depot again, an air of cheerful expectancy pervaded the group.

Meantime "Poker Bill" had been stopped and questioned by a friend, who carelessly drawled in parting: "That thar station agent's a bad man." But "Poker Bill" would not be deterred. His beady eyes glittered wickedly and his hand softly caressed the handle of his revolver. When he disappeared into the depot he looked the dime-novel picture of a bloodthirsty and invincible desperado. Among the loungers it was whispered that a dispute had arisen between "Bill" and the station agent regarding the payment of charges on an express bundle. A few bets were quietly made on the question whether the station agent would be killed or maimed.

Suddenly the patient waiters leaped to their feet, although there had been no sound of shots. Such a sight as they beheld had never been seen since Antelope Spring was known to the white man. Out from the door of the station agent's car, plunging headlong to the ground, came "Poker Bill," propelled by a terrific kick. He was without his "six-shooter," his waist-coat had been torn off, and his remaining clothing had collected most of the dust from the car floor. He gathered himself up, dodged under the car and ran up toward the town, shielding his head with his arms and evidently expecting to be followed by a bullet. There was no need of explanations. "What did yer do with yer gun, Bill?" asked one of the no-longer respectful crowd as he passed. "I left it," snarled "Bill," and the point was not pressed, as "Bill" was known to possess other weapons. He equipped the justice and two others with shotguns and rifles. Thus heavily loaded the force moved upon the car and demanded the return of "Bill's" gun and waist-coat. Having obtained these articles, accompanied by much satirical language from the agent, "Bill" retired to his cabin. "Poker Bill's" sun had set, and his enemies had seen his fall. The cool wind swept down from the mountains through the pines, but "Poker Bill" cursed himself with exceeding bitterness because he had failed to add a fifteenth grave to the little "Boot Hill cemetery," near the corral, where eleven out of the fourteen dead came to their deaths by violence.

For the route of the new road which has opened Northern Arizona has, like the course of every Western railroad, been stained again and again with blood. Back at Coolidge, five desperadoes held the town in terror some two years since, until a brief but stirring conflict left three ruffians dead, one dying, and two citizens pierced with balls.

Here at Flagstaff, in the heart of the great pine forests, the camps of woodchoppers and tie-cutters offered a ready asylum to thugs and outlaws. Every new railroad in the far West has been full of cost to human life. First come the engineers, daring the perils of Indians and the wilderness. Then follow the gang of navvies, who build the dump and lay the ties and rails; a rough, wild set, the refuse of the cities. With them come swarms of bloodsuckers, gamblers, thieves and keepers of dance halls, careless whether they win a man's money by a rigged faro bank, or "hold him up," or shoot him in the back on a dark night. No one knows their origin. They disappear on the completion of the railroad and no one knows where they go. They leave a few graves behind them, and these deep woods are shadowed by many an unknown tragedy.

Life at the head of a railroad is like life nowhere else. The laborers are a source of profit to every one except themselves. They eat and sleep in long trains of freight cars; and their eating and sleeping fill the pockets of some contractor. They build the road and receive their wages, and the wages are promptly transferred to the keeper of some gambling tent, groggery or dance hall. Finally they are discharged. They return cooped up like cattle in freight cars, they make for the mining camps, or, provided with a "tie pass," they pack their blankets on their backs and set out on the tramp along the track. The best of them are kept for the section gangs; the others vanish utterly away. With their departure and that of their attendant evil spirits a calm succeeds the storm. The stranded gambler talks mournfully of "the lively times when the road was here;" but the Eastern visitor possesses his soul in peace, and no longer fears to be "held up" in the street.

How To Put On Postage Stamps.

A man can always learn something if he will only look about him. I was at the post-office department in Washington the other day, and I noticed an employe busy affixing stamps to envelopes. Every time he moistened the right corner of the envelope and then placed the stamp upon. I asked him if there was any advantage in wetting the envelope instead of the stamp, and he said: "You notice that I moisten the envelope first; well, I do that because it is the right way. There is a right way and a wrong way to everything, and, consequently, there is a right and wrong way to put on postage stamps. It is impossible to moisten a stamp with the tongue unless a small portion of the gum adheres to it. Now this gum is by no means injurious, but then the department do not advertise it as a health food, so the only way left is the right way, and that is to moisten the envelope first." After listening to this brief statement, I felt as though I had emerged from the deep shade of ignorance to the glorious sunlight of knowledge.—Cor.

Upon the nomination of Judge Dixon by the Republicans it was announced with a flourish by some of their newspapers that he would at once resign his Judgeship and enter actively into the canvass. But it appears they were mistaken, for it is now authoritatively stated that he will not resign to take part in the campaign.

DIXON.

Passaic county is within the circuit of Judge Dixon, and his nomination for Governor is viewed throughout that section of the State, where he is personally known, with great disfavor even among Republicans, scores of whom cannot be induced to give him their votes. The Paterson Guardian says:

"Personally Judge Dixon is the most unpopular of men, and he has but few if any warm friends except among those who are in some way benefitted by favors he may bestow. He is cold-blooded and vindictive, and he inspires, especially on the bench, everybody with a fear of some stealthy cat-like treachery. It is claimed by his apologists that Nature has bestowed this kind of an organization upon the man and that he should not be held responsible for its abnormal outcome. True, perhaps, but this does not furnish a reason why he should be elected to such a position as that of Governor of New Jersey, and he will not be. The more the people know of him the less they will like him. A more personally unpopular candidate could not have been selected by the Republican managers, and they will be most heartily sick of him before the campaign is over."

JUST A WORD.

The following, under the above caption, is taken from the Jersey City Journal, an out and out Republican journal, and hits the nail on the head:

"This word is for the comparatively small number of fools and cowards in the Republican party, who are likely to do themselves, and possibly the Republican party, some slight harm by their folly in the present State canvass. There are, we are sorry to say, men in our party who are so stupid as to suppose that the Republican cause can be advantaged by personal abuse of Democratic candidates, and in the present case of Mr. Abbett's candidacy for the Governorship, these Republicans have commenced their work by slinging mud at the Democratic candidate. We cannot prevent idiots carrying on this foolish work, but they will get no assistance from us in it, and we do not doubt that our candidate, Judge Dixon will disapprove as decidedly as we do, any attempt to make this a canvass of personal attack or detraction. If we cannot defeat Mr. Abbett on broader, higher and better grounds than those of a personal character we cannot defeat him at all. This brings us to add that we have also in the Republican party some wretched cowards, who never dare to say anything in the way of objection or criticism to any independent man whose action does not suit them but who go about, out of his hearing and behind his back, and spit out their petty spite and falsehoods concerning him and his action. Such sneaking critics and detractors deserve only contemptuous notice. Some fellows of this sort have, we are informed, manifested great wrath—taking care that it was not in our presence that they expressed themselves—because we expressed our opinion of Mr. Abbett, on the day succeeding his nomination, in language that was kindly and complimentary, but at the same time just. All that we said of Mr. Abbett was strictly true, and whatever of compliment we bestowed on him was deserved by him, and we are independent enough to speak the truth in relation to a political opponent, as well as a political friend—and we are always glad to have the opportunity of saying a good word truthfully for an honorable antagonist—and we can afford to do it, as we could not if we were as cowardly as those who assail us, while they carefully keep themselves out of sight."

The Jersey City milk dealers decided to charge ten cents a quart at retail and seven cents at wholesale for milk on and after Oct. 1.

Mrs. Gideon Burt, of Dividing Creek, Cumberland county, when taking up carpet recently for the Fall housecleaning, was somewhat surprised to find a large black snake in the centre of the floor. There was a knot-hole near by and it is supposed it must have entered the room through it.

During the year 1884 there will be five eclipses, as follows: March 26th, partial eclipse of the sun; April 9th, total eclipse of the sun; October 4th, total eclipse of the moon; October 18th, partial eclipse of the moon. To the above add the eclipse of the Republican party—if anything is left of it after the Fall elections.—Hunterdon Democrat.

At Trenton the New Jersey Baptist Sunday School Union ended its thirteenth annual session on Tuesday night of last week. Before adjournment it elected officers for the ensuing year, viz: President, Rev. Robt. Lowry, D. D., of Plainfield; Vice President, Rev. J. C. Wynn, D. D., of Camden; Secretary, Rev. T. R. Taylor, of Asbury Park; Treasurer, John W. Mount, of Red Bank. The reports of its outgoing officers showed the union to be in a very prosperous condition.

Vennor predicts a considerable amount of warmth yet for 1883. A portion of October is likely to give warmth. Some actually hot days will be experienced in that month. November will probably continue open and warm until towards the latter portion of the month, when a rather severe and wintry period is likely to set in with hard frosts. The fore part of December will probably continue cold and may lead many to look for the early setting in of the winter of '83 84, but as in 1875 all will be open again during the latter part of the month and close of the year 1883. The year will go out and the new year enter with but little or no snow, even in the northern sections.

The N. Y. Times, the leading Republican organ of the country, differs somewhat from the smaller fry newspapers of the same party, in its estimates of Hon. Leon Abbett, as the following sentences from an editorial in that paper upon the Convention and its candidate will show. Read them:

"The result is a triumph of the popular element in the party."

"Mr. Abbett's nomination ought to be a strong one."

"He represents the interests of the people against the machine managers and the cliques which subordinate the public welfare to the demands of corporations and the schemes of those who make profit for themselves out of the public service."

An editor in South Jersey, upon going on his summer vacation, got his pastor, the Presbyterian minister of the place, to occupy the editorial chair during his absence. One of the first letters the dominie took from the sanctum table read as follows:

MR. EDITOR:—This make the third time you've sent me that bill. Now I want you to understand, I'll pay it when I get ready, and not before. If you send it again, I'll come down up town and knock the devil out of you.

To which the dominie replied:

DEAR SIR:—You think you are competent to knock the devil out of the editor. I fear you overrate your ability. That's what I've been trying to do for the past six years, but with very indifferent success. He will be home in about three weeks, and then come right down to town. If you succeed I'll try the process on several others in this place.

TIRED ALL OVER!
What Rested and Refreshed a Weary Man in Memphis.
"It never amounted to an acute pain, but continued to be a dull weary ache in the small of my back," writes Mr. James Thomas, of No. 32 Madison street, Memphis, Tenn. "This was an old experience, and life became dull work. I was tired all over, with pain in the lower limbs, and a habit of laying awake at nights. Recently I tried one of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS and was decidedly relieved within twenty-four hours. It may have been Providence that did the work, but I give the credit to Benson's porous plaster." Mr. Thomas' [illegible] credit, but Providence works by agents, and among them Benson's plaster ranks first as an external remedy. [illegible] Price 25 cents. Look in the middle of the plaster for the word CAPCINE. Ask your physician about it. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

WHY SHE KILLED HIM.

Traveling through Italy, a party of us stopped, one misty summer day, at the little town of Pistoja. Next morning a storm kept us indoor. As I stood at the window, watching the torrents of rain, I saw a stream of people hurrying in one direction, despite the bad weather.

'Where are all the people going?' I asked the landlord.

'Giulia Saviera is to be tried and sentenced to-day.'

'Who is she?'

'A young wife who murdered her husband.'

'How dreadful! Do they think she is really guilty?'

'Yes, without doubt she is.'

'Why did she do it?'

'That is a mystery; but it is hoped that to-day she will confess her reasons.'

'Is it far from here to the court room?'

'No—the next corner. It might interest you to go.'

As the weather would not allow us to visit points from which we expected fine views, we resolved to attend the trial.

When we entered the court room it was crowded with noisy, gesticulating people, who became suddenly quiet upon seeng strangers.

They readily made room for us, so that we got seats close to the bar, judge, witnesses and court officials.

Before we were seated the hubbub recommenced. But as soon as a door at the left opened, it was so still that one could believe that all present held their breath.

A moment later the accused was led in by one of the official. Her nun like garb did not hide the extraordinary beauty of her face and figure. She was evidently very young—as we afterward learned, just fifteen years old. Her face was pale, her profile noble, and her cheeks had still a childish contour; but the full lips were firmly compressed. Her chief beauty was her abundant curling hair, of the bronze red which is still occasionally found in certain parts of Italy, but very slightly built.

From our seats we could hear and see all the details of the examination. While the judge asked the preliminary questions her glance was fixed on the floor, her pale countenance bore a calm, determined expression, but no sign of obstinacy or malice. In happy days she must have been lovely, for her features were soft and mild. She gave low but unhesitating answers to all his questions.

The complaint against her was as follows: Giulia, daughter of Matteo, deceased, had married, six months previously, a young shepherd named Giovanni Saviera. They had lived happily together, no one had known of any disagreement, when one day Saviera was found in bed murdered. His throat had been cut with a great knife which lay on the ground near the bed. Giulia was found with bloody hands and clothes.—She made no resistance when they arrested her, but at the first examination, maintained an obstinate silence. To-day different witnesses would be called, and they hoped to find an explanation of the awful deed.

The mother of the accused appeared as the first witness. She made her statement amid tears and sobs. At the first sound of her voice a shudder ran through Giulia's slight form, she lifted her eyes but dropped them at once and was again cold and silent.

'Oh! what shall I say concerning my unfortunate child?' lamented the mother. "You, my lord, judge, know, and all those assembled here, you who have seen her grow up, played with her and danced at her wedding—all know that she always lived in peace with us. Yes, she was the happiness of our life, our sunshine. Giovanni Saviera was her only love—she had long loved him, and the day that saw her in her bridal dress she called the happiest in her life. I have never heard them exchange unkind words. Giulia was always mild and good, although Giovanni sometimes showed unlimited greed and avarice. Oh, my lord, judge, I cannot believe that she has done such an awful deed. Men may disagree and one stab the other, but no young wife commits such a crime. Giulia, my child, say that you did not do it."

But Giulia remained immovable, with downcast eyes. Several witnesses were heard, and all agreed that the young couple had lived happily together. But why, then, had she perpetrated the horrible deed?

Giovanni's brother testified further: "Two nights before Giovanni was found murdered in bed I went home with him from the pasture. I had been up on the mountain for more than a week with my herd. Among other news of the village, Giovanni told me of two Englishmen who were passing some days here. He intended, so he told me, to transact some business with one of them, but what sort of business he kept secret. When we reached the village Giulia came to meet us, and greeted us gaily and cordially. She took a bundle of wood from Giovanni's shoulder, and said laughingly, that it belonged to her to share his burdens. She was entirely herself, prattling as usual. She had no evil thoughts then; I will swear to that. On the contrary, there was something constrained and stiff in Giovanni's bearing toward her. Next day I asked my brother how his business with the Englishman went. His face darkened, he muttered curses, and answered that the Englishman had gone. I laughed at him, for I thought the stranger probably admired Giulia's beauty, and Giovanni's jealousy was the whole business. I did not see Giulia the whole day, and Giovanni said she had driven the herd, for they used to change places to relieve each other. Next morning when I went, as I had promised, to ask him to go with me, I found him yet in bed. When I called he did not answer, and on going nearer I found him dead, with a gaping wound in his neck and a bloody knife on the floor. Horrified, I hurried to seek Giulia, and found her busy changing her clothes, but as I discovered blood on her hands, I was so frightened and hastened to have her arrested. I have nothing more to tell, but I will swear that Giulia is the murderess of my unfortunate brother.'

His testimony did not seem to make the least impression upon Giulia, for she preserved her marble quiet, a repose in fearful contrast to her soft, childish features. Her brown hands which were clasped, appeared so dainty and small that I could not imagine how she could wield a murderous weapon.

Still other witnesses testified. Bloody clothing was recognized as belonging to Giulia, and the knife with which the murder was committed as Giovanni's property. There could be no doubt, Giulia had killed her husband. I could have sworn to that. But why had she done it? It was impossible not to pity the beautiful young creature, and I could not believe her to be the criminal, unless dreadful disgrace had befallen her.

The judge now turned to the accused: 'Giulia, Saveira's wife, before the sentence is pronounced you have the right to excuse yourself, or, through a frank and sincere confession, mitigate the decree. What have you to say?'

'Nothing,' came clearly and distinctly from the proud lip.

'Do you acknowledge yourself guilty of this murder?'

'Yes.'

'Do you feel no remorse over your shocking act?'

For the first time she raised her glance and showed two eyes in which a consuming fire burned. 'No.'

'Do you wish the deed undone—that you had your husband alive again—and that you were not guilty of his death?'

'No; if he still lived I would do the same thing again.' She said this in a passionate tone, quite unlike her former quiet. She was terrible, but unspeakably beautiful to look upon.

'Will you tell us what provocation you had for the murder, and why you did it? Perhaps Giovanni tormented you with his jealousy.'

'Giovanni jealous!' and shaking her head she laughed bitterly.

'Have you nothing to say that can soften your sentence?'

'I do not wish any mitigation.'

'Will you not say when the thought of murder first came to you?'

'Only two days ago.'

'And until that time you loved Giovanni?'

A flaming red spread over her face, and it seems to me that tears shimmered in her eyes. She is not yet so hard, I told myself; but a moment later she was icy cold.

'The sentence can be passed some days hence,' the judge continued. 'Father Rinaldo shall talk with you; perhaps he can move you to greater candor, and bring something to light which may mitigate the decree.'

'I have said all I have to say,' was the cold answer.

The judge sighed and sorrowfully shook his gray head.

'Lead the prisoner back to her cell,' he said to an official. 'She has acknowledged her guilt, the last hearing has taken place; the sentence can be passed.'

As Giulia moved toward the door with more the bearing of a queen than of a criminal, her despairing mother rushed to her, threw herself at her feet, and embracing her knees cried:

'Oh, Giula, Giula, my only child, my sunshine, say but one word of consolation before you go; say that you repent, and heaven will pardon your terrible act. Only tell something which can be an excuse for you, which can lessen your guilt and my trouble, and I will press you to my heart, for you are still my beloved child. You must have been crazy, beside yourself—you did not know what you did. Oh! when you were still small and rested in my arms; when you, a rosy girl, went with me to my work; when you stood a radiant bride—how could I then foresee what I should live to see you? But whatever you have done, I will pray for you. Oh, if you would only ease my anguish, and show us that you are not so hard and cruel. Tell us, Giulia, tell us, why did you do it?'

During her mother's entreaties Giulia softened, her bosom heaved, her eyelids rose and sank again, and her lips trembled. She drew her mother close to her, clasped her arms round her neck, and whispered the words that we alone could hear:

"Mother, he sold me!"

Then she fell swooning to the floor.

"GOT THE AGER."

"Well, I swow, here comes the walking hospital," said the grocery man as the bad boy's shadow came in the store, followed by the boy, who looked sick and yellow, and tired, and he had lost half his flesh. "What's the matter with you? Haven't got the yellow fever, have you?" and the grocery man placed a chair where the invalid could fall into it.

"No. Got the ager," said the boy, as he wiped the perspiration off his upper lip, and looked around the store to see if there was anything in sight that would take the taste of quinine out of his mouth. "Had too much dreamy life of ease on the farm, and been skaking ever since. Darn a farm anyway."

"What, you haven't been to work for the deacon any more, have you? I thought you sent in your resignation," and the grocery man offered the boy some limburger cheese to strengthen him.

"O, take that cheese away," said the boy, as he turned pale and gagged. "You don't know what a sick person needs any more than a professional nurse. What I need is to be petted. You see I went out to the farm with my chum, and I took the fish poles and remained in the woods while he drove the horse to the deacon's, and he gave the deacon my resignation and the deacon wouldn't accept it. He said he would hold my resignation until after harvest time and then act on it. He said he could put me in jail for breach of promise if I quit work and left him without giving proper notice, and my chum came and told me, and so I concluded to go to work rather than have any trouble, and the deacon said my chum could work a few days for his board if he wanted to. It was pretty darn poor board for a boy to work for, but my chum wanted to be with me, so he stayed. Pa and ma came out to the farm to stay a day or two to help. Pa was going to help harvest and ma was going to help the deacon's wife, but pa wanted to carry the jug to the field and lay under a tree while the rest of us worked, and ma just talked the arm off the deacon's wife. The deacon and pa laid in the shade and see my chum and me work, and ma and the deacon's wife gossiped so they forgot to get dinner, and my chum and me organized a strike, but we were beaten by monopoly. Pa took me by the neck and thrashed out a shock of wheat with my heels, and the deacon took my chum and sat down on him, and we begged and they gave us our old situations back. But we got even with them that night. I tell you when a boy tries to be good and quit playing jokes on people, and then has everybody down on him and has his pa to hire him out on a farm to work for a deacon that hasn't any soul except when he is in church, and a boy has to get up in the night to get breakfast and go to work and has to work until late at night, and they kick because he wants to put butter on his pancakes and feed him skim milk and rusty fat pork, it makes him tough, and he would play a joke on his aged grandmother. After my chum and me got all the chores done that night we sat on a fence back of the house in the orchard eating green apples in the moonlight and trying to think of a plan of revenge. Just then I saw a skunk back of the house right by the outside cellar door, and I told my chum that it would serve them right to drive the skunk down cellar and shut the door, but my chum said it would be too mean. I asked him if it would be any meaner than for the deacon to snatch us bald headed because we couldn't mow hay fast enough for two men to pitch it, and he said it wouldn't, and so we got on each side of the skunk and sort of scared it down cellar, and then we crept up softly and closed the cellar doors. Then we went in the house and I whispered to ma and asked her if she didn't think the deacon had some cider, and ma she began to hint that she hadn't had a good drink of cider since last winter, and the deacon's wife said us boys could take a pitcher and go down cellar and draw some. That was too much. I didn't want any cider, anyway, so I told them that I belonged to a temperance society, and I should break my pledge if I drawed cider, and she said I was a good boy, and for me never to touch a drop of cider. Then she told my chum where the cider barrel was down cellar, but he ain't no slouch. He said he was afraid to go down cellar in the dark, and so pa said he and the deacon would go down and draw the cider, and the deacon's wife asked ma to go down too and look at the fruit and berries she had canned for winter, and they all went down cellar. Pa carried an old tin lantern with holes in it to light the deacon to the cider barrel, and the deacon's wife had a taller candle to show ma the canned fruit. I tried to get ma not to go, 'cause ma is a friend of mine, and I didn't want her to have anything to do with the circus, but she said she guessed she knew her business. When anybody says that they guess they know their own business, that settles it with me, and I don't try to argue with them. Well, my chum and me sat there in the kitchen, and I stuffed a piece of red table cloth in my mouth to keep from laughing, and my chum held his nose with his finger and thumb so he wouldn't snort right out. We could hear the cider run in the pitcher, and then it stopped, and the deacon drank out of the pitcher, and then pa did, and then they drawed some more and ma and the deacon's wife were talking about how much sugar it took to can fruit, and the deacon told pa to help himself out of a crock of fried cakes, and I heard the cover on the crock rattle, and just then I heard the old tin lantern rattle on the brick floor of the cellar, the deacon said 'Merciful goodness!' pa said 'Helen damnation, I am stabbed,' and ma yelled 'Godness sakes alive,' and then there was a lot of dishpans on the stairs began to fall and they all tried to get up cellar at once, and they fell over each other, and oh, my, what a frowy smell came up to the kitchen from the cellar. It was enough to kill anybody. Pa was the first to get to the head of the stairs, and he stuck his head in the kitchen, and took a long breath and said, 'Whoosh! Hennery, your pa is a mighty sick man.' The deacon came up next, and he run his head into a hanging shelf and broke a glass jar of huckleberries, and they were all over him, and he said 'Give me air. Earth's but a desert drear.' Then ma and the deacon's wife came up on a gallop, and they looked tired. Pa began to peel off his coat and vest and said he was going out to bury them, and ma said he could bury her too, and I asked the deacon if he didn't notice a faint odor of sewer gas coming from the cellar, and my chum said it smelled more to him as though something had crawled in the cellar and died. Well, you never saw a sicker crowd, and I felt sorry for ma and the deacon, 'cause their false teeth fell out, and I knew ma couldn't gossip and the deacon couldn't talk sassy without teeth. But you'd a dide to see pa. He was mad, and thought the deacon had put up the job on him, and he was going to knock the deacon out in two rounds, when ma said it was no use of getting mad at a dispensation of Providence, and pa said one more such dispensation of Providence would kill him on the spot. They finally got the house aired, and my chum and me slept on the hay in the barn, after we had opened the outside cellar door so the animal could get out, and the next morning I had the fever and ague, and pa and ma brought me home, and I have been firing quinine down my neck ever since. Pa says it is malaria, but it is getting up before daylight in the morning and prowling around a farm doing chores before it is time to do chores, and I don't want any more farm. I thought at Sunday school last Sunday, when the superintendent talked about the odor of sanctity that pervaded the house on that beautiful morning, and looked at the deacon, that the deacon thought the superintendent was referring to him and pa, but maybe it was an accident. Well, I must go home and shoot another charge of quinine into me," and the boy went out as if he was on his last legs, though he acted as though he was going to have a little fun while he did last.—Peck's Sun.

LOUIS F. WADSWORTH,
Chairman of last Convention.

A FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE.

No prouder distinction can a public man possess than that of being a proven friend of the people.

Not the promoter of privileges for the pampered few, but the bold advocate of the rights of the masses, of the poor and weak as well as the rich and strong.

It is the honor of honors.

Leon Abbett justly wears that badge.

He is a life-long defender of popular rights. As a legislator and a lawyer he has battled valiantly for the people and won victories on their behalf.

When corrupt Legislative Commissions usurped Home Rule in Jersey City, and there recklessly piled up millions of debt and imposed enormous taxation, it was Leon Abbett who fought the monster wrong and restored to the people the powers of self-government.

When the Receiver of a bankrupt Railroad Company, owing a large amount of wages to its employees, refused, on the plea of legal disability, to pay them in preference to the claims of bondholders, it was Leon Abbett who, as Senator from the County of Hudson, succeeded, after a hard struggle, in procuring the passage of a law, now on the statute book, making wages a first lien on the assets of every insolvent corporation within the State of New Jersey.

Remember those facts and forget not that—

"By the direct personal efforts of Leon Abbett, as a Senator and afterwards as an unfeed lawyer before the Chancellor, the needy employees of the Central Railroad of New Jersey received four hundred thousand dollars of overdue wages.

VOTE FOR
LEON ABBETT.

TIDAL WAVES.

The Democratic tidal wave that swept over the land twelve months ago still swells a mighty flood.

It struck Ohio last week and knocked political Republicanism into a shapeless wreck. Nothing there left of the grand old 50,000 majority craft but broken timbers and splintered spars. When last seen Foster was nailing a few yards of war priced calico to the stump of the mainmast as a signal of distress; Sherman, sitting astride the submerged rail, was shouting lustily—"Help me Dorsey or I sink?" while Foraker and Deacon Smith were on a bale of wool trying to keep themselves from rolling upside down.

Ohio is Democratic through and through, Governor, State officers, Legislature, and United States Senator, all Democrats.

Let the billows dash!

The tidal wave on the same day came East and washed political Republicanism out of the City of Newark, New Jersey.

It is reported that several leaders of the party of moral ideas in Newark are still standing, pale and speechless, on the banks of the Passaic, wondering what caused the storm and whether it will return.

Newark is Democratic, the Mayor elect and a majority of the Board of Aldermen are Democrats.

Let the waters rise and roar!

The Republicans invent and set forth various reasons for such a radical change of political sentiment, attributing it to local causes, &c., &c.

No doubt local sentiment has favored and should favor Democracy, because it is the party of the people, of honesty, economy and personal freedom.

But there is a general cause for Democratic tidal waves, above and beyond mere local issues.

The people of the United States are tired of the Republican party, its mercenary greed for unlimited power, its encouragement of monopolies and bubble speculations, its extravagance and disregard of practical business interests, its official misdeeds and ring corruptions, and they are determined to have a change.

The people look to the Democratic party for relief, for safety, for official integrity in every department of government, for promoting the welfare and happiness of the masses, for curbing the selfish designs of monopolists, for laws that will advance and protect the public good without infringing upon the rights and privileges of the citizen, for equal and exact justice, and rigid loyalty to the liberty preserving principles of the Constitution.

That is the true cause of Democratic tidal waves.

VETTERLEIN FOR ASSEMBLY.

The Democratic candidate for the House of Assembly in Somerset County is John Vetterlein, of North Plainfield, upon whom the nomination was unanimously conferred as a just tribute to personal worth and ability, and which should receive a majority ratification at the polls.

Mr. Vetterlein is a well known and highly esteemed citizen of Somerset. Honest, intelligent, of good repute, and thoroughly versed in practical business affairs, he is the very kind of man to serve in the Legislature with benefit to the people and credit to himself.

He is a most excellent candidate.

Vote for VETTERLEIN.

ANOTHER LIE NAILED.

Among other calumnies uttered against the Democratic candidate for Governor, Hon. Leon Abbett, the Republican press of the State have asserted that ex-Governor Bedle was not in sympathy with that gentleman's nomination, and had refused to take the stump in Abbett's interests. The ex-Governor was so unfortunate as to break a leg recently by a fall, and therefore is physically unable to do that which he would like to do, as the following will attest:

NO. 1 MONTGOMERY STREET,
JERSEY CITY, OCTOBER 9th, 1883.

John H. Laird, Esq., Secretary Democratic State Central Committee.

DEAR SIR:—In answer to your invitation to speak in the present campaign, I regret to say that it will be physically impossible for me to accept the same, by reason of my recent accident. To me this is a great disappointment, as I would be very much pleased to assist my neighbor and friend, the Hon. Leon Abbett, in the campaign. His ability, independence, manliness, integrity and personal worth, recommend him to the voters of the State as every way fitted for the duties of the high office to which he has been nominated. The Democratic party could not have made a wiser or better selection, and I sincerely trust and believe that he will be elected. Yours, very truly,

J. D. BEDLE.

Have you heard from Ohio.

Who exploded that bomb in Newark.

The march of Democracy is onward.

Democrats don't fling mud, they hurl facts.

A bird in hand is worth two in the bush, carry the news to Jersey City for the comfort of Jonathan.

He is a shrewd man who declines giving up a fat office for the honor of being defeated in a Gubernatorial race.

The Democrats, for the first time in nearly twenty years, will have full control of all branches of the city government of Newark.

The chap who declared the Democratic party was dead now meditates a plunge into the Niagara whirlpool. He had better plunge.

The colored vote in Ohio was cast largely for Democratic candidates. Colored citizens are beginning to see things as they really exist and to act as freemen should.

To equally encourage and protect every species of legitimate business, enterprise and labor, whether humble or extensive, is the mission of the Democratic party.

If Judge Dixon has the remotest idea of being elected Governor, why don't he do as his friends in the Convention promised he would—resign from the bench and mount the stump?

Executive ability consists in thoroughly knowing what constitutes duty and fearlessly discharging it. That truthfully portrays the character of the Democratic candidate for Governor.—VOTE FOR LEON ABBETT.

As Chief Magistrate of New Jersey, Mr. Abbett will see that public affairs are conducted legally, promptly and honestly, and that justice shields the poorest man in the State as potently as the richest.—VOTE FOR LEON ABBETT.

Freedom to worship according to the dictates of conscience, and freedom to live unfettered by tyrannical laws of any kind, are the guaranteed rights of American citizenship and the fundamental principles of the Democratic party.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Frank Godeshalk has arrived home from his vacation, looking fresh and hearty.

The person spoken of in last week's wisps has ascertained in which year we live, but now is troubled whether Sunday is the first or seventh day of the week.

James B. Carbery, residing on the corner of Mountain ave. and Springfield road, has rented the house of A. S. Clark on Broad street and intends occupying it the present month.

Mr. Godeshalk, proprietor of the Hotel, has made a decided improvement in the billiard room, taking out the partition making one large room. He intends putting in another table soon. Sam says he only waited to hear from Ohio before he spent any money.

On Tuesday afternoon as the 3.30 express from New York was passing Westfield about a half mile above Broad street crossing in our town, a boy standing on the bank threw a stone at the train breaking one of the car windows and going into the car. There happened to be no person sitting by the window or there might have been serious injury inflicted.

*The Republican voters of our town*ship held their primary meeting on Monday evening at the Town Rooms. The following are the officers for the ensuing years: Aaron P. Grant, President; Chas. E. Leveridge, Vice President; William M. Connoly, Treasurer; and Luther M. Whitaker, Secretary. Levi Cory, James T. Pierson, Wm. Schoonover, Foster E. Grant and L. M. Whitaker, were chosen delegates to Assembly Convention.

The road question, in regard to the extension of Kimball avenue and Orchard street, which created considerable discussion about a year ago, and which everybody thought was settled, was again before the courts of our county on Monday last. On motion of James C. Bolton, Esq., to test the validity of the returns of the surveyors, was argued by Mr. Bolton on behalf of the property owners. Frank Bergen, Esq., Township Counsel and George Parrot on behalf of James H. Townley, who has recently purchased a lot of land which was originally taken for the extension of Orchard street, but was vacated as Mr. Townley supposed, by the return of the Chosen Freeholders, and a new dwelling in process of construction on the same, the court took the papers and reserved its decision; and on Wednesday gave its opinion, sustaining the action of the Chosen Freeholders.

On Tuesday morning last at about 2 o'clock our residents were startled from their slumbers by the alarm of fire. It proved to be the store building of Chas. B. Clark, corner of Broad and Clark streets in our village. The building was occupied by John J. Totten as a dwelling and variety store. The building was one mass of flames before the arrival of the several fire companies, who upon arriving at the scene gave their attention to the protection of the buildings on the south side of the railroad, towards and upon which the sparks and cinders were falling thick and fast. The members of the Bucket Co. got upon the roofs of the White and Daily buildings and kept them wet. Empire Eng. Co. 2, with the members of Hook & Ladder Co. No. 1, after a short trial at Clark's store where they found it impossible to stay the flames, crossed over to the dwelling of Mrs. Mulford, on Broad street, and kept that building from taken fire from flying sparks. The occupant, John J. Totten, with his two small children barely escaped with their lives; saving nothing, not even their clothing. Mr. Totten was insured for $300 upon his stock, in the Northern Insurance. The owner of the building was insured for $800 in the Commercial Union Insurance Co. of London, by their agent in our town, John M. C. Marsh, who with Mr. Geo. Edgar, adjuster, settled the loss on Wednesday morning by giving Mr. Clark a check for the full amount of the claim under his policy.

Well, through the innate courtesy of the Empire's of this place, Plainfielders had a chance to have a look at their Holloway engine last Tuesday night, although through a different kind of courtesy upon the part of the Plainfield Fire Department they didn't even have a chance to look at the Chief Engineer, let alone the machine, at the late parade. However, the boys don't feel bad about it, and to prove it they put up their fifty dollar bonfire and went up on Tuesday evening. It must be said to the credit of the gentleman who took the contract to build the fire that he didn't act in the least mean in the matter, as every one present felt that the boys got all they bargained for. The fire was ignited at 9 o'clock and allowed to burn a short time before the chemical engine began operations. When they did the fire was completely out in two minutes, which probably was not a fair test, as the fire had not reached the barrels of tar, kerosene, etc. It was again ignited and allowed to get under full headway so that it was one seething mass of flames, before the engine began to play upon it. It was a hard test, but the engine came off triumphant, putting the fire out and leaving a large number of barrels of tar and a large quantity of other inflammable material entirely unburned. We doubt very much if two of the steamers of the Plainfield Fire Department with Warren included, could have quenched the fire. They no doubt with the force of water that the steamers throw, would have knocked the pile to pieces. Take the same quantity of inflammable material and place it in one of the store cellars on Front street and set it on fire, you may bet on the chemical engine every time.

Jerusalem Honored.

MESSRS EDITORS:—The old saying, "A Prophet is never received in his own country," seems to be verified in the case of Mr. John Ulrich, our townsman. Whilst the various papers throughout the State are speaking of him as a young man of considerable talent, many have failed to give him credit of his various successes, and his talents have not been appreciated. The Jersey City Evening Journal announced his coming the other evening as follows: "Amity Lodge, No. 103, F. and A. M., will work the Fellowcraft degree this evening. Brother Jno. Ulrich, of Jerusalem Lodge, Plainfield, will act as Senior Deacon. Bro. Ulrich is said to be the best S. D. in the State." That the room was filled could hardly be believed to be otherwise. The announcement of his coming always guarantees a well filled room. Those who have heard the middle chamber lecture of Brother Ulrich pronounce it to be a masterpiece of rhetorical and oratorical art, and the laurels which he has won as being the finest masonic lecturer in the State, should be an honor to Jerusalem Lodge, and a credit to this city. Though comparatively but a young man, it clearly demonstrates the fact that the time, patience and industry which he has applied towards reaching the top has been accomplished and highly appreciated.

SUPPLEMENT.

Senator McPherson,

WITH THE RECORD,

AT THE

Opera House, New Brunswick,

OCT. 12, 1883.

Abbett vs. Dixon.

Speech of Senator McPherson.

MR. PRESIDENT AND CITIZENS OF NEW BRUNSWICK:

Three years ago this very day, and almost this very hour at the close of that day, if I mistake not the date, I had the honor to stand in your presence, and to ask your support—Democrat and Republican alike—to elect a distinguished resident from your city to the high and dignified office of Governor, and you nobly responded to that call.

My prophecy to you then has become a matter of history now. What was that prophecy? It was an assurance of honest and economical government for all the people of the State, rich and poor, white and black. It was an assurance of home rule; that the people of this State should not be disfranchised by legislative commissions, but should be left to manage their own local affairs in their own way, and without interference from the central power at Trenton.

Governor Ludlow found corporate power and corporate wealth encroaching upon the rights and liberties of the people; and, to his everlasting honor and credit be it said, he stood upon the side of the people. Turn now to his record, and you will see that every pledge I made to you then has been fulfilled to the very letter.

The spirit of prophecy is still upon me; and I come to you again asking the same cordial support for a distinguished citizen of another county, the Hon. LEON ABBETT of Hudson, confident that he will add another to the long list of Democratic Governors whose administrations reflect honor and glory upon the State.

I ask it not only because he is a Democrat, but because he is an honest, able and independent man, and will uphold the Democratic idea in government under which our State has been respected and the people prosperous and happy. No man has ever been called to the chair of state better equipped in all the requisites of successful administration—and he has had a large experience in matters of government. His ability as a legislator is stamped upon the statute books of the State in wise and wholesome laws; and his record shows he has ever been the friend of the people.

Mr. Abbett fills the full measure of Democracy, and has made its principles the unvarying rule during his whole official life. Eminently distinguished in every pursuit he has followed, faithful and able in his Democracy, pure and unchallengable in his character as a citizen, he is the nominee of the party, and to-day its regularly-appointed leader. Into his hands we have placed the banner of Democracy, have bid him to carry it and wave it in triumph on the eve of battle over the field of victory.

I am glad to see before me to-night many faces that I recognize as not belonging to that political organization to which I have attached myself. But we are citizens of the same State, and we have a joint interest in good government; and we are here to confer together as to the best method of securing it. Do not expect from me to-night any oratorical display—life is too short for men of deeds and action to be spent in listening to figures of rhetoric.

What you want and the world wants to-day, and must have, is facts, plainly and forcibly set forth, to guide and control your action. It is the oratory that teaches something that reaches the popular heart. All history teaches that the decisions of the Athenian people were really the decisions of two or three orators of the period, so that when Philip of Macedon meditated the conquest of Athens he very sagaciously began by corrupting its orators. But, thank heaven, this is no longer possible. The steam press and telegraph, apostles of light, liberty and enterprise, are our orators to-day. The Democratic orator may proclaim his truths from one end of the line, and the Republican orator dispatch his heresies from the other end. They pass each other without ever jostling on their mission to the world, and if they state any new facts the world takes note of it. The press discusses public men and measures—often, I admit, with too much freedom of expression—but, after all, it is the great educator of the people.

My conversation with you to-night, then, will be with men of both parties. And let me first say to my Republican friend who honors me with his presence: I do not impugn your integrity, question your sincerity or doubt your patriotism; but will concede to you that same integrity of character I claim in all things for myself. I will not deal with you as individuals, but I will deal with you as a great organized party and with your measures as part of a great policy. In like manner I shall deal with the Democratic party.

Our Government is a vast and most complex machine, and is administered, of necessity, by one of the great political parties of the country. Political parties, after all, are only the platforms upon which the workmen stand as they rear the walls of our national temple. It is through the agency and machinery of parties that great reforms are made in government. It is the duty of the citizen to attach himself to one of the great political parties, and to that one whose avowed principles are most conducive to good government.

No man is so great as to be above politics. No man is so small as to be beneath the injurious effects and consequences of bad government. I have no sympathy with those highly-respectable men, who declare, as though it were a virtue, that they have no interest in politics. If they are telling the truth when they make such a statement they are unworthy citizens of a great country, whose greatest merit is that it is self-governed. Now, my friends, we must weigh these parties, comparing them with each other, and if on the whole we believe, as I thoroughly believe, that the general interests of the country, its prosperity, and the protection of its citizens in the enjoyment of all civil and political privileges, will be best promoted by the success and supremacy of the Democratic party, then whatever smaller flaws we may find in its management or in its methods, as patriotic citizens to that party we must attach ourselves, and to it must give our allegiance. I believe in Democracy. I accept it. I will defend it. What is Democracy? It is the right of the people to govern itself.

The Democratic party is almost as old as the country. It was founded during the administration of the elder Adams as a living protest against the invasions of the Constitution which were perpetrated during its day. It is founded upon the Constitution; it is based upon its principles, and it believes in its restrictions and limitations. From that day to this it has maintained its organization and almost its very name. Other parties have sprung up around it and have acquired temporary power, but when the rains descended and the floods came these party organizations have fallen. So it has been in the past and so it will continue to be so long as the Democratic party remains true to its principles.

The Democratic party presents no new dogmas to secure popular favor, but adheres to the simple creed of the fathers—a creed under which the people were prosperous and the nation honored. We believe in the Constitution as the supreme and sacred law of the land, prescribing the limit of all powers, guarding all rights, enforcing all obligations.

Looking over the long list of Democratic Governors in this State, to wit: Parker, Randolph, Bedle, McClellan and Ludlow, together with a not less distinguished galaxy in the remoter past, has the Democratic party done anything which will justify us in withdrawing from it that confidence which we have repeatedly reposed in it? During all these years—some of them filled with sorrow and bitterness of heart, where, elsewhere, centralization and corruption were running rampant through the land—where the administration of National and State Governments were a by-word and a reproach to the people—the record made by our gallant little Commonwealth, steered by Democratic hands, is pure and unspotted. She stands forth to-day robed in white, the fairest of the whole sisterhood of States. No malfeasance, no maladministration, no scandals in office, not a single improper appointment made and not a dollar lost to the public treasury. And now, my Republican friend, having shared with us the benefits flowing from good government, do you not with reluctance vote for its overthrow?

Why has it been successful? Because the Democratic governors have been the servants and not the masters of the people; and a people controlled by patriotic motives can never be wrong. Keeping the Government rather than man in subjection; believing that form of governments is best which requires man to give up fewest of his natural rights, surrendering least of his natural independence, this is the American, the Democratic principle, and to its application is due our success in government. Shall it remain? Shall this simple farmer republic last? All other questions are less than this in this campaign.

I have been in the habit of saying that the record and principles of a party constitute the only test of its fitness and capacity for government, and its only title to trust and confidence. Applying this test to the Democratic party I find it has a record and principles, and both are good. Applying it to our candidate I find he has a record and principles, and they, too, are good; and, when elected, as he surely will be, I trust and believe the prophecy I make to you to-night will soon become a history of glorious achievement.

At every recurring election the records of the candidates, as well as the records of parties, are quite properly brought before the people for discussion and decision by the people. I have said the record of our party was good, and I think I have shown it. I have also said the record of our candidate is good, and I now mean to show that. And I shall present his record upon those subjects which immediately and directly concern the people, and you will find he has a record which is entirely in the interest of the people.

The three great subjects to which I invite your attention are "Taxation," "The Rights of Labor," and "The Right of the People to Regulate and Control Their Home Affairs," and will compare the records of both candidates.

TAXATION.

The subject which most nearly affects every citizen of the State is that of taxation. The platform of the party says: "We demand the equalization of taxation on all properties within the State, whether of individuals or corporations."

Mr. Abbett, in his letter of acceptance, says: "I am in favor of equal taxation for all—corporations and individuals."

The views of our candidate upon the great question of corporate taxation date back as far as the year 1875—the first year that he was in the Senate of New Jersey.

In stating his views, we shall quote from the leading Republican paper of the city of Newark, the Advertiser, a paper which is now opposing his election, but which fails to reproduce the statements that it made with reference to the position he assumed as far back as 1875. I first quote from the Advertiser of March 18, 1875: "The bill relative to insolvent railroad companies relieving them from the payment of the State tax of one-half of one per cent., is vigorously opposed by Mr. Abbett. He said that any such law would practically donate the amount of the tax to the railroad corporations, and a premium would thus be held out to them to set up that they have not earned seven per cent., and should, therefore, be exempt from all taxation. He said the bill was an insult to the Senate."

Again, from the same paper of March 25, 1875, we quote: "In the Senate Bill to relieve insolvent railroad companies with amendments so as to apply only to the counties of Essex, Morris, Union, Bergen and Hudson, Mr. Abbett moved to strike out the words 'Hudson county.' He said his people did not want this bill. It will have the effect of enabling any railroad company to merge with another and then refuse to pay taxes on the ground that they no longer had any existence. There was already nine millions of dollars of railroad property in Hudson county that paid no taxes, and that amount is thrown upon the county, and the people very justly complain."

This amendment of Mr. Abbett's was agreed to by eleven to two.

Again, from the same paper of April 10, 1875, we quote: "Mr. Sewell offered a substitute for the supplement to the charter of the Long Branch road, allowing it to connect with the New Jersey Southern, and with their rights they might cross its tracks. Mr. Hopper contended that the New Jersey Central was always in contention with the State. In a recent litigation it was decided that they could simply make them pay taxes on the cost of the road. MR. ABBETT SAID THAT HE HAD DETERMINED, THAT SO FAR AS HE WAS CONCERNED, NO ROAD SHOULD ESCAPE TAXATION, AND, IF THAT WAS THE OBJECT OF THESE ROADS, HE WOULD VOTE AGAINST EVERY SUCH PROPOSITION."

Mr. Abbett again clearly and fully expressed his views in the Constitutional Commission appointed under an act of the Legislature in 1881. He offered at that time, and earnestly urged the adoption of the following amendments to the Constitution:

"1. That the real and personal estate of every corporation—foreign and domestic—except municipal corporations of this State, shall be taxed the same as the real and personal estate of an individual, and all laws that establish a different rule are hereby repealed.

"2. That no law shall be passed, or contract made, by or on behalf of the State or any municipal corporation by which the power of taxation shall in any way be impaired or abridged."

Again, in 1882, in a report made to the Board of Finance and Taxation in Jersey City—of which Mr. Abbett was the Corporation Counsel—reporting upon the subject of property exempt from taxation in Jersey City under the laws of the State and under the decisions of its courts and of the Supreme Court of the United States, he reiterates the same views, and declares himself again in favor of the equal taxation of all corporations and individuals, and points out what he believes to be a practical mode of extinguishing existing contracts which prevent the adoption of such a rule.

In his speech in the city of Newark Mr. Abbett stated that while he had expressed his views as to the mode in which this result could be reached, that he was not wedded or committed to, but was in favor of any practical and legal mode which could be suggested by any citizen which would reach the same result.

This is the record of our candidate upon the question of taxation.

There is no action or utterance of his during his public life but what is entirely consistent with his mature judgment and expression of opinion upon this great question, and we confidently appeal to the people. Upon this question he stands with the great body of the taxpayers of the State.

THE RIGHTS OF LABOR.

All the public acts of our candidate for Governor upon the great questions which affect the laboring masses of this State, have been in their interest.

We will call attention to a few of them as showing where his sympathies have always been upon these questions. The first instance to which we call attention dates back over fourteen years, and in stating it we again quote from the same Republican paper.

The Advertiser of March 10th, 1869, said: "The Bill to repeal the Act making it conspiracy to strike for wages was taken up in the House when Mr. Conover moved to postpone indefinitely. The Speaker objected to the said motion, and advocated the Bill at length; the workingmen, he insisted, had no other way to protect themselves, except by forming Trade Unions, and combining together to get fair remuneration for their labor. There was no wrong in it. It was a natural right. Mr. Conover replied, showing what these combinations had done to interfere with and stop trade and commerce. The Speaker objected and insisted that the bill did not relieve the men from the penalties of acts of violence; it only protected them in the right to advise together in regard to their wages. The motion to postpone was lost."

In 1877, the workingmen from South Jersey complained that some of their employers, instead of paying them their wages in cash, paid in store orders which could only be redeemed at the employer's stores; and that the prices charged there for articles that they purchased were higher than they could buy elsewhere; so that in reality a dollar in shape of a store order was not worth more than sixty cents in cash. Mr. Abbett's position upon the question was in favor of the rights of labor.

We again quote from the same Republican paper of February 28, 1877, "In the Senate a Cash Bill against the payment of wages in store orders came up on Mr. Willett's motion, when he offered a substitute providing that no person shall issue for payment of labor any paper order unless the same shall be redeemable for its face value in lawful money; any violation of this Act to be deemed a misdemeanor, and punishable with a penalty of $500. A Senator MOVED TO POSTPONE FOR ONE WEEK, FOR THE PURPOSE OF KILLING THE BILL. President Abbett took the floor and urged the passage of the Bill. He said it was a fraud on the workingman to compel him to take shinplasters for his pay. The motion was lost.

This bill passed both Houses and became a law, and under it the workingmen of the State are entitled to be paid in cash and not in store orders.

Another instance in which he championed the rights of labor was when he introduced in the Senate a bill to make the wages of the laborers in the employ of any corporation a first lien on their assets; to be paid prior to any other debts in case of insolvency. We quote from the same paper of March 7th, 1875, "Among the most important bills passed to-day was Senator Abbett's Bill, which provides that IN CASE OF THE INSOLVENCY OF ANY CORPORATION THE LABORERS IN THE EMPLOY THEREOF SHALL HAVE A LIEN ON THE ASSETS FOR THE AMOUNT OF WAGES DUE THEM, WHICH SHALL BE PAID PRIOR TO ANY OTHER DEBT."

In 1877 the Central Railroad Company was in the hands of a Receiver. It owed its employes the sum of $401,382.88 for back wages. At that time Mr. Abbett being President of the Senate was appealed to by the employes of the company to secure the payment of these wages. They and their families were in distress and had been utterly unable to obtain the payment of this money. The Receiver of the company, under the advice of his counsel, had refused to pay them on the ground that the Act confined the payment to laborers and did not include engineers, conductors, brakemen, clerks and other employes of the company. Mr. Abbett prepared an amendment to the bill then pending before the Senate, which will be found on pages 74 and 75 of the Laws of 1877, which provides that the word "laborers shall be construed to include all persons doing labor or service of whatever character to or as a workman or employe in the regular employ of such corporations." Under this Act Senator Abbett then prepared a petition on behalf of all the employes of the Central Railroad Company, which was sworn to on their behalf by Bartholomew Murtaugh, which petition is filed in the Court of Chancery in New Jersey, March 16, 1877, in the suit between the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, complainant, and the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, defendant. He procured an order to show cause which was filed March 16, 1877, and on March 22, 1877, after a full hearing before the Chancellor, in which the company, the Receiver and the bondholders of the road and the Attorney General of the State were represented, he obtained an order of the Chancellor directing the payment of these back wages to the employes, and under this order these employes obtained the payment of all their back wages, amounting to the sum of $401,362.88.

This service was rendered to the employes without its costing them one dollar. I read to you the telegram which was sent to Bartholomew Murtaugh by Mr. Abbett immediately after procuring the order for payment:

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY,
TRENTON, March 27, 1877.

Bartholomew Murtaugh, Esq., Track Master, Communipaw Ferry:

Chancellor signed order directing money to be paid. Men will get $60,000 this month and balance will be paid in monthly instalments until they are fully paid. The Receiver will send out printed copies of the order so the men can read it. Tell men I charge them nothing.

LEON ABBETT.

This law, the passage of which was secured by exertions of Senator Abbett, not only procured the payment of the wages to the employes of the Central Railroad Company, but, being a general law, it reaches the employes of every insolvent corporation in the State of New Jersey—not merely all the railroads of the State, but every corporation of every description—and the workingmen of the State to-day are indebted to his efforts for the legislation which secures to them payment before any bondholder or any other creditor of any insolvent company.

LOCAL SELF GOVERNMENT.

Upon the great question of the right of Local Self Government our candidate is clear and explicit in his letter of acceptance; he says: "I believe in Local Self-Government, and am opposed to the creation or continuance of Legislative commissions. I favor the most simple and economical form of Government for every city, borough, town and township."

Mr. Abbett was elected to the Senate in the Fall of 1874 upon the issue "down with the commissions." In 1871 the Republican Legislature of New Jersey, in order to take away the municipal power from the Democratic city governments, opposed a law known as the Charter of 1871 (Laws of 1871, page 1094, etc.). This Charter vested in the legislative commissions the employment of all the police and firemen and the management of those departments. It also vested in the legislative commissions the management of all matters connected with the public works, embracing all improvements and the making of all assessments. The same Charter took from the Board of Aldermen all the substantial power which has heretofore been vested in it, so that the aldermen—who are elected by the people—should really have nothing to do with those matters which involve the creation of debt, expenditure of money and the employment of nearly all the officials of the city. Section 55 of this Charter provided "that whenever the cost of paving, flagging, curbing or guttering any street or the construction of any sewer should be directed to be borne by the city treasury and paid for by general tax, no other proceeding shall be necessary for the execution of such improvements than a resolution of the Board of Public Works and an advertisement for proposals." This section utterly destroys the power of the property owner to remonstrate against any improvements to be paid for by general tax, and enable this Legislative Board to make improvements in the city in utter disregard of the wishes of the tax-payers and property-owners.

The evil effects of this charter, which utterly destroys the responsibility of public servants to the people, and which contain provisions which opened the road to corruption and extravagance, was soon felt in the increase of the public debt and in the increase of the amount of tax levies, and to-day the city of Jersey City is staggering under the load of debt and taxation which is due to this infamous law.

To show the effect of this charter it is only necessary to state the condition of the debt of Jersey City at different periods.

The total bonded debt of consolidated Jersey City May 1st, 1871, one month after Republican Commissions took control of Jersey City under the charter of 1871, was $7,494,672.33.

The total bonded debt May 1st, 1872, was	$10,586,463 72
Total bonded debt May 1st, 1873, was	11,796,575 00
Total bonded debt October 1st, 1874, was	12,858,300 80

showing that the increase in the bonded debt from May 1, 1871, to Oct. 1, 1874, for three years and five months of the rule of Republican Legislative Commissions, amounted to $5,363,377.68. During this period the amounts of tax levies and receipts from water rent, and from other sources, amounted to the sum of $5,102,177.26, which, added to the proceeds of the bonds issued as above, made a total expenditure during that period of the rule of Legislative Commissions of $11,464,454.95; and this did not include the tax levy of 1874, which amounted, in addition, to the sum of $1,331,349.68. In addition to the above bonded debt there was also a deficiency, represented by the floating debt, of nearly $750,000 which had subsequently to be met by a further increase of the bonded debt. And at the time of Senator Rabe, in the year 1874, there was also unpaid two months of the salaries of teachers, policemen and other city employes, and the bonds of the city were only worth from 92 to 95 cents on the dollar.

The people in 1874 elected Leon Abbett upon his pledge to abolish these Legislative Commissions. In 1875 he appealed to the Republican Legislature to restore to the people the right of self-government. They refused. Again he appealed in 1876. Again they refused. In 1877 the House of Assembly was a tie, with Speaker Rabe in the chair; the Senate was Democratic, with Senator Abbett as the presiding officer, and in that year, with the assistance of Speaker Rabe, he procured the passage of an Act which abolished Legislative Commissions and restored to the people the right to elect their servants. (Laws of 1877, page 54.)

The people will recall, also, that this Act was passed in 1877 against the active opposition of all the Republican politicians of Jersey City, and that not one Republican member from Hudson county voted for this Bill; that they voted every attempt to prevent its passage, and that they secured, in opposition to it, the vote of nearly the entire Republican delegation in the House. Its passage was only secured at length by the vote of four Republican Assemblymen from Essex county, who united with Speaker Rabe, and one or two other Republicans, in refusing longer to be responsible for this infamous measure. The people of Jersey City remember who drew this charter of 1871; they remember that it was the present candidate of the Republican party for Governor, and that, during the years of maladministration and increase of debt, to which I have above alluded, he was the attorney of the city. They will never elect by their votes the man who, above all others, is responsible for this measure. They believe in Local Self-Government, and I confidently believe that every Municipality in this State will also repudiate the man and the measure.

And now, my friends, having given you the record of our candidate upon all important questions bearing upon the campaign, let me give you a little of the record of the Republican candidate. Upon the question of taxation he has no record, and he refuses to tell the people what he thinks about it; but his party has a record, and the record is bad. Upon the question of labor he is as silent as the grave; yet he in effect says to the laboring man: my opinions find expression in the platform and practices of the Republican party in the past—whose candidate I am, whose principles I avow and whose practices I approve. God help the poor laboring man, for if this party obtains power he will be left with no right except the right of petition, and the Constitution guarantees him this right.

But it is our good fortune—I might rather say misfortune, for it has no other meaning to both Judge Dixon and those affected by his acts—we have his record upon the question of local self-government.

In Mr. Abbett's record I have given you the history of the local government of Jersey City as it existed under the infamous legislative commissions appointed under an act passed by a Republican Legislature over the veto of a Democratic Governor. Mr. Dixon (for he was plain Mr. Dixon then, and would be still but for the generosity of a Democratic Governor) is said to have been the counsel and adviser of those who conspired to deprive the people of the power to control and regulate their own home affairs. He is said to have devised and constructed the charter, to have supported it before the committees of the Legislature, and it was owing largely to his skill as a lawyer, his ability as an advocate and his character as a citizen, that even a Republican caucus (presided over by a distinguished Republican Senator [Jarrard], now temporarily absent in Canada) could be influenced to give it the sanction of its high and mighty authority. But it was finally done, and Mr. Dixon became the counsel of those appointed to execute the law.

To say that Mr. Dixon is not an expert in devising means by which whole communities of people could be most completely disfranchised, is to challenge truth and belie history; and as he is not to leave the Bench, we are not yet to be informed what new improvements on the old plan his inventive genius has discovered by which the people may be relieved of all care and responsibility in government.

This infamous bill was passed against the protest of every Democratic member of the Senate and House of Assembly from Hudson county, and in fact from the whole State at large, and was vetoed by a Democratic Governor.

Before the passage of the bill the people of Jersey City, through a government chosen by themselves and responsible to them, had the power of regulating taxation and expenditures.

After its passage they were left with no power whatever, but were ruled by boards of commissioners, boards answerable to no one. Constituencies! they had none, and they recognized no authority except the central power at Trenton, which made it possible for them to be appointed.

A Board of Public Works, with arbitrary power, controlled all public improvements; a Board of Fire Commissioners, with unlimited privileges, managed the conflagrations; a Board of Police Commissioners were given charge of the lives and property of the citizens, together with the most extraordinary and before unheard of powers, that of perpetuating themselves by defining the qualifications of voters. It was worse than an Austrian tyranny. No greater outrage was ever perpetrated upon a free people than that which marks its footsteps from beginning to end, and the end was worse than the beginning.

I have ever been anxious to know who Mr. Dixon's clients were at that time. Were they the taxpayers of the city, bound hand and foot by infamous laws, with no privileges save that of paying their hard-earned money into the public treasury, without in any manner controlling the expenditures, or even the poor privilege of knowing to what extent it was squandered? Or were his clients the irresponsible agents he himself had helped to create?

There is an unwritten law which governs in the hearts and consciences of men in respect of a man's private character or public acts when he seeks public trust or confidence. Now, my friends, I know of no way of judging of the future except by the past, and as I have endeavored to give you a true history of the past—with Judge Dixon in the Governor's chair; with a Republican Legislature in the Capitol, what would become of local self-government in this State with this experience? No people fit to be free will thus, with their own hands, place upon their own necks the yoke of political bondage.

Now, my Republican friend, what do you think of this record? If the picture is black it is because the facts are black.

TARIFF.

I have never seen a political party in so ridiculous a plight as our Republican friends. After nearly twenty years of uninterrupted Democratic administration in this State there is not a Republican orator from their candidate for Governor down who dare face it before the people. The only thing they have had the courage to do was to maliciously attack our candidate, of which I will speak later, and to whisper (softly it is true) that the Democratic party was not sound on the tariff.

My modesty forbids that I should say much on this question, as I have had much to do with the subject in the months just passed, but I again invite you to the record and ask you to give me the name of a single Democratic Senator or member in Congress from this State who has ever failed in his duty to both labor and enterprise. We have ever voted to protect the laborer, because his labor is the only merchandise he has to sell; and as labor was before capital and created capital it was first considered, and not forgetting that capital is the handmaid of labor, and, if wisely employed, its truest and best friend.

Ah, no, my Republican friend, you can't make that an issue with the Democratic party in New Jersey, for the people won't let you. You can't make any such issue with our candidate for Governor, for the memory of his services to the laboring man stands up to confront you. Upon this subject I will say no more at present, as it is my purpose before this campaign ends to give you my views and record upon this question, also the policy and record of our party in this State, which you will have the opportunity of either hearing or reading.

Let us continue the record. The Republican party has repudiated its founders, and proved recreant to every living principle on which it was organized. Why, then, should Republicans longer support it? Like the unworthy son of a noble ancestry do you seek to cover up its corruptions and crimes by the halo which surrounds those from whom its claims de*scend?*

Do you support it because it bore so conspicuous a part in the suppression of the rebellion and the abolition of slavery? Is that great battle for the preservation of our liberties did the Democratic people of New Jersey take no part? Now, what are the facts? In the Presidential election of 1860 we polled in round numbers 121,000 votes, of which Mr. Lincoln, the Republican candidate for President, received 58,000. We furnished nearly 90,000 soldiers for the cause of the Union—(not one against it)—or 32,000 more than the whole Republican vote. Can it be then charged that the Democratic people of New Jersey were either traitors or neutrals? No, my friends, it was patriotic Democrats and patriotic Republicans that rallied to the support of the Union—and which neither could have done without the aid of the other, and substituting the ballot for the bullet we must do it again.

Do you refuse to join us in saving the country from its enemies now, because the Democratic party has in its membership those who were its enemies before?

I have confidence in the intelligence and patriotism of men—and I know that men of intelligence will not give this as a reason. They suffered all that human beings could endure. They have laid down their arms and accepted in good faith the covenant of pardon by the law. They have buried their flag, and their losses, their natural resentments, and even their just expectations, for the sake of peace and the common good. They ask of us no new sacrifice, claim from us no new privileges, but true to the teachings of history again swear allegiance to the Constitution and the laws, and pledge anew their devotion to the unity of these States. They are back into the union to stay, and they are here to help us to bury a party which has become despotic and corrupt, and on its grave to plant the banner of a free, restored, and prosperous union.

THE PUBLIC LANDS.

Under Democratic policy the original area of the United States was increased 170 per cent., and every acre to be reserved for homes for actual settlers; and while the Democrats held power not an acre had been given away.

Since the close of the war the Republicans have given away, mostly to six great corporations, 175,000,000 of acres; and have also endorsed their bonds, which, finally, we shall be obliged to pay. One hundred and forty millions of acres of this vast domain, equal to the area of the original thirteen colonies, was given to six corporations, controlled to-day by three men. This is a terrible charge to make against a great political party, but the most fearful character of the charge is that it is true. Is it any wonder then the rich are becoming richer and the poor poorer? Is it any wonder palaces surpassing even the splendor of Solomon's are rising in our midst. The poor man who struggles for his daily bread and the man of moderate means on the farm in the counting house and factory, the bone and sinew of the land, the producer of wealth—for the wealth of a nation is measured by its labor—stand aghast at palace after palace rises before his vision. He returns to his lowly or humble home far less pretentious and comfortable than the stable that shields the rich man's horses.

He looks in the faces of his wife and children; pinched, perhaps, with cold, and suffering with hunger, with scarcely enough clothing to protect them from the icy blast of Winter. The mother can not attend church, or the children the Sunday-school, or even the common school, for want of suitable clothing.

The education necessary to fit the child for all duties of citizenship is thus denied him. This very system of oppression begets both ignorance and vice, and the child becomes a pauper, or criminal, or perhaps both. The present is, to that man a day of agony, and the future dark and dismal. And this too in a land of plenty, where the franchise is free and liberty absolute. Does this man ever inquire into the cause of his distress, with all that a bountiful providence can bestow? Where can the fault lie except in government. And this man I have been describing, he, too, is armed with the ballot. He goes deliberately to the polls and casts his vote with that party that has impoverished the hovel to give to the palace. He votes away his children's bread to pay the coupons on the railroad bonds which keeps the palace in luxury. He votes to continue in power the party which stole the lands of right belonging to his children, and gave them to the children of the palace. He votes the Republican ticket. He votes even for the man who owns the palace, and, in doing so, votes that poverty and degradation shall surround his own fireside.

He votes for William Walter Phelps; he votes for John Kean, Jr.; he votes for George M. Robeson.

Confronted by these facts can he longer ask why he, and those he holds dear, are condemned to the hovel, while others enjoy the luxury of the palace, a palace they are scarcely permitted to look upon, much less to enter.

A distinguished philosopher once asserted in the hearing of a skeptic that man, and man only, was immortal; and on being pressed for a reason replied, "Because he is the only created thing that thinks, reflects, and reasons; the only being that knows the multiplication table." It is safe to say there were no Republicans in his day.

My Republican friend, have you learned the multiplication table?

REPUBLICAN SLANDER.

There is still another thing of which I gave you notice I would speak and that is the malicious and unwarranted methods of conducting this campaign against our candidate.

Their desperation is all the more apparent from the fact that no man in either political party is more intimately and more favorably known to all the people of the State than is Mr. Abbett, and I know the good people of New Jersey of both parties will not sympathize with any ambition which aspires to reach success by making this a campaign of mud throwing and slander. If there is any quality more prominent than another in the character of our people it is an innate sense of justice, which wild and reckless slander can never unseat. During all these years, some twenty-five in number, that I have lived the neighbor of our candidate and proud to be called his friend, I have never heard a word said of him but in his praise. During all his official career, which has been long and varied, I have never heard a word in criticism of his official action; but the moment he becomes a candidate of the Democratic party the ingenuity of the devil filtered through a lawyer (I will not say a judge) is summoned to invent new modes of attack. He is the candidate of the Democratic party without his solicitation and by no agency, save the free spontaneous will of the party, who, knowing his fitness, desire to make him Governor; and we are met upon the threshold of the campaign with the cry that he is a friend of monopoly, and when this is disproved out of their own mouths and the record stamps it a lie, to-morrow it is followed by another and not less egregious falsehood than the former.

I think the disgust that all thinking men will feel for this sort of political warfare will soon set it at rest.

The inventive genius of the father of all lies would pale in the presence of the talent displayed by his villifiers in this campaign. No man hereafter will dispute their title to rank as commanders in-chief of all defamers by real service in the cause.

It would, indeed, be lamentable of our candidate before aspiring to be Governor must first obtain a certificate of character from the party who stole the Presidency in 1876, and bought it body and breeches in 1880. The Republican party in this campaign is like a gay and painted old jade, all frills and follies, with a hitch in her step, a leer in her eye, shinning up and down the street, throwing smut at decent people; dirty herself she wants others to seem dirty, too.

The Democratic party may be a very bad party, but the Republican party is badness itself. There is as much difference between a bad party and the Republican party as there is between having the smallpox and being the smallpox.

The Republican party is an organized appetite, an embodied hunger; it has fed on power and patronage and fattened on plunder; and will not hesitate to resort to fraud and bribery to keep its hold on the public crib.

Do you doubt the word of President Arthur when he says it was soap that carried Indiana in 1880? If so you can't doubt the word of Dorsey, for he has a certificate of character from the department of justice, which has cost the treasury, first and last, several millions. We are told it was two-dollar bills, 200,000 in number, that did it, and this from a man with a golden reputation.

The Republican party has become anti-Republican—perilously so. Every step towards centralization which it takes requires a step still further. If it acquires power to-day by any means unconstitutional, unfit for government as they may happen to be, to-morrow it must have more power by other, and if necessary, by worse means. What becomes, my countrymen, of your boasted right to participate in the election of a chief magistrate or other officer if no effect is given to your votes when cast? Our institutions have felt the rude shock of parties in their imbittered struggles for power and survived. They have even felt the clash of arms and lived; but when a great political party boasts of fraud as its most trusted attribute, then, indeed, Republican government is in danger. And this great party, boastful of its intelligence and virtue, celebrates the centennial year of our national independence by seating a President by bribery, forgery and perjury. A popular verdict of a quarter of a million majority was defied by adventurous thieves, and the national judgment perverted which called Samuel J. Tilden to the Presidency. Two years after Mr. Hayes had been inaugurated $368,000 had been paid in salaries and payments from the public Treasury to those who had been actors in the scheme of fraud. No wonder they were silent!

Do not your cheeks mantle with shame when you reflect that fifty millions of people, surpassing all other civilizations in intelligence, in all the blessings of prosperous industry, and in all the sources of advancement and happiness, are thus made the plaything of mean ambition, which stops at no means that will best secure the end sought?

My friends, we have a formidable foe to fight. Entrenched behind the ramparts of official power, patronage and plunder, they have bid defiance to the people. But the whirlwind of public indignation, which like the simoom of the desert, withers while it destroys, is already upon them. It has swept over Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and New York. It has reached out and purified Ohio. Its healthful breeze has been felt in our own city of Newark, and it is still in the air.

The band music was the finest ever heard in this city.

Too True!

The following, which is copied from an exchange will come home to newspaper publishers everywhere: "The conscience fund of a city street railway has been swelled by the stealings of a conductor who learned how to fool the bell punch. It seems that about everybody has a twinge of conscience once in a while except the man who gets behind with his subscription to his paper and refuses to take it out of the post-office."

This remarkable cat has captured none less than 26 rabbits within the past 26 consecutive days, and brought them to the front porch of Mr. Jones' residence, each being not yet dead when found. This fact will serve to substantiate the report that rabbits are very plentiful this Fall."

A Burglar Steals Away

Some one attempted to enter the grocery of Weber Bros., of 30 Liberty street recently, but was frightened away. A hole was bored in the back door for the purpose of drawing an inside bar. Music and refreshments to be served every evening.

Not Proven.

Mr. Isaac Melbourn, returning home after midnight of Monday, discovered some young men about his barn. Believing it was their intention to fire the building and having therein six horses besides other property, with but a small insurance, he did not wait to catch them in the act but snatched them then and there. One, whom it was hoped would turn States-evidence, was taken before a Justice but discharged for want of testimony.

Music and Elocution at Westfield.

During Tuesday evening next, the 23rd inst., there will be given at Lyceum Hall, Westfield, an entertainment by Miss Anna D. Cooper, of that place, assisted by Miss Belle Boves, formerly a teacher of Elocution in the Plainfield High School. These two ladies will give a series of readings, and Frau Livia Schuckher, of Vienna and Miss Gertrude Klein, of Trenton, N. J., will contribute the musical part of the entertainment. All are possessed of considerable talent, and the affair promises to be unusually pleasing.

Tried to Jump on a Train.

Charles Elston, a young man who lives at Scotch Plains, N. J., while tramping about the country attempted to board a moving coal train at Pt. Morris on Wednesday evening, the 10th ult. But as is often the case he slipped and fell and just the edge of his foot went under the wheel which amputated his big toe. He was brought to Dover the next morning, where Dr. Cummins dressed the crushed member, after which he was taken to the Paterson Hospital for further treatment.—Iron Era.

The Incendiaries Celebrate The Day.

The burning of a brick stable, belonging to Mr. Job Male on Ninth street, was an appropriate but lamentable celebration that closed the day of the Firemen's Parade. The building had been recently erected by the owner of the property, for the use of William L. Patton, Esq., the occupant of the handsome residence it adjoined. Mr. Male's loss was about $600, it being the only portion of his large property that was uninsured. It was just finished and not yet in use, so the fire was undoubtedly of incendiary origin.

The Park Avenue Church Course.

Encouraged by the success of many past entertainments given under their auspices, the gentlemen of the Park ave. Baptist church have this season arranged for a course of five very pleasing affairs, varied and meritorious. The first number will be a diversified concert and character delineation, to occur Thursday, Nov. 1st. This is to be followed by a lecture by the Rev. Robert Lowry, D. D., on Dec. 13th, and a Sterlopticon exhibition on Jan. 10th. A lecture or concert is to be arranged for Feb. 7th, and the course is closed by Burdette the elocutionist and the Brunswick male quartette, March 6th. Course tickets with reserved seats, one dollar—single entertainments, 25 cents.

In New Hands.

After a successful Summer season under the management of its proprietor, the Park House has passed into new hands, having been leased by Mr. C. L. Johnson, who until last week was the manager of the Hotel Netherwood and to whose efficiency much of the unprecedented success of the latter during the past season is due. The new proprietor is a gentleman of the widest experience in every branch of hotel keeping and every department of a well-regulated house. Already many alterations that have long been needed are being inaugurated. The gentleman argives a reading room opening upon the front piazza, and a billiard room for the use of the guests is to be furnished with the latest conveniences for that game. Although not yet fairly started, Mr. Johnson intends giving to-morrow evening a complimentary hop that is to follow readings by Mr. James Burdette. To his many friends and the public is extended a cordial invitation to be present.

At the Crescent Avenue Church.

Until further notice services will be held at the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church as follows: Sunday, 10:30 a. m., 2:30 p. m., (Sunday School) and 7:45 p. m.; Wednesday's prayer meeting, 8 p. m.; Friday's Young People's meeting, 8 p. m. The Rev. W. W. Moffett who supplied the pulpit last Sunday morning and evening, was a talented speaker and an efficient pastor. The Third street M. E. church, Camden, N. J., of which he is pastor, is one of the largest in the New Jersey Conference, having a membership of nearly 1,000. By the law of the Methodist church his pastorate must terminate next March. In the two and one-half years of his ministry a good work has been accomplished in the addition of about 300 to the membership, liquidation of a debt and increase of contributions for benevolent work and the current expenses of the church.

The Rev. A. H. Lewis will occupy the pulpit next Sunday.

An Entertaining Anniversary.

The anniversary of the Plainfield Relief Association, held in the Trinity Reformed church during Tuesday evening, was quite largely attended. A series of reports of the Association's work and its effect, were read showing commendable results. Ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph delivered a laudatory discourse upon philanthropy in general and the charity in particular of the members of the Association—during which he drifted into frequent and poetic eulogy of generosity, and wrestled with such antagonistic subjects as license for revenue and woman's suffrage. The prominent feature of the evening was the music, prominent of which was a base solo from the "Stabat Mater," very thoroughly rendered by Mr. Bethuel Barnes of Jersey City, but a selection not calculated to generally gratify its hearers. Also enjoyable was Miss Abel's singing of Adams' "O Holy Night" in spite of its inappropriateness. The Rev. A. V. V. Raymond also addressed the gathering, and the Rev. Mr. Tuttle dismissed it with a benediction.

The Y. M. C. A. Course.

The Course of Entertainments presented for the gratification of our public by the Y. M. C. A., Lecture Committee, this year, probably surpasses in general excellence many of the past. In saying this we detract in nowise from the merits of other courses, but merely heighten our approval in the present instance. A reference to the entertainments selected, and published elsewhere, show a variety of features calculated to please everybody and at the same time uphold the high standard adopted by the managers of the course. The first number is a concert to be given by the Dudley Buck quartette of male voices, a new soprano, and the Eichberg String Quartette composed of young lady performers who are strangers to many Plainfielders, but (we can assure the latter) talented players. This is followed by a Shakespearean Recital—an entertainment unfortunately almost unknown in this city. Then come four varied lectures and the course closes with a concert in which the favorites Miss Howe, Carlos Hasselbrink and others take part. The sale of seats begins next Monday at 7 a. m., at Reynolds' pharmacy.

Hymeneal.

The First Baptist church, during Thursday morning of last week, was crowded to its utmost capacity upon the occasion of the marriage of Miss Alice Yerkes, daughter of the pastor, and Walter M. McGee. The groom entered with the bride's brother and the bride with her father. Mr. David Lyon presided at the organ and rendered most effectively the soft accompaniment of the service. The ushers were Messrs. Ev. Burr, Anton Hodenpyl, Chas. S. Onderdonk and Elias W. Runyon. Mr. and Mrs. Mc Gee intend taking up their residence in Brooklyn during the future.

At the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley of Rockview ave., was married, Tuesday evening, Mary Webster and Lieut. Jas. L. Lusk, U. S. A. The occasion was a very elegant and select affair. Among the guests were a number of West Point graduates—college-mates of the groom's. The bride wore an intensely becoming costume of white satin and brocaded velvet. The Rev. Dr. Wayland Hoyt, of Philadelphia, performed the ceremony under a bower of smilax. The bride and groom each gave the other a ring. Among the guests present from this city were Mr and Mrs. S. A. Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Mathews, Miss Mathews, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan S. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCutcheon, Mr. and Mrs. St. John McCutcheon, and Mr. and Mrs. Du Pee. The bridal presents were numerous, and included a grand piano, diamond jewelry and a solid silver service.

Somerset County Democratic Convention.

The Convention was called to order at Somerville, Thursday of last week, by Mr. Chas. Mathews, Chairman of the Convention of 1882, on motion was re-elected to same position for ensuing year, with Mr. Geo. Pace acting as Secretary. The roll being called all the townships were fully represented, without any contesting delegation. On motion of J. Vetterlein, the rules and platform of the Democratic State Convention held at Trenton were adopted. The nomination of the Hon. Leon Abbett as the Democratic standard bearer for Governor was heartily endorsed. The Chairman called for nominations for Sheriff by townships—Bedminster, naming W. A. McMurtry, and Bridgewater, Wm. Ross, Jr. There being no other nominees, the Chair then called for nominations for members of Assembly, by townships as before; Hillsboro naming Jno. J. Brokaw, and North Plainfield, Jno. Vetterlein. There being no further nominations, a motion to adjourn for fifteen minutes was made and carried. After the reassembling of the Convention and being called to order, the Bridgewater delegation withdrew the name of Wm. Ross, Jr., as also did the Hillsboro delegation the name of Jno. J. Brokaw. The Chair then asked if their were any further nominations, and there appearing none, it was moved and seconded that Mr. Wm. A. McMurtry be elected by acclamation. A similar motion prevailing as to the nominee for member of Assembly (Mr. Vetterlein) they were declared nominated as the candidates for the respective offices, they being present, and after suitable remarks from each the Convention adjourned in harmony, pledging fidelity and success.

Justly Commanding Support.

The Plainfield Vocal Society, which has already appealed to the public with such satisfactory result for the means to accomplish its reorganization, training, rehearsing, and the repetition of its successful concerts of the past, is now urged by music-lovers in this city to extend its scope and add orchestral accompaniment to the entertainments it has in view. The $1,000 necessary to carry out the original intention of giving three purely vocal concerts has been secured, and if further effort in the direction of procuring subscriptions to the amount of about $300 more is as successful, the engaging of an orchestra in addition will be accomplished. We would again call the attention of our best citizens to the fact that the concerts of this Society during past seasons, have been absolutely the most faultless of musical events. Consequently it deserves to command any financial support it is in need of.

The Fireman's Parade.

The weather and the many lady friends of this city's gallant firemen smiled on them, Thursday afternoon of last week, upon the occasion of the parade of the Plainfield Fire Department. The streets of the city during the entire day presented unusual scenes of life and gayety. Crowds of gaily decked strangers and the stranger sights of gaily decked residences, gave a holiday appearance everywhere and to everything. Business was practically suspended, and the only aim in view of the populace was to secure the best position from which to gaze admiringly upon the long line that wound itself through eight miles of our city's streets.

Private residences and buildings along the line of march were beautifully and befittingly decorated and the words "Welcome Somerville and visiting firemen" met the eye in numberless places. Prominent of many decorations was that swung across Somerset street from the shops of Chief Engineer Carney—its originality and general appropriateness, was greatly admired. Mr. Chas. Smith's saloon at the corner of Front and Somerset streets, was also handsomely dressed, and at night lighted up with many colored lanterns. At the residence of Engineer Frank Schucks on West Front St., a realistic scene was portrayed. His little son stood on the roof holding a nozzle of a hose in his hands from which a stream of water played. On a ladder beneath him, a little girl reached up with an axe in her hands. The residences of the members of the Board of Managers of the Fire Department, company officers, officials of the city, and private citizens were becomingly dressed in stars and stripes, and words of welcome.

Owing to the delay in the arrival of many visitors, the line that was formed on Front street to start at 1:30 did not move until after 3 o'clock. Alert Hose Co. wheeled its apparatus into position while the carriages containing the Fire Board passed down the line and inspected the Department. This company then returned to its house, taking no part in the procession and festivities that followed, and in which during former years it had been the most active participant. The line headed by Captain W. S. Chase and a corps of awe inspiring policemen, then started upon the needlessly long march laid out as published in our issue of the 5th inst. Following the ferocious guardians of our peace, came the carriages containing the Mayor and Common Council—the latter, especially the Alderman from Netherwood, being the cynosure of all the gentler sex. The Board of Managers followed, around whose caps glistened new bands of gold, and behind their carriages stepped proudly along in full uniform Chief Carney and his assistants Wright and Stockton. Somerville contributed its fire-police corps—a band of sturdy officers selected from its fire companies, and an organization that this city should also possess. From Elizabeth came Chief J. L. D. Lyon, Chief Breansham, Foreman N. G. Smith of Rolls, ex-Foreman W. B. Sayre of Lafayette and many others. Ex-Chief John Decker of the N. Y. Fire Department, Fire Commissioner Charles Honeyman of Somerville, Chief Milton Ross and two assistants of New Brunswick, Chief Abbott and his assistants of Somerville and ex-Chief T. O. Doane of the Plainfield Fire Department. Last but not least was Representative Thos. H. Peto of the Fire Association of Philadelphia, in all the glory of an $1,800 uniform which included a solid-silver trumpet and hat front, and a gold badge costing $500.

Somerville No. 1, followed—one of the best looking and most tastefully uniformed lot of men in line. Their handsome steamer glistened in the sunlight and cheers of admiration greeted them everywhere. Winkler's Band of Trenton led their march with the best music of the day. Gazelle Eng. Co. No. 1, whose guests the Somerville boys were, followed with a full turn out. The steamer, which has been "on duty" continually, looked particularly fine, and was fairly loaded with flowers. In the fire box stood the smallest fireman in the line—the little son of Secretary Gable, in full uniform. No. 2 Eng. Co., headed by the Milltown Cornet Band, followed with a full company and a steamer fresh from the repair shops and as brilliant as polished metal could be. The Goodwill Band of New Brunswick, leading Zephyr Hook & Ladder Co., came next—one of the most creditable displays of the line—followed by Warren Eng. Co. No. 3, with its far-throwing Steamer and a fine showing of members. The Hose Companies and their carriages followed their respective steamers. Gazelle's boys made a fine appearance in brand new uniforms, and their carriage as well as No. 2's was handsomely decorated. On the latter sat the beautiful little daughter of Mr. Joseph Blatz of North Plainfield. Warren's carriage looked in its new painting of dark chocolate and gold, especially rich.

Darkness had settled over the city when the naturally tired and justly hungry band of firemen and their friends were dismissed at the place of starting. Supper was next on the programme and eatables in abundance were set forth at various places by the different companies. In the dining room and parlor of the City Hotel, the Gazelle's had spread tables with all the delicacies of the season, of which almost 200 partook. In the Hall of the Democratic Association No. 2's boys fed nearly 300, while at the houses of Zephyr H. & L. Co., and Warren Engine, bountiful repasts were enjoyed by scores. Speeches by visiting firemen, members of the Board of Managers, officers and others, added to the enjoyment of the banquets. It was long after midnight before the festivities of the successful occasion ceased. The day will be long remembered.

Rallying For Abbett.

VanDeventer Hall, last Saturday evening, in spite of the storm and heat, was filled with one of the largest and most enthusiastic audiences ever gathered together in this city upon the occasion of a political meeting—and that audience listened to an orator with hardly an equal, who delivered a speech that was emphatically convincing and unanswerable.

The stage was appropriately draped with the stars and stripes of the Union, while "Ohio" and "Newark" in mammoth letters each side of the proscenium, recalled the recent defeats of the grand-old-party. At eight o'clock not a seat was vacant except a few chairs in front reserved for Drake's Boy Band of Elizabeth, that had been perpetrating about the worst music (?) Plainfield was ever agonized with.

After dinner at Laing's Hotel the new Governor was driven to the Hall, and Mr. James E. Martine, as President of the Democratic Association of Plainfield, stepped to the front of the stage and called the meeting to order. By a unanimous vote of the 600 present, the Hon. Joseph W. Yates was chosen chairman and other officers, as follows, selected: Vice Presidents—Messrs John Simpson, George Lesignolo and W. R. Clarkson of the First Ward; Gilford Mayer; Theo. Newell and Earnest L. Walz of the Second Ward; Mayor Wm. B. Maxson, James Clark and Geo. W. Rockfellow of the Third Ward; Hon. Nathan Harper, J. Oscar Stevens and W. L. Force of the Fourth Ward. Secretaries—Messrs V. L. Frazee, L. M. Stover, H. M. Gilligan and J. A. Demarest. President Livingston of the Common Council also occupied a seat on the stage beneath the decorations of Mr. R. Hapenny, while Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh sat with the "unterrified" and hoped that after he had served during the coming term in the Legislature of the State, he could claim one-tenth so glorious a record as his colleague of the legal profession who addressed him.

Chairman Yates delivered a brief speech appropriate and pointed, and touched lightly but effectively upon the enviable past of the candidate of the Democratic party for Governor of New Jersey. He then introduced the Hon. Leon Abbett to the gathering.

A portly gentleman with his hair just tinged with gray, stepped to the front of the platform. His face and the shape of his beard rather resembled that of Gen'l Grant without the latter's flushed skin and generally bloated look. But there the resemblance ceased—one look into the deep true eyes of Leon Abbett, and the play of one smile across his countenance, convinces the observer at once of his integrity, purity and trustworthiness. Cheer upon cheer rang through the Hall, blended with the music of the Band. "I nominated you in Hoboken the first time you ran for Assembly," said a voice in the applauding crowd. "I am glad to welcome my old friends everywhere" replied Mr. Abbett, and in the same pleasant voice continued for over an hour to hold the complete attention and interest of everyone present.

"For a quarter of a century I have been battling for the principles of Democracy," he began, "fighting for those principles because I knew they alone were right. I have stood by them not only in success but during years of defeat—believing that the principles of Jackson and Jefferson are living principles that shall never die. (Applause.) Therefore have not I and you all, great cause to rejoice that the returning sense of the people is bringing back into power the grand old Democratic party. Why is it that Pennsylvania, a Republican State, has a Democratic Governor and that even Massachusetts is obliged to be ruled by Ben Butler? (Laughter and applause) Why is it that New York has a Democratic Governor elected by a majority of over 200,000? And why is it that Ohio's Republican majority of 100,000 in 1863 has now been buried under a Democratic majority of 9,000; and that a party which once had a majority of the popular vote amounting to one quarter of a million, is now in the minority? It is because the people will only support a party that is pure and honest; and the Republican party throughout the land has been tried by hundreds, and by thousands, and by millions of its own party who have left it because it no longer upheld a pure an honest Government. The Republican party of to-day represents only a party of office-holders and a party of everything venal in the land. From such verdict there is no appeal, because it is the verdict of the honest thousands that have left the party because of its corruptness. My friends, it is a bad day to join the Republican party. (Laughter and applause)

"Not alone in other States is this change apparent. In the city of Newark a few days ago, a Democratic majority of 700 was piled up—a change of 3,000 in three years—all of which shows we are on the side of the heaviest artillery this time. One year hence the thunder will come echoing from New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey (ap plause) and throughout the land—that the party of Jefferson shall once more administer the government as our grand-fathers did. But let the victory that is assured be so overwhelming, that not even a ghost will be left to stalk in the garb of the Republican party amid its ashes.

"Let us in this State carry also the Senate and House that the Democratic party may be responsible for the entire government. The reforms that have been inaugurated by the Governors you have been blessed with in the past, I pledge myself to carry out. I believe in a bold and aggressive Democracy. I have never received anything but abuse from the Republican party, and I don't want anything. They have accused me of everything except one, and that is that I am a Democrat that will strike for my party whenever I can. During nearly twenty years the Democratic party has had its representative in the Executive's chair in this State, and you have had an economical government. When Gov. Ludlow leaves he leaves without a single dollar of State tax on the people, and it is because a Democratic Governor has held the Legislature to strict economy and by his veto kept them from extravagance. Should I be elected, I pledge you that during my administration there shall never a dollar of the State tax be imposed upon you if my veto can prevent it. (Applause).

"Allow me to say this. The Republican press and the few speakers (laughter) that have spoken on the other side, have said you cannot say anything against our candidate. He has been endorsed by two Governors by nominating him as Justice of the Supreme Court, and they spread that abroad among the people as an endorsement. Why was he appointed? What was the reason that made a Democrat Governor so generous as to seek among his political opponents for a Justice to go upon the bench of the Supreme Court? There were men in the Democratic party sufficiently able as well as sufficiently cultured, and as great lawyers ready to accept the duty of that position. Why did those Democratic Governors exhibit this generosity? It was because they desired to keep the Supreme Court bench non-partisan—because they desired that that bench should not have upon it any taint of political prejudice. They wanted it so pure and clear that no man might stand before it believing that any political consideration ever ventured into the mind of any Justice that sat upon it. And how has the generosity of the Democratic Governors that have appointed Republican Justices of the Supreme Court because they wanted a non-partisan bench, been rewarded? It has been rewarded by taking from that bench one of those men to fight the Democratic party in this canvass. The fact that a Judge appointed as a non-partisan Justice by a Democratic Governor, accepts a party's nomination, is a crime. Outside of Judge Dixon's legal ability which is great, and his character of which I say nothing but praise, is the fact that he was put upon the bench because he was a Republican by Democrats who desired that justice should be administered without partisanship. In order to bolster a weak cause the Republican party has entered the Halls of Justice for a candidate, and he accepts in spite of his promise to be non-partisan so long as he held such seat.

"It seems as though the Republican party did not think it proper that a candidate for office should appear and speak before the people. That may be good Republicanism, but according to my idea it is not old fashioned Democracy. Is there a man in the country that having read, no matter how carefully, the letter of acceptance of the candidate on the other side, can tell what he believes in? Is it he states only his belief in holding on to his office—which is worldly wisdom but not justness and fairness."

The speaker then explained the effect of the "Bumstead Charter"—stating that it had been said, and never denied, that the charter had been drawn up by the pen of a certain justice of the Supreme Court—"your opponent" said a voice in the hall, and the speaker smiled consciously. In four years a bonded debt of $6,363,277 08 and a floating debt of $693,216, had been put upon the people of Jersey City by this charter, which the Hon. Leon Abbett after four years effort succeeded in having repealed. Regarding the question of taxation, the speaker said: "I believe in equal taxation for all—corporations as well as individuals. I know not where my opponent stands in this matter nor does anyone else. His lips are sealed, but I know where I stand and have always stood." He then read extracts from Republican papers giving his record from 1875 on this question as well as the question of labor. "My record as the protector of the rights of workingmen goes back fourteen years, while he on the other side has no record at all and won't say where he stands today. What he thinks I don't know. He's never had a record and ["he'll never have a chance", said the voice again] he'll never have a chance. It would be impossible as it is unnecessary for me to reply to all the charges laid at my door by the Republican press except in one way. When they charge me with being false to any trust or the people, they lie. (Loud and continued applause). In my letter I state plainly where I stand on every question of interest to the man and the tax payer.

"Let me appeal to you all to join at once the party that is marching with fixed bayonets upon the federal office-holders everywhere. Let us give the voice of little New Jersey next month to and to those which have already spoken, and one year from now we will start on the march to the White House, and see the dawn of the triumph of the principles of our party. We want to get at the history of the past as it is written in the books locked up by the Republican party—the party that could never buy New Jersey. (Cheers and crys of "Soap, wouldn't do it") It may be soap they used in such quantities but it can't wash away their sins. Let their be but one voice in the government of the people, and that the voice of the party of the people. The Grand old Democratic party." (Continued applause)

For some unknown reason, Congressman McAdoo and the Hon. Chas. Winfield, who were also to address the meeting, had not arrived, and Mr. James E. Martine filled their places with one of his old-fashioned stirring speeches. At the close of this, Governor Abbett was escorted to the parlors of Laing's Hotel by the band, and therein held a reception. Crowds gathered to shake his hand, among them many of the colored population who by word of mouth promised the candidate their vote and support. So much enthusiasm over a Democratic campaign in this Republican city, has not been experienced in years. Reporters from the New York papers present, stated it was but a repetition of the feeling all over the State in favor of Mr. Abbett. They stated the Republi*can party were holding no meetings any*where and had entirely surrendered hope of success. Many of the prominent and unbiased members of that party, conceded the election of the Democratic candidate by 10,000 majority.

SNOBS.

Formerly fashionable snobs in this country drew upon France as the proper fount of imitation.

Now, probably because France has become Republican and England remains Kingy, American snobs appear disgustingly zealous to model themselves after everything aristocratically English.

They part their hair in the middle, wear skin tight pants, peculiar cut coats, sharp pointed shoes, sport a single eye-glass, flourish silver headed canes, walk with arms akimbo and royal nose upturned, and in various other ways make themselves look like escaped monkeys and as little as possible like sensible human beings.

"Tis Hinglish, you know."

Some import jolting vehicles, bearing a striking resemblance to the dirt carts used for street cleaning purposes in New York, and take delight in bobbing up and down in them until rits are sore.

"Tis Hinglish, you know."

When a snob gets married, the affair must be conducted strictly in accordance with the English style, wedding breakfast, liveried servants, &c.

"Tis Hinglish, you know."

And so on, through all the details of living, these useless snobs, unfortunately born in America, seem bent on being practical John Bulls.

Why don't they emigrate?

Their absence would be both national and social gain.

America wants principles, manners and aspirations purely and positively American. Her soil was never wrested from England for the purpose of raising a crop of aristocratic fools.

Their natural abode is across the Atlantic.

There let them all go—sooner the better.

Elmer Wood, of New Providence, broke his arm the other day in trying to throw a base ball.

It is said that Chester, Morris Co., has lost nearly five hundred residents during the last three months, owing to the dullness in iron mining and manufacturing.

At Barnegat, a rare specimen of the bottle-nose whale has been washed ashore. Prof. True and Mr. Palmer, of the Smithsonian Institution, are taking a plaster cast of the carcass and gathering the bones.

The other day as the scholars of the Hackettstown public school were playing "crack the whip," at recess, a little girl about eight years of age, named Carrie Miller, was thrown so forcibly upon the ground as to break her right arm.

An old cannon ball, weighing 3½ pounds, was picked up by a farmer living near Colt's Neck, on his farm a few days ago. It is supposed to have been on the ground since the battle of Monmouth or General Clinton's retreat across the country to Sandy Hook.

The killing of four persons by a collision between a Philadelphia street car and a railway train going at full speed will direct the attention of the people of that city—and all cities—to the constant danger in allowing railroads to pass through their streets on the street level.

The State Republican papers show numerous evidences of a desperate struggle, and among other things have even commenced to wave the bloody shirt, charging that when a resolution was offered in the Legislature, in 1865, thanking the commanding officers of the army, at the close of the war, Mr. Abbett moved to strike from the resolution the name of President Lincoln. Mr. Abbett with his usual penetration, said that it was inconsistent to include Mr. Lincoln among those who were in the field. Not being satisfied with merely alluding to the subject, they add, as if by parenthesis, and to work upon the passions of the ignorant and bigoted that "it may be well to remind our readers in this connection that ten days after this action in the Legislature Mr. Lincoln was assassinated." Why "remind our readers in that connection?" Mr. Abbett had nothing to do with the act of the assassin. What putrefaction must underlie the heart that can appeal to the bigoted and unthinking in this way!—Rahway Democrat.

It is interesting to go back to the year 1874 and ascertain what the Republicans then thought of a Judge of the Supreme Court having "his ermine stained by the dirt of a political campaign." A leading Republican paper in New York, issued Sept. 2 of that year, said:

"There is a strange spectacle in New Jersey. A Judge in administering justice on the Bench of the Supreme Court, while his name is flaunted in every Democratic sheet in the State as a candidate for Governor. The masses are called on to enter into a political canvass for the man who, in the meantime, holds the issues of their life and property in his hands, and is expected to render decisions unbiased by fear or favor. It may be that Judge Bedle will be able to pass through this ordeal with unspotted fame. But it will not be edifying to see his ermine stained with the dirt of a political campaign. This, however, cannot be avoided if he holds to his declared determination not to resign from the Bench until he has secured an election. When a Supreme Court Judge is trying causes and drawing his salary at the same time that he is a leader in a political campaign, people will inevitably attribute to him more avarice than honor."—New York Commercial Advertiser, Rep., Sept 2.

Chisholm Wants a New Trial

NEWARK, Oct. 9.—The counsel for Chisholm, who was convicted in Newark Saturday of murdering his wife, will move for a new trial on the ground that one of the jurymen voted for conviction through a misunderstanding.

Granted Licenses.

The Union County court has granted licenses to the following: To keep tavern, to Albert W. Moffett, Clark township; Mary T. Agnes, Springfield; Louis Ness, Linden; Frank H Lemmerding, Cranford; Frank Bindle, Linden. To sell beer, John J. & George M. Wohl, Westfield, and Augustus Klein, Union.

A Pertinent Question.

In Scotland they have narrow, open ditches which they call sheep-drains. A man was riding a donkey one day across a sheep pasture, but when the animal came to the sheep-drain he would not go over it. So the man rode him back to a short distance, turned him around and applied the whip, thinking, of course, that the donkey, when going at the top of his speed, would jump the drain before he knew it. But not so. When the donkey got to the drain he stopped all of a sudden, and the man went over Mr. Neddy's head. No sooner had he touched the ground than he got up, and, looking his beast straight in the face, said: "Vera weel ditched; but then hoo are ye going to get over yersel?"

A Singular Discovery.

Last week, while workmen were getting out marl on the farm of Samuel Read, Mt. Hermon, Warren County, they unearthed the skeleton of a moose. The bones all laid together, and nearly all have been found, with a reasonable certainty of recovering the few that are lacking. The most remarkable feature of the animal was its magnificent horns, which as we saw them after they were fastened to the skull, measured six feet from tip to tip and weighed forty-five pounds. The skeleton was evidently that of an old fellow, probably twelve or fourteen years, judging from the magnificent antlers, the pieces of which have been wired together and set up in Mr. Read's yard, where they are daily viewed by scores of people. The beast was likely sixteen or eighteen hands high in life, and must have weighed at least two thousand pounds. It was found seven feet beneath the surface, and probably has laid there for centuries.—Jerseyman.

How To Cure Egg Eating.

Sometimes the habit is formed by the carelessness of the kitchen maid, or house-keeper, in throwing the egg-shells into the pail and giving them with the other waste to the hens. This should never be done if you want the hens to respect their own eggs. Understanding the cause of this thrifty habit, it is not very difficult to provide a remedy. From a recent experience, we found that the habit is very much broken by an abundant supply of crushed shells. It had grown so bad in a flock of twenty light Brahmas, owing to neglect of this ration, that they devoured every egg, without the closest watching, at the cackle of every laying hen. Given the shells every morning, the craving ceased, and we found the eggs remaining in the nests undisturbed. As an assistant to this remedy, we manufactured an egg-trap from a common nest-box. This is so simple that any one accustomed to the use of tools can make it in an hour or two. A slight inclination of the board upon which the nest egg is fastened will cause the new laid egg to roll away from under the hen, beyond her reach, as soon as it is dropped. The rear board has the same inclination toward the centre, and projects over the other board far enough to protect the egg when it has rolled away. The space between the boards is just wide enough to give free passage to the eggs. The egg-box may be lined with a handful of sawdust or chaff to protect the shells from breaking. If the back board be furnished with hinges, it can be used as a lid, to allow of the removal of the eggs. It is a complete egg-trap, and with the oyster shells, in our case, abated the nuisance of egg eating. Many think that when a hen has contracted the habit of egg eating, the shortest way is the best, and instead of eating she is put in a condition to be eaten. But a good layer is too valuable *to be given up without an effort to re*form her bad habit, often acquired through the negligence of the owner. The egg-trap works admirably, and secures the end desired by placing it out of the power of the hen to do mischief.—American Agriculturalist.

Now for comets, "shooting-stars" and Northern lights.

Go early and secure a good seat at Van Deventer Hall, next Saturday evening.

THE new comet is described as increasing in brilliancy at a remarkable and unprecedented rate. It will soon be visible to the naked eye, and may even now be seen through an opera glass.

A country young lady wishes to know what is a fancy dress ball costume for a girl with very auburn—in fact, red—hair. Wear a green dress and put seeds in your hair, and go as a watermelon.

A minister who had passed around the hat unsuccessfully at a country church, said: "My good people, hog cholera has broken out in all this neighborhood, and I advise you all to leave the country."

"Is there anything wrong in kissing?" he asked her as they stood together at the garden gate. "Certainly there is," she briskly replied; then slowly and softly added, after a pause, "if there's any one looking."

"Dear me!" cried Mrs. Blossom, as she laid down the paper, "it does seem to me as if those state militia fellows are always in trouble. Here's an account of a recent inspection where the company turned out fifty-three men. Too bad, ain't it?"

"Paddy," said an American tourist to the driver of a jaunting car in which they were rolling over a road in southern Ireland, "why is it that the crows in this country are so tame?" "Sure, your honor," answered Pat, "thim's the crows as do know right well that Oirishmen be not allowed to carry guns."

In Georgia farm bells of a large size are used in the country neighborhoods as alarms in case of raids by tramps. If anything like a dinner bell can scare him, the Georgia tramp is a very different animal from his Northern cousin. An Iowa tramp can hear a dinner bell fifteen miles, and get there before the soup is cold.

WE find in the New York World the statement that, as a result of walking up and down hill all their lives, all the men, women and children in Newburgh are bow legged. An astonishing statement and possibly true. But the question naturally arises how did the World obtain information that justified it in including the ladies of Newburgh among the victims of too much hill-climbing.

A VERY peculiar arrangement is being put on the tracks by the P. & R. Co., near Bound Brook, at the point where that road crosses the Lehigh Valley road. When a train strikes a point 2,780 feet from the crossing of the two roads an electric bell is set in motion, and if an engineer persists in running, notwithstanding a danger signal is displayed, the crossing tender can use an automatic arrangement by which the train may be run on a siding that leads into a field and be ditched.

REMEMBER it is unlawful to shoot quail until next month, when the season opens.

THE more a woman knows the less she talks about her neighbors. Culture kills gab.

Now that cooler weather has come, the congregations at the several churches are growing larger.

THE catch of black bass in the Raritan has been quite small thus far this season as compared with other years.

IT is a common remark among Democrats that "Leon Abbett talks and fights like a true disciple of Andrew Jackson," and they are all going to vote for him.

SOCIETY of all kinds, high and low, rich and poor, is quietly settling down to a winter basis. Stoves are being resuscitated, ulsters unpacked, and flannels examined for moth holes.

IT has been settled by the courts that railroad tickets "good for this day only," for which the regular price has been paid, are good until used. But a limited or excursion ticket must be used subject to the expressed condition.

AN exchange says, at a teachers' institute recently held a distinguished professor promulgated the doctrine that when addressing a school, the teacher should always stand upright with his finger on the seam of his pants. But some teachers do not wear pants.

WHAT would society do if a man should enter a ball room with his arms bare to the shoulder and his shirt open from where his suspenders cross on his back to the third button on his vest in front? Will some woman's rights society lady please answer and oblige?

As the election approaches, the sheriffs of New Jersey are issuing their proclamations against bribery. The Republicans will want watching this year in particular. We do not know that they will engage more generally in their rascally work of buying and selling votes than they did in the late Presidential election, but no doubt they will fully equal it.

SIXPENNY, tenpenny, and "such" other terms as applied to nails, have reference to weight and not to price. Nails are made a certain number of pounds to the thousand. A tenpenny nail is a thousand nails to ten pounds, a sixpenny nail is a thousand nails to six pounds, etc. The Englishman abbreviates pounds into "pun"—tenpun, and hence tenpenny.

MANY a child goes astray simply because home lacks sunshine. A child needs smiles as much as the flowers need sunbeams. If a thing pleases they are apt to seek it; if it displeases, they are apt to avoid it. If home is a place where faces are sour, and words harsh, and fault finding is ever in the ascendant, they will spend as many hours as possible elsewhere.

PEOPLE who may presently feel disposed to marvel at the strange tastes of their tea, may attribute it to the fact that the fragrantly adulterated article is being rigorously kept out of the country under the new law against the importation of adulterated tea. The tea inspector at New York declares that not a pound of the spurious or fixed-up article can now get through there.

POETRY.

ALONE BY THE HEARTH.

Here, in my snug little fire-lit chamber,
Sit I alone;
And, as I gaze in the coals, I remember
Days long agone.

Saddening it is, when the night has descended,
Thus to sit here,
Pensively musing on episodes ended
Many a year.

Still in my visions a golden-haired glory
Floats to and fro;
She whom I loved—but 'tis just the old story,
Dead, long ago!

'Tis but the wraith of a love; yet I linger
(Thus passion errs),
Foolishly kissing the ring on my finger—
Once it was hers.

Nothing has changed since her spirit departed,
Here, in this room,
Save I, who, weary and half broken-hearted,
Sit in the gloom.

Loud, 'gainst the window, the winter rain dashes
Dreary and cold;
Over the floor the red firelight flashes
Just as of old.

Just as of old—but the embers are scattered,
Whose ruddy blaze
Flashed o'er the floor where fairy feet pattered
In other days!

Then, her voice like a silver-chime ringing,
Melted away;
Often these walls have re-echoed her singing
Now hushed for aye!

Why should love bring naught but sorrow, I wonder?
Everything dies!
Time and death, sooner or later, must sunder
Holiest ties.

Years have rolled by; I am wiser and older,—
Wiser, but yet,
Not till my heart and its feeling grow colder,
Can I forget.

So, in my snug little fire-lit chamber,
Sit I alone;
And, as I gaze in the coals, I remember
Days long agone!

GENERAL WASHINGTON'S HEADQUARTERS AT NEWBURGH.

By E. Hamilton Lee.

The old Hasbrook house, as it is called, situated on the west bank of the Hudson, a little south of the city of Newburgh, is one of the most interesting relics of the first and heroic age of our republic, for at several periods of the war of the revolution, and especially from the autumn of 1782 until the troops were finally disbanded, it was occupied by General Washington as the headquarters of the American army. The views from the house and grounds, as well as the whole neighborhood around it, are rich alike in natural beauty and in historical remembrances. You look from the old house upon the broad bay into which the Hudson expands itself just before entering the deep rocky bed through which it flows towards the ocean, between the lofty mountain banks of the Highlands. On the opposite shore is seen the ridge of mountains, upon the bold rocky summits of which, during the war of 1776, the beacon-fires so often blazed to alarm the country at the incursions of the enemy from the south, or else to communicate the signals between the frontier posts in Westchester, along the line of the American positions at Verplanck's Point, West Point, and the barracks and encampments on the plain of Fishkill. As these mountains recede eastward from the river, you see the romantic stream of Mattewan winding wildly along their base, through glens and over falls, until, at last, as if fatigued with its wanton gambols, it mingles quietly and placidly with the Hudson. On this side of it are stretched the rich plains of Dutchess county, with their woody and picturesque shores. All along these plains and shores are to be found other memorials of the revolution; for there were the store-houses, barracks and hospitals of our army, and there for many months were the headquarters of the father of American tactics, the disciplinarian, General Steuben. To the south you look down upon the opening of the Highlands and the rock of Pollopell's Island, once a military prison, and thence follow, with your eye, the Great River of the mountains, as named by the Indians to the discoverer, Henry Hudson, till it suddenly turns and disappears around the rocky promontory of West Point.

The Hasbrook house itself, is a solid, irregular building of rough stone, erected about a century and a half ago. The interior remains very nearly as Washington left it. The largest room is in the centre of the house, about twenty-four feet square, but so disproportionately low, as to appear very much larger. It served the General during his residence there, in the day time, for his hall of reception and his dining-room, where he regularly kept up a liberal, though plain hospitality. At night it was used as a bed-room for his aides-de-camp and occasional military visitors and guests. It was long memorable among the veterans who had seen the chief there, for its huge wood fire, built against the wall, in, or rather under a wide chimney, which was quite open at both sides. It was still more remarkable for the whimsical peculiarity of having seven doors and but one window. The unceiled roof of this room, with its massive painted beams, corresponds to the simplicity of the rest of the building, as well as shows the indifference of our ancestors to the free communication of noise and cold air. In the north-east corner of the house, communicating with the large centre room, is a small chamber, which the General used as a study or private office.

Among the officers of the northern division of the Revolutionary army many an anecdote was told, the scene of which was laid in the old square room at Newburgh, "with its seven doors and one window." In it were every day served up, to as many guests as the table and chairs could accommodate, a dinner and a supper, as plentiful as the country could supply, and as good as they could be made by the continental cooks, whose proficiency in culinary skill drew forth in one of his private letters, (since printed) the only piece of literary pleasantry in which the great man was ever known to indulge. But then old soldiers affirmed with emphasis, there was always plenty of good wine. French wines for our French allies, and sound Madiera for the Americans of the old school, who didn't affect to imitate the French tastes, circulated briskly, and were taken in little silver mugs or goblets made in France for the General's camp equipage. They were accompanied by the famous apples of the Hudson, the Spitzenbergh and other varieties, and invariably by heaped up plates of hickory nuts, the amazing consumption of which, by the General and his staff, was the theme of boundless admiration to the Marquis de Chastellux and other French officers. The jest, the argument, the song and the story circulated as briskly as the wine; while the chief, at the head of his table, sat long, listened to all, or appeared to listen, smiled at and enjoyed all, but all gravely, without partaking much in the conversation or at all contributing to the laugh, either by swelling its chorus or furnishing the occasion, for he was neither a joker nor a story-teller. He had no talent, and he knew he had none, for humor, repartee, or amusing anecdote; and if he had possessed it, he was too wise to have indulged in it in the position he held. One evidence among many others, of the impression which Washington's presence in this scene had made, and the dignity and permanence it could lend to every idea or recollection, however trivial otherwise, was given at Paris many years after the War of Independence. The American Minister at the Court of France and several Americans, together with General Lafayette, were invited to an entertainment at the house of a distinguished Frenchman, who had served with the French allies in America. At the supper hour the company were shown into a room fitted up for the occasion, which contrasted oddly with the Parisian elegance of the other apartments, where they had spent their evening. A low, boarded, painted ceiling, with large beams, a single small uncurtained window, with numerous small doors, as well as the general style of the whole, gave at first the idea of the kitchen, or largest room of a Dutch or Belgian farm-house. On a long rough table was a repast, just as little in keeping with the refined kitchen of Paris. It consisted of large dishes of meat, uncouth-looking pastry, and wine in decanters and bottles, with glasses and silver mugs, such as indicated habits and tastes different from those of modern Paris. "Do you know where you are now?" said the host to General Lafayette and his companions. They paused for a few moments in suspense. They had seen something like this before, but when and where? "Ah! the seven doors and one window," said Lafayette, "and the silver camp goblets, such as our Marshals of France used in my youth! We are at Washington's headquarters on the Hudson, fifty years ago!" This story was related by Colonel Fish and the host was the excellent M. Marbois. Another anecdote of a higher and more moral interest, the scene of which also was laid in this house, was remembered to have been told by Colonel Marinus Willett of New York city, when past his eightieth year, with a feeling that warmed the coldest of his hearers. A British officer had been brought in from the river, a prisoner, and wounded. Some accidental circumstance had attracted to him Gen. Washington's special notice, who had him placed under the best surgical care, and ordered him to be lodged at his own quarters. There according to custom a large party of officers had assembled in the evening to sup with the Commander-in-chief. When the meats and cloth were removed, the unfailing nuts appeared, and the wine, a luxury seldom seen by American subalterns except at "His Excellency's" table, began to circulate. The General rose much before his usual hour, but, putting one of his aides-de-camp in his place, requested his friends to remain, adding in a gentle tone, "I have only to ask you to remember, in your society, that there is a wounded officer in the very next room." This injunction had its effect for a short time, but, as the wine and punch passed around, the soldier's jest and mirth gradually broke forth, conversation warmed into argument, and, by and by, came a song. In the midst of all this, a side door opened, and some one entered in silence and on tiptoe. It was the General. Without a word to any of the company, he passed silently along the table, with almost noiseless tread, to the opposite door, which he opened and closed after him as gently and cautiously, as a nurse in the sick room of a tender and beloved patient. The song, the story, the merriment died away at once. All were hushed. All felt the rebuke, and dropped off quietly, one by one, to their chambers or tents.

But the Newburgh Headquarters are also memorable as the scene of a far more important transaction. In the autumn of 1783 the war had closed with glory. The national independence had been won. The army were encamped on the banks of the Hudson, unpaid, almost unclothed, individually loaded with private debt, awaiting to be disbanded, and to return to the pursuits of private life without the prospect of any settlement of their long arrears of pay, and without the means of temporary support until other prospects opened in their new avocations. It was under these circumstances while Congress from the impotence of our frame of government under the old confederation, and the extreme poverty of the country, found themselves utterly unable to advance even a single month's pay, and seemed but to delay and procrastinate any decision upon it; the soldiery, impatient and suffering, began to regard them as cold hearted masters. Then it was the celebrated anonymous Newburg letters were circulated through the camp. The glowing letters of this address painted their country as trampling upon their rights, disdaining their cries and insulting their distress. The writer called upon his fellow soldiers, never to sheath their swords until they had obtained full and ample justice, and pointed distinctly to their "illustrious leader", as the chief under whom they could most boldly claim, and most successfully compel the unwilling justice of their country. Precisely that state of feeling pervaded the whole army, that despair of justice from any other quarter than themselves, and the rallying of all their hopes in their long-tried chief, such as in other times and countries have enthroned the military chieftain upon the ruins of the republic he had served. But the disinterested patriotism of Washington rejected the turn to his ambition. His opinions and arguments expressed in his orders and in the addresses delivered by him to his officers, calmed the mind of the army, and brought them to a sense of submissive duty. Shortly after the army disbanded itself the veterans laid down their swords in peace, trusting to the faith and gratitude of their county, leaving the honor of the Continental army unstained. Why should we dilate here on the particulars of this transaction? They form the brightest page in our history, and no eloquence can increase the dignity of the narrative, as told in the plain language of Marshall, and in the orders and addresses of Washington himself.

When any of our readers visit the headquarters this season, they will feel grateful to us for informing them that it was in the little north-eastern room of the "old stone house" at Newburgh, that Washington meditated on this momentous question, and prepared the general orders to the army, and the address which he read with such happy effect to the military convention that assembled at his invitation on the 15th of Oct., 1783, at a large barrack or storehouse, then called the "new building," in the immediate neighborhood.

It was but a few days after this that upon the lawn before the house, Washington finally parted with that portion of his army which did not accompany him to take possession of New York. He parted with his faithful comrades with a deep emotion which contrasted strongly with the calm serenity of manner which had distinguished him throughout the whole seven years of the war.

It is a good tendency of the human mind, and one leading to excellent ends that prompts the man of taste or the scholar to

"Worship the turf where Virgil trod,
And think it like no other sod;
And guard each leaf from Shakespeare tree,
With Druid-like idolatry.".

But how much more elevated the feeling, how much worthier in the motive, and salutary in the influence, are the emotions which throb in the patriot's breast as he treads upon a soil, dignified by recollections of wisdom, of courage.

If, therefore, to use the language of Dr. Johnston, "that man is little to be envied whose patriotism would not gain force upon the plain of Marathon, or whose piety would not grow warmer among the ruins of Iona"—what shall we say of the American who feels no glow of patriotism, who kindles not the warmer love for his country, and her glorious institutions, who rises into no grand and fervent aspiration for the virtue and happiness of this people when he enters the humble, but venerable walls of the Headquarter's at Newburgh.

Plainfield, New Jersey, Oct. 18, 1883.

IT LOOKED LOVELY.

One evening during the engagement of a popular artist at one of our theatres, a lady sat directly behind a father and daughter, and for the life of her could not help hearing the conversation. The father had come in from his home in the country for a visit to his daughter, who was attending a prominent educational institution here, and the girl had been treated to a visit to the theatre. Between the acts the lady heard the old gentleman, in his fatherly way, say to his daughter:

"I notice, dear, that you are not rooming with your former chum, and that you do not speak to her when you meet. You and she were inseparable the last time I was here, and I thought you would marry her, if you couldn't get a man. I trust nothing serious has happened. Tell me about it."

"Oh, its nothing much," said the girl, as she changed her gum around to the other side of her mouth, and cast her eyes sideways at a dude who had been out to smoke a cigarette to steady his nerve, and was just coming in to walk over the feet of the people in the same row with him.

"It was all about a porous plaster, and it makes me laugh when I think of it," and the little wretch smiled and showed two sets of pearly teeth to such good advantage that the dude's heart jumped like a kernel of corn on a griddle, thinking she was smiling at him.

"You see we roomed together and knew each other's secrets. My chum had a pain in the small of her back, and she confided in me and after diagnosing the case—"

"Come again, please," said the old man, when she struck the college word. "You whiched on the case?"

"Why, diagnosed it. I examined the case, you know, and after advising her not to lean on the gate so much in the night air, recommended a porous plaster, and she got one and I put it on for her. Oh, it looked lovely. I cut it bias with the shears and trimed it with some chenille fringe, and put it across her back slanting, and it was a picture for a painter or paper hanger, and we used to admire it for hours at a time. She wanted to wear it outside of her dress, but being the doctor, I wouldn't have it, because it would be a dead give away. You tumble, don't you, eh?"

The old gentleman said he was not sure about it, but thought he did not tumble, or words to that effect.

"Well," said the girl, after putting her opera glasses up and taking sight at a young fellow with a little dew on his upper lip. "Time passed, and after a few months the plaster had got in its work, and my chum wanted it taken off, and she appealed to me to peal the plaster. I would take hold of the corner of it and pull it a little, and my chum would squeal, and look scared and jump into bed and dream all night that she was captured by the Indians who were burning her at the stake.

"We kept this up for a week. Every night I would try to get the plaster off, and she would not have sand enough to endure the torture. I tried to reason with her, and tell her that in the battle of life she would suffer more pain than this, but she insisted that when it came to the battle of life she was going to be a sutler, and so the plaster remained. I was afraid the plaster would become chronic of my chum, and mark her for life.

"I thought what a responsibility rested on me. Suppose the plaster should remain there always, and in time she should become a happy wife, the man would become crushed at the discovery of a pre-Adamite thousand mile ticket on the small of his wife's back.

"The plaster haunted me, and I decided to remove it that night. When the services commenced in our room, and when we had got all of our clothes laid out on the floor where we could jump into them in case of fire and be rescued looking a little less like a crowd bathing at the seaside than we did at the last fire, I told my chum to prepare for a fearful ordeal. I told her that in the midst of life we were in death, and in such a moment as she'd think not we are liable to hear something rip.

"I got a good hold of the top of the plaster while I was quoting passages from Shakespeare to her, and handing her a handkerchief saturated with camphor, I pulled. She jumped clear across the room, and I held on to the plaster, and it came off. She yelled murder, and the other girls came in thinking we were being abducted, and my chum jumped into bed and covered herself up, and I stood there laughing 'with the scalp of me hated rival dangling at me belt.' My chum was saved, but at what a cost! When I got in bed she was cold as a frog and turned away from me, and all night she grated her teeth, and in the morning she wouldn't speak to me. I tried to argue with her that she was as much to blame as I was, because if she hadn't jumped it would not have come off, but with a fire in her eye that I never saw before, except once when she had an ingrowing toe nail, she said, 'This settles it. From this time foward you are another.' She moved her traps that day, and now I have a chum who never had a lame back, and we get along splended, only she uses my perfumery when she has a beau, but that is all right, as I have got on a pair of her silk stockings. Oh, pa, isn't that a lovely bonnet in the box? When we go back to the college I will show you the porous plaster."

At this moment the curtain went up, and the lady behind the old man and his daughter didn't hear any more.—Milwaukee Sun.

HARMONY.

The Democratic majority in the city of New York is very heavy, and as a consequence, rival organizations, bearing the title of Democracy, there exist and have sometimes weakened party strength.

This year they all agree upon one set of unexceptionably good candidates.

So, too, the Brooklyn Democrats have acted.

That is as it should be.

Harmony is the Democratic watchword.

Make it the rallying cry everywhere. Trample under foot every thing like personal animosity and selfish ambition, cast aside all petty bickerings and local prejudices, unite for the success of those grand principles of equity and freedom, to establish which the Democratic party arose over eighty years ago and to defend and perpetuate which it continues in battle array.

Democrats! Beneath the banner of Harmony press zealously onward to Victory!

LEON ABBETT.

The opponents of Leon Abbett have exhausted themselves vainly endeavoring to injure him as a candidate for Governor through the medium of vile personal abuse and political misrepresentation.

Such indecent warfare harms only the assailants.

It will aid Mr. Abbett vastly, by adding to his Democratic supporters thousands of Republicans.

The people of New Jersey know and esteem Leon Abbett.

He is a man of the people.

Their dearest rights he has ever espoused.

There is not a drop of aristocratic or hypocritical blood in his veins.

The people, rich or poor, can readily approach and confidently rely upon him at all times.

Travel the State from end to end, and no citizen can be found more thoroughly acquainted with public affairs, and more deserving to be the successor of Parker, Randolph, Bedle, McClellan and Ludlow than he.

LEON ABBETT.

REAL PROSPERITY.

It is a dangerous fallacy to imagine that the accumulation of immense and suddenly acquired fortunes is an evidence of national prosperity.

Genuine prosperity rests upon an entirely different basis.

It means that riches shall be the product of honest enterprise and patient toil, protected by just and liberal laws, and possessed by all classes of the people as the reward of individual thrift.

England is a nation of millionaire nabobs and millions of destitute subjects. There the privileged few wield the sceptre of monied tyranny and the many are virtually slaves.

It will be a giant curse should such a system be permitted to grow and cast its withering shadows over this country.

It will, if the people are not aroused to threatening peril.

Surplus earnings, safely invested, constitute bona fide wealth, be they counted by hundreds or by thousands of dollars.

A free and certain opportunity for every person, be he farmer, mechanic, tradesman, artisan, manufacturer, miner, or daily laborer, to earn fair recompense for his skill and industry, to procure the necessaries and comforts of life unswindled by gambling monopolists, and to retain and enjoy his own gains unawed by monied mercenaries, is the inherent right of the American people, and to preserve it unimpaired, their only guarantee for permanent freedom and happiness.

To elevate and enrich the masses is the purpose of Democracy.

Therein abides real prosperity, both public and private.

At Trenton, Oct. 16, the answer of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Co., and the Central Railroad of New Jersey to the complaint of Wm. B. Gen. McClellan will preside at the Democratic mass meeting to be held in Orange on October 30th. Leon Abbett, Senator McPherson and Charles H. Winfield will be among the speakers.

DE WITT C. HOUGH.

The Democratic Convention in placing before the voters of this District, as a candidate for the House of Assembly,

DE WITT C. HOUGH,
OF RAHWAY,

acted precisely as wise men should.

Doctor Hough is well known throughout the entire District and commands the esteem and confidence of the people irrespective of partisan name.

A few years ago he was twice elected to the Assembly and proved himself there a vigilant and intelligent representative. He was last year the Democratic candidate for the same position, and the heavy vote then given him in Rahway, against a popular Republican resident of that City, showed the high personal regard entertained for him by his immediate fellow citizens.

He is again a candidate, not from his own seeking, but in obedience to the popular will, and when we solicit men of all parties to yield him a hearty support we are only serving the public good.

There is no haughty pride about him—he is of and for the people.

Instead of being a stranger—his name is familiar and honored word with all classes.

He is not an inexperienced aspirant—but practically acquainted with Legislative duty.

Honesty, Ability and of Good Report are the Jeffersonian requisites justly possessed by him.

VOTE FOR HOUGH!

JOHN VETTERLEIN.

We last week briefly announced the nomination of John Vetterlein as the Democratic candidate for Assemblyman in Somerset.

In furtherance of his well founded claims for popular support, it affords us pleasure to quote as follows from the Democratic organ of his own county:

"Mr. John Vetterlein, the Assembly nominee, is not so well known to many of our people as is Mr. McMurtry, but those who have known him for years, Republicans as well as Democrats, speak in the highest terms of his character and abilities. The fact that he has not taken an active part in politics heretofore is nothing to his discredit. And that he is not a wealthy man doesn't render him any the less worthy of support. As he stated in the convention, his means will not permit him to devote his attention solely to the canvass.

Mr. Vetterlein is a young man, a native of Philadelphia, but of German parentage. His parents died in the above city, in the years 1857 and 1858, and their child was taken to the house of a relative in Jersey City (then 'Bergen'). In January 1863, the lad entered one of the largest hardware establishments in New York as an office boy. By industry and close attention to his employers' interests he was advanced steadily from that position to clerk, salesman, and finally, confidential clerk. In 1871, on account of ill health, he had to give up business, and then made a visit to Germany, returning to America the following Winter. In 1872 he began business in Plainfield, which enterprise was successfully conducted until 1877, when, by an unfortunate real estate investment and the shrinkage which followed, he was forced to retire. The next year he became a resident of North Plainfield. There he has the esteem and confidence of all his acquaintances of both parties. Mr. Vetterlein is the patentee of a number of important machines, the manufacture of which is somewhat limited owing to the want of capital. A portion of his time is given to the interests of Mr. Adam Fritz, a well-known business man in Plainfield, who is also a resident of our county. If elected he will prove an intelligent legislator, who will command the respect of all parties. A workingman himself, he will do all in his power to promote the interests of that large class of people in our State."

Mr. Vetterlein is in every particular worthy of an election, and ought to be triumphantly commissioned to serve the people as their representative in the House of Assembly. They cannot do better. Vote for VETTERLEIN.

New Jersey prohibitionists met in convention last week and nominated Rev. Solomon Parsons as the candidate for Governor. The convention was largely attended, and showed that this third party movement is steadily gaining adherents from the Republican ranks. What will the Republican party do about it?—Plainfield Times.

Oh, the Republican party will go right on voting the Republican ticket, blackguarding the Democrats as the rum party, and cursing the temperance people for their folly in not supporting the regular cut and dried Republican nominees. As a party of false pretences, deceit and humbug, the Republican party takes the cake. The Plainfield Times is a striking illustration of this truth. Week in and week out it fires away at the rum traffic and goes it strong for temperance, but all the same it never gives a helping hand to the candidates of the prohibitionists. It supports the regular Republican nominees through thick and thin, and that is a mighty poor way of attesting its sincerity in the temperance movement. Temperance and good morals will never be found in that direction.—Hunterdon Democrat.

That is just about the size of it, brother Kilgore.

THE efforts of S. C. Lilienstern, the clothier, to give our citizens custom clothing equal to the work of Broadway and Fifth avenue tailors, should receive the patronage due. ANOTHER incendiary fire occurred at Dunellen last Friday evening, this time a small barn belonging to Firman Joyce being fired and burned to the ground with its contents, which included a horse, buggy, carpenter's tools, etc. The alarm was given, as usual, by the incendiary, or a confederate, firing several shots from a revolver, to alarm the dwellers near by. On this occasion, a pistol ball was sent crashing through the front windows of Brakeley's drug store. Suspicion points to certain individuals as the authors of the crime, and arrests are to be made.

The First Snow.

Plainfielders were, just before noon of Monday, treated to a brief snow storm. The flakes were very small, exceedingly few, and decidedly transient, and the fall was over before most people were aware of its visit. Then the weather gave way to alternate clouds and sunshine, with an apparent rise in the temperature before evening.

Going to Mob Them.

A party of five amateur detectives, including a Councilman of the second ward, headed by Captain Chase, were out hunting two mysterious men Monday night, that had been seen upon a stoop of an unoccupied residence. Wherever they went they could be heard a block off, and naturally any person intent on mischief was warned away.

The Opening of the Season.

The Plainfield Cornet Band will hold its First Ball, at St. Mary's Hall, next Thursday evening; upon which occasion the Goodwill Band of New Brunswick will be present and furnish the necessary music. The Committee of Arrangements —Messrs W. H. Guttman, J. C. Dawe, J. McCarthy and A. A. Linzer—assure the success of the affair.

Arrested for Trespass.

On Tuesday last Peter Baldwin, a member of the New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society, residing back of Washingtonville, Somerset County, caused the arrest of David Squiers for trespassing on the former's land and for shooting a high-holder, an insectivorous bird. A hearing in the case will be had before Justice McLaughlin next Monday.

Distinguished Guests.

The following were among the guests at the Park House, Tuesday night:

Hon. F. A. Potts and wife, Mr. F. A. Potts, Jr., Mr. R. M. Bull, Mr. G. W. Fuller, Jr. of Pittstown. Capt. Charles Shaler, Mrs. M. A. Shaler, Miss M. A. Shaler, Miss E. F. Shaler, Master C. Shaler, Mr. Edward R. Brevoort, Mr. G. M. Barretto and wife, Mr. E. A. Hoffman, Jr., of New York.

Plainfield Left Again.

The Republicans of the Third Assembly District met at Fanwood, Thursday afternoon of last week and nominated Mr. David P. Hall of that place. As usual, too many Plainfield cooks spoiled the broth and the nomination went elsewhere. An informal ballot gave Hall 20; J. B. Miller, 11; C. A. Marsh, 1; and a formal ballot resulted as follows: Hall, 27; Miller, 8; and blank, 1.

The Game Laws.

The season for shooting quail, rabbit and grouse (pheasant or partridge) does not open in this State until Nov. 1st. "The New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society" have officers on the watch for any infringement of the game laws. Any violation of these laws, with necessary proof, reported to this Society, at Plainfield, will receive prompt attention and the violators punished according to law.

A Suggestion.

In this issue appears the Fall advertisement of Roberts & Co., the leading clothiers of Newark. This firm and their "Glass Front" establishment on Broad street, are not unknown to many Plainfield patrons, all of whom can testify regarding the style, durability and finish of the garments sold by the house. If you are going to Newark for a Fall suit or Winter overcoat, call and see what Roberts & Co. offer.

Comedy and Farce.

On Monday evening, Nov. 12th, at Van Deventer Hall, the "Cousin Joe Comedy Co.," will give one of its choice entertainments, upon which occasion will appear many well known artists including such favorites as Wilgus the banjoist, little Nellie Devere the wonderful child artiste, in her popular impersonations, and Johnny Statesman the Dutch Comedian. "Rough Diamonds" and the "Dutchman's Courtship" will also be rendered by a very strong cast.

Sporting Goods.

As the season is approaching when the sportsman will betake himself after the frisky rabbit and swift-flying quail, it will be necessary to procure ammunition and weapons for the occasion. At A. Vanderbeck's establishment, No. 33 Park avenue will be found a full assortment of all the leading make of breech loading guns, ammunition, and all manner of sporting goods. There is no need to go out of town for these articles, Vanderbeek will sell as low as the lowest.

All Night for Nothing.

The sale of seats for the Y. M. C. A. Course, created as in past years, quite a rivalry for first choice. Mr. Charles Remsen started the line at eleven p. m., of last Sunday, and was joined ten minutes later by a hired representative of Mr. D. J. Boice. Others arrived during the night and kept one another company until seven o'clock the next morning when the sale commenced. In spite of such indicrous effort to be first, the best seats were not selected until later in the day.

Assembly Delegates.

At the Democratic Primary held in this city last Monday evening the following named were elected delegates to attend the Third Assembly Democratic Convention held in Plainfield, Wednesday, October 24th.

1st Ward—L. M. Wadsworth, Vincent L. Frahee, Andrew Love, Jr.

2d Ward—Gilford Mayer, D. J. Marshall, C. S. A. Davis.

3d Ward—Wm. B. Manson, Jas. Clark, Thomas H. Kellar.

4th Ward—Andrew Love, Sr., John Bodine, Stephen A. Davis.

Train Wreckers.

Not satisfied with putting upon this community the present terrors of incendiarism, fate has now added to the prospective horrors of train wrecking. Last Friday evening at about 10:15, word was left at the Plainfield station by a person who had just seen the fact, that ties had been placed on the track near Madison avenue. Ticket agent Kline and the night watchman hurried to the spot, and found on the north track two heavy ties, one two and the other four feet east of the Madison avenue bridge. A half-hour later a passenger train from New York would have struck the obstructions and probably been hurled into the street below.

A Chance To Get Naturalized.

The County Clerk's office at Elizabeth will be open this evening (Friday) and also on Monday evening, when Judge Van Syckle will be in attendance, and naturalization papers can be procured by all who so desire.

Preaching.

The Rev. Dr. Stryker of Saratoga Springs, will preach in the Crescent avenue church next Sunday morning and evening. The Rev. J. H. Vincent has been engaged, and will occupy that pulpit sometime during the coming month.

A Wide Hunt.

The Committee appointed for the purpose is searching the entire country for a pastor worthy the charge of the Crescent avenue church. Some members of the Committee, last Sunday, listened to the eloquence of a preacher in Bath, Maine, while two others at Troy, N. Y., gauged the ability of a shepherd in charge of a flock of miners.

The Plainfield Vocal Society.

This Society perfected its reorganization, Thursday of last week, by the election of the following officers: President, W. W. Howland; Vice President, C. O. McCutchen; Treasurer, J. K. Myers; Secretary, D. E. Titsworth; Board of Directors, H. O. Newman, H. A. McGee and D. E. Davis. Mr. E. J. Fitzhugh has been re-engaged as leader. The first rehearsal was Tuesday evening at Assembly Hall, to be repeated next Tuesday evening at the same place.

The Lawyers Left.

The case of J. C. Zimmerman, Esq., of North Plainfield, against the P. & R. R. R., for damages sustained by a collision at the Lehigh Valley crossing beyond Bound Brook, came up for trial Tuesday morning at Elizabeth. While a jury was being drawn, however, a settlement was agreed upon by the parties concerned, and the case was dropped. It is understood that Mr. Zimmerman receives $12,000—$6,000 from each road. The lawyers, consequently, lose the fees that a long trial with sundry appeals would have ensured them.

At It Again.

Things were lively in the Boulevard, Wednesday night, or early Thursday morning. A gang of "the boys"—one of whom the complainant saith is Jimmy Dady—broke into the residence of Mr. Moran at Third and William streets, made existence exciting for him and then proceeded to "clean house" up stairs. In the second story dwelt a family whose household goods are now a total wreck, and the head of the family was compelled to jump out of the window. The outcome of this little incident in the Fourth Ward, will be given in our next.

The Bribery Law.

In accordance with the law Sheriff Forsyth has caused to be posted around the city printed copies of the law relating to bribery at elections. These laws are very stringent, and it is just as well to read them over carefully.

The first section of the law provides that those who attempt to bribe others are liable to one year in State Prison and $5,000 fine; the 1st section that those who receive bribes are liable to six months imprisonment and $500 fine; the third section that those influencing others to abstain from voting are liable to one year in prison and $10.000 fine; the fourth section that any one not indicted may be compelled to testify in the trial of such indictments or allegations.

Consistency.

Councilman Marsh rather assumes the responsibility of censuring the different standing committees of the Common Council if in his opinion they neglect their respective duties. He, however, repeatedly delays the passage of just claims against the city—claims that are sworn to and which he knows are correct. He now, with Councilmen Coriell and Polak, is withholding the bills for advertising the sale of land for taxes, without cause or reason. The committee know the claims are correct, because they compelled the publishers to take a price they (the committee) dictated. Why then should any delay arise? And why were the claims referred to the Committee on Laws and Ordinances to be smothered? Surely no one would accuse any of the committee with being actuated by personal motives!

The Work for Young Men!

Every member should make a special effort to secure sustaining members between now and January. It is only in this way that our work can be properly supported. It may seem a hard matter to secure one hundred names at $10,00 a piece, in a city the size of Plainfield; but it can be done and we will not do our duty if we do not secure them. They can be had if you, who are now members, will work for them. If the work is not worth that much support, it had better give place to something else that will be worth it. But just so long as there is a saloon in Plainfield, or just so long as there is a danger that young men can be led astray by the devil's intrigues, just so long is there an urgent demand for special work in that line—and such work is done to-day in Plainfield, by the Young Men's Christian Association. Do you want a proof of this statement? Visit the rooms and talk with the young men who gather there, then visit the meetings and you will learn the same story. Does it pay to provide a place where young men can come and receive christian counsel, meeting earnest christian associates and be led into living upright lives; a place which is trying to do something to counteract the influences of the dram shop and evil associates? If it does, won't you who are already interested in the work now make a special effort, and you who read this, take a membership at once? And by so doing you will be helping the work. SECRETARY.

The Clerk read the following resolution presented by Mr. Serrell:

WHEREAS, By chapter [illegible] of laws of 1880, page 171, a person convicted of bribery in connection with any election is punishable by a fine of $1,000, or one year's imprisonment at hard labor, or both, and deprived of the elective franchise; and,

WHEREAS, It is publicly known that a money consideration was given in connection with many votes at the municipal election last December; therefore,

Resolved, That any person contributing money or knowingly permitting the payment of money to purchase votes is utterly unworthy of public confidence and should be shunned by all good citizens;

Resolved, That the members of this council do pledge themselves to exert all their influence, whether it be small or great, in favor of rooting out and destroying the political corruption and bribery that has become a stain on our name, and which, unless arrested, will drive from public life honest and reliable men, and leave the affairs of the city and even of the nation in the hands of those having no higher aim than personal advancement at the expense of the public good.

On motion of Mr. Coriell, seconded by Mr. Marsh, the same was adopted.

Mr. J. Simpson from the Auditing Com., reported correct the claims of W. L. Force & Bro., and Runyon & Leonard. Warrants ordered drawn.

Mr. Beguelin presented the following claims: Plainfield Relief Asso., $51; L. A. Connett, $9; M. A. Cooper, $10; Ref'd to Alms Com.

The Council then adjourned.

More Incendiarism.

Saturday night and Sunday morning last, were hours of excitement and apprehension to many citizens, caused by the frequent false alarms and fires which occurred. About eight o'clock Saturday evening, an alarm of fire was raised on Front street, which brought out a portion of the Fire Department. At half-past eleven o'clock, another alarm was given, caused by an attempt to fire a barn on the premises owned by Mr. Wm. B. Stewart, on the corner of Sixth and Peace streets, and occupied by Mr. R. P. Cornwell. The discovery of the flames was owing to a queer procedure, originating no doubt with the incendiary. Some one violently rang the door bell of Mr. Cornwell's residence, breaking the wire connection thereby. The person answering the bell discovered a light in the loft of the barn, in which the coachman slept, and who was absent at the time. An investigation showed that a mattress in the loft was on fire, as well as hay in the loft some twenty feet distant. The mattress was thrown out of the window, the hay fire extinguished, and four valuable horses meanwhile liberated from their stalls beneath by the efforts of Mrs. Cornwell.

About half-past one o'clock Sunday morning, another alarm was sounded from the fire bell, caused by the discovery of flames issuing from an unoccupied stable on the David Tilton property on Union avenue, near Grant avenue. The structure was entirely consumed, although No. 2 engine proceeded to the scene and put water on the ruins, taking suction from a small pond back of Mr. Heiniger's residence. This fire was also of incendiary origin. How long is the incendiary to roam unrestrained through Plainfield. Oh! for a detective to ferret them out.

Wedding Bells.

The much talked of event, the marriage of Miss Kate Greenough Matthews, daughter of Mr. Charles Matthews, of North Plainfield, and niece of Hon. Frederic Potts, to Mr. Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., was consummated in the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, last Tuesday evening, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Hurley Baldy, of Philadelphia, a relative of the bride, assisted by the rector, Rev. T. L. Murphy. The church was handsomely trimmed and decorated with autumn leaves and grasses. The bride was dressed in white Ottoman silk, brocaded, and trimmed with seed pearls and chenille fringe. The square cut corsage was filled with duchess point lace. Her veil, of the same material, was fastened with orange blossoms. She wore diamond ornaments, and was escorted into the church on the arm of her father, preceded by six ushers, Mr. Peter B. Matthews, brother of the bride; Mr. Frederic A. Potts, Jr., cousin of the bride; Mr. Robert M. Bull, Mr. George W. Fuller, Jr., Mr. J. Lyoch Pendagast and Mr. Milo W. Baldy, and was met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man. She was given away by her father. After the ceremony at the church the reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, where a wedding breakfast was served by Pinard. Among the large number present were Hon. and Mrs. Frederic A. Potts, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac N. Phelps, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Dean Hoffman and Mrs. Hoffman, Gen. Wm. H. Sterling and wife, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Garland, Mr. and Mrs. George N. Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Macfillin, Mr. and Mrs. Wm Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Roome, General Charles Roome, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Gibbins, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Potts, Mr. James Closson, Rev. and Mrs. A. V. V. Raymond, Mrs. Emma L. Roome, Mr. A. Bleecker Neilson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Roome, Mr. A. F. M. Roome, Mr. P. Baldy, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley F. Smith, Miss Nellie Clark, Mr. and Mrs W. J. B. Hegeman, Lieutenant and Mrs. Leake, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Stern, Judge Kilpatrick, of Pittsburg; Mr. and Mrs. T. Edsall and Dr. Andrews, of Philadelphia.

The wedding of Miss Rachie C. Mosher to Mr. Herbert E. Kenyon, of Little Genesee, N. Y., took place on Wednesday morning last at eleven o'clock, according to the ceremony of Friends, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Laing, on Peace street. Owing to the protracted illness of Mr. Laing the affair was very private, only the immediate relatives of the family being present. The happy couple left on the afternoon train for a short tour, previous to their departure for western New York, where they in future will reside. We extend them our congratulations.

FOR ASSEMBLY—THIRD DISTRICT.

De Witt C. Hough Nominated Against Julia Ward Howe's Son-in-law.

The Third Assembly District Democratic Convention met at the Headquarters of the Democracy, in this city, Wednesday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock. Mr. L. F. Wadsworth, Chairman of the last Convention, called the meeting to order, and Mr. James Ritchie of Fanwood was unanimously chosen as Chairman, with Messrs. J. T. Davis of Rahway, and V. L. Frazee of Plainfield as Secretaries. A Committee on Credentials composed of Messrs. L. F. Wadsworth of Plainfield, Joseph T. Crowell of Rahway and J. M. C. Marsh reported no contested delegations and all such as filed with R. L. Livingston, Esq., of this city, as the representative of Clark township.

Rahway made no nomination. Mayor Maxson as the Chairman of the Plainfield delegation nominated DeWitt C. Hough of Rahway; which nomination was seconded by Westfield and endorsed by Fanwood and Clark. A recess of ten minutes was taken and after strenuous efforts, Mr. Hough was persuaded to accept against his wishes. On reassembling the nomination was made by acclamation and tendered the candidate by the Chairman with encouraging words. Mr. Hough made an address in acceptance, stating his desire that another should have received the honor, but agreeing to again enter the contest in the interest of the party. Mayor Maxson followed in response to the enthusiastic demand of those present, and delivered an earnest appeal to the party for combined effort to win against the "rooster" candidate nominated on the other side. He felt there was hope that the honest men of the Republican party would not su tain "Julia Ward Howe's son-in-law," who had no interest in the district and merely slept in it to avoid oppressive taxation elsewhere. He thought the "young man with the illustrious mother-in-law" could not secure the support of those who wanted a representative of themselves and their homes.

The Convention then adjourned with cheers for Messrs. Hough and Abbott, after the selection of Fanwood as the place for holding the next Convention.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Collector Connoly has been confined to his home for a few days, with an attack of neuralgia.

Our friend has found out what day of the week Sunday is, and also sold his $45,000 farm.

An addition to the census of our town occurred on Monday last in the family of Arthur Foster.

Prof. Thos. A. M. Ward gave a variety show consisting of Punch and Judy, Jack the Giant Killer, ventriloquism and magic, for the benefit of the Lamp Lighting Com. The attendance was fair and a neat sum was realized for lighting our streets.

On Saturday evening last, Thomas England, Mayor of Mugginsville, left his horse and wagon in front of Traynor's store with his weekly stock of groceries therein. During the evening a sneak thief stole the entire contents of the large basket of provisions.

The first anniversary and supper of Fireside Council, No. 715, Royal Arcanum, occurred on Thursday evening of last week. It was held in Lyceum Hall. There was a large attendance. The wives of members of the Council had provided a substantial supper for all. A very pleasant and social evening was spent.

The Relief Association connected with two of the fire companies in our town, held their annual election for officers on Monday evening last. Those elected were Joseph B. Harrison, President; Frank R. Pennington, Vice President; George W. Peck, Secretary; J. H. Towle, Treasurer.

At the annual election of the Westfield Thief Detective Society, William Gale was elected President; Levi Cory, Vice President; James M. French, Secretary; John S. Irving, Treasurer. The Directors of the Society for the ensuing year are William Gale, Levi Cory, John S. Irving, Jos. B. Harrison, Frank Brunner, Oliver M. Pierson and Jas. M. French.

Miss Anna D. Cooper gave a very enjoyable entertainment at the Lyceum last Tuesday evening. The readings by Miss Bovee and Miss Cooper were well rendered and received with merited applause. The musical part of the programme was a rare treat, such as the residents of this town seldom have the opportunity of enjoying, the execution of the several pieces by Mrs. Schuckher and Miss Klein being remarkably fine. We regret that owing to the severe storm the audience was not so large as we should have liked to have seen, and hope a repetition of the programme will occur soon.

Sewerage.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—As the sewage of Plainfield is a matter of vital importance to the inhabitants and property owners I propose to submit to the readers of your valuable paper some interesting and valuable experiments that have been made in the neighborhood of Paris, France, in the use of the street sewage from the city, both from sanitary and economic considerations. The total length of the principal sewers of Paris is about five hundred miles; two of the largest run at right angles with the river Seine, under the Boulevards St. Michel and Sebastopol. These large sewers are from four by seven to eighteen by eighteen feet in diameter and are built of solid masonry laid in cement. Those from the left bank are carried under the river Seine in an immense iron pipe and into the collector general, which latter is carried about three and a half miles to Asnieres, outside the city walls, in a northwesterly direction, and where it formerly discharged its whole contents into the river. It was claimed that it polluted the water of the river, poisoned and destroyed the fish, left deposits on the banks and rendered the neighborhood below offensive and unhealthy. Various methods were proposed to remedy the evil: one to convey the contents of the sewers to the ocean near Dieppe, a distance of about one hundred and twenty-five miles. The most practical proposition was accepted; to use the sewage as a fertilizer. A large tract of very poor land lying near Asnieres, called the plain of Gennevilliers seemed suited for the experiment; the land being flat, sandy, gravelly, thin and incapable of producing paying crops. The plain contains about [illegible] acres. In this about [illegible] acres was irrigated with the water from the sewers. Land which had hitherto been regarded as not worth cultivating, and which had no marketable value, was made both productive and profitable. Lands that rented for [illegible] now bring from [illegible]. In one place an artificial spring has been made from an underground collection of sewage water, which, after passing through the soil, flows out from beneath a gravelly bank, to all appearance as pure and sparkling as any natural spring water, and as absolutely free from taste or smell or any appearance of impurity. In conclusion, Messrs. Editors, cannot the sewage of Plainfield be used similar to that of Paris? We have the same land and [illegible] surroundings, and thereby save our streams from pollution. B.

A PALPABLE HIT.

The Trenton correspondent of the Newark Journal has been making researches, with this result:

It may not be amiss here to quote from the State Gazette of Jan. 10, 1877, what it said about Leon Abbett when he was elected President of the Senate. Here are its words:

"The Senate met and effected a prompt organization yesterday forenoon. Hon. Leon Abbett, the President, is a worthy successor of General Sewell. He is a gentleman of fine abilities, of keen intelligence, of great readiness of mind, of almost boundless fertility of resource, and in every way thoroughly equipped to make an efficient presiding officer. Added to these qualities is an intense partisanship, which will make him a formidable antagonist to the Republican minority. But there is a spirit of fairness, of mutual good will, of courteous concession always brooding over the deliberations of the Senate which Mr. Abbett fully shares, and which will doubtless make the present session as pleasant in these respects as was the last."

The reproduction of this in the Gazette would be timely, but it wouldn't be convenient.

ADVICE TO A YOUNG MAN.

You will perceive, my boy, that every time a man undertakes to manufacture a little Bible on his own account, he makes a mortifying failure of it. He is caught at it, and in one-tenth of the time it took him to conceive his fraud, in as many hours as it took him months to prepare it, he is exposed, and his hand-made addition to the Bible is swept away in the rubbish of other counterfeiters. You see, my son, the Bible doesn't need any of these nineteenth century proofs of its truths; it needs the word of no man to establish its genuineness; it has stood by itself, "an anvil that has worn out many hammers," through century after century, unchanged and unchangeable.—Every time a man manufactures a new verse or a new chapter we know it is not genuine, we detect the counterfeit. The Bible has no need of the supporting prop of a fraudulent ark or a leather Deuteronomy. There was a complete Bible centuries before Shapira happened, and there will be the same Bible ages after Shapira and his patent Deuteronomy have together crumbled into indistinguishable dust. The Bible doesn't need our help, our testimony, our indorsement. And if there had never been discovered in all the world a bit of parchment, a piece of broken pottery or a scratched stone, the Bible would be just as strong as it is to-day, and men would believe just as firmly and trustfully in its truth. Don't you worry, my boy, because Shapira's ancient manuscript was written with London ink, and don't fret because the ark in the glacier turns out to be put together with Pittsburgh nails. That all the frauds on the Bible and its history are so quickly and easily detected should only convince you how impossible it is to counterfeit the work of God. Wait until some man fools us with an artificial moon; and until some philosopher stores away the sunlight in parlor lamps, before you believe that man can successfully imitate what man never made.—Burdette.

One-tenth of the population of America are Germans, and nearly one-tenth of the population of Germany is in America. The population of Germany is 45,000,000, and of the 50,000,000 of people in the United States 5,000,000 are Germans. If persons of German descent were added to the latter number the proportion of Germans to the entire population would, of course, be very much greater.

Two years ago Iowa gave 80,000 Republican majority. This year the Republican candidate for Governor scrapes through by a very few thousands, a Democratic Congressman is elected, and the Democrats get the largest representation they have ever had in the Legislature. The Republicans have been shaken even in their Gibraltar. One more such charge and the Democracy will take the citadel.

AN INFERNAL MACHINE

The latest infernal machine is described as the invention of a Bridgeport man, who says that the United States Government has refused to patent it because of its dangerous character. It consist of a brass belt, hollow and lined with steel. It is loaded with compressed air, and by a simple motion of the arm of the wearer shoots through an aperture in his vest a pellet of concentrated poison, warranted to penetrate the hide of an ox and to kill in five minutes. It is noiseless, and the hole made by the pellet in the skin of the victim is almost invisible.

THE JERSEY.

Despite the cry raised of the downfall of the Jersey the demand for that useful and becoming garment increases rather than declines, and this not only in America, but foreign fashion journals report, that it has taken a fresh impetus in Paris and London. A novelty in this garment is a plaited jersey, which is extremely becoming to slender figures and to misses, and the jersey with chenille trimmings, which comes in all the leading colors, and which is undoubtedly destined to high favor. The jersey jacket is beyond all else the favorite demi-saison wrap for young ladies, and in extra heavy weight, which may be comfortably worn late into the season or with a fur cape all winter.

POETRY.

THE FRONT GATE.

An old and crippled gate am I,
And twenty years have passed
Since I was swung up high and dry
Betwixt these posts so fast;
But now I've grown so powerful weak—
Despised by man and beast—
I'm scarcely strong enough to squeak,
Although I'm never greased.

'Twas twenty years ago, I say,
When Mr. Enos White
Came kind of hanging 'round my way
'Most every other night.
He hung upon my starboard side
And she upon the tother,
Till Susan Smith became his bride,
And in due time a mother.

I groaned intensely when I heard—
Despite I am no churl—
My doom breathed in a single word;
The baby was a girl!
And as she grew and grew and grew,
I loud bemoaned my fate;
For she was very fair to view,
And I—I was the gate!

Then, in due time, a lover came,
Betokening my ruin,
A dapper fellow, Brown by name,
The grown up baby woein';
They sprang upon me in the gloam,
And talked of moon and star;
They are married now and live at home
Along with ma and pa.

My lot was happy for a year,
No courting night or day—
I had no thought, I had no fear,
Bad luck would come my way way.
But oh! this morning, save the mark!
There came a wild surprise,
A shadow flitted grim and dark
Across my sunny skies.

A doctor, with a knowing smile,
A nurse with face serene,
A bustle in the house while,
Great Scott! what can it mean?
My hinges ache; my lock is weak,
My pickets in a whirl;
I hear that awful doctor speak:
It is another girl.

DRAWING NEAR HOME.

A PICTURE OF LIFE IN THE FAR WEST.

A Correspondent Describes The German On His New Farm.

It was a sad, sad sight in which was blended tears and laughter. On the Santa Fe train was a large family of Germans, so fresh from the ship that you could smell the steerage odor. There were fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, and a raft of little ones. Some were able to crawl up and sit on a seat; others were still at the breast. They were all bound for Neosho Valley. All were tired, hungry and worn out from a four weeks' passage. They had left crowded Germany, where they had been struggling for an existence, and they were going to their new home in the New World. If they started with any money it gave out before they reached Kansas city, for on the train they were eating black bread and salt. When the children cried for meat or something better than the stale black bread, the mothers hushed them and told them that they would soon be at Plymouth, beyond Empona, where they would meet Uncle Heinrich and Aunt Lena, and when they got out on to the farm they would all have meat and milk.

"Oh, it will be Heaven," said one of the women, "to live in a country where our children can have all the milk and meat they want!"

As the train passed Empona the poor Germans began to raise the windows and admire the beautiful country along the Santa Fe road. The next station was to be the long-hoped-for new home. The mothers, wreathed in smiles, began to wash the children for the last time, preparatory to their arrival at the new home. Then, when the rosy cheeked children were fixed, they took white handkerchiefs out of their bags and put them around their own necks. Poor women, they had but one dress on earth, but as they were going to see brothers and sisters and neighbors who had been away from Germany and living in Kansas for five years, they wanted to look as neat as they could.

"The next station is the place" said a big, healthful German, as he tied a blue handkerchief over his old soiled collar, "and here we'll never be hungry again. He my little babies can have all they want to eat."

"Will your friends meet you at the train?" I then asked, becoming very deeply interested in the poor but now happy group.

"Yes; they knew we were coming this week, and they'll be down to every train. Heinrich's farm is only two miles off."

"There they are waiting for us!" said the wife, stretching her head out of the window, and sure enough there stood a crowd of twenty American Germans on the platform as the train drew up. Soon the fathers and the mothers led the way off the train, carrying the big bundles, the children following with the dozen of little packages. As they struck the platform brothers and sisters and fathers and children came together in a long embrace. Every eye was dimmed with tears. Every voice faltered, and every throat choked with emotion. It was the pathos of great joy. But soon they wiped their tears away and began to laugh and pat and smooth each other on the back. Then the Kansas Germans led them across the street to a hotel, where a big dinner was ordered. For the first time in their lives these poor German emigrants ate beef-steak and fried eggs and cake and pie and fresh Texas cabbage. It was worth a day's travel to see these appetites appeased. I became so absorbed in this little episode that I could not keep my eyes off them. It was a scene of the most heartfelt joy I ever witnessed. I could not look at the scene without wiping away a tear myself, and I cannot speak of it now without my throat choking with emotion.

When the dinner was over they all went out and got into new lumber wagons with bright green boxes and rode out to the new home on the farm.

Having occasion to lay over in the town I rode out to the new German farm to see how the new emigrants were getting along there. I found the Kansas Germans had had them all over the farm before breakfast. When I got there they were showing their stock. The happy emigrant would put his hand on a colt's back and smooth it like a kitten. Then he would examine a harness, then take hold of a plow handle.

"This," said the Kansas brother, "is the span of horses I have got for you, John."

Then John would go up and pat them on their faces and look into their eyes.

The talk of the women in the house sounded like a school intermission. They were showing their stoves and kettles, and showing how they burned coal and wood instead of sticks, and telling how, in Kansas, everyone has all the white bread and meat they want.

"Then," said one woman, "there is no army here to take our men away. We are sure our husbands will always stay at home."

In two years these German emigrants, who looked so hungry in the cars, will own good farms. They will have horses and cows and a green wagon to ride to town in, and in ten years their farm will be worth $40 an acre. Their grandchildren will go to college, be perfect Americans, and will fill positions of honor and trust in the state.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Guardian and The Churchman of New York have been consolidated under the name of the latter.

Swinton's Story Teller, a weekly repository of choice complete tales, reaches us regularly replete with selections from past and present treasuries of fiction as well as the best original contributions obtainable from American and European writers of the first rank. Each number contains from five to seven complete stories, of imagination, love, humor, pathos, dramatic incident, and tragedy, respectively. It is published at 20 Lafayette Place, New York, at $4.00 per year.

In the North American Review for November, Senator H. B. Anthony writes of "Limited Suffrage in Rhode Island." Dr. Norvin Green, President of the Western Union Company, an article entitled "The Government and the Telegraph." The Rev. David N. Utter brings out from oblivion the record of certain alleged atrocious crimes of "John Brown of Osawatomie." There are two scientific articles, namely, "Solar Physics," by Professor Balfour Stewart, and "Modern Explosives," by Gen. John Newton. W. H. Mallock contributes "Conversations with a Solitary." In "Suggestions in regard to the Public Service," Green B. Raum offers certain facts. Finally, "Dr. Hammond's Estimate of Woman," is reviewed by Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake, Miss Nina Morais, Mrs. Sara A. Underwood and Dr. Clemence S. Lozier. Fifty cents a copy; $5 a year. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York, and sold by newsdealers generally.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine. The contents of the November number present a large variety of interesting and edifying reading, and are rich in illustrations. The opening article, by Prof. V. L. Conrad, Ph. D., "Luther and His Work," is timely and full of interest. "Lutherlana," "Albrecht Durer," "Sacred Musicians of the XIXth Century," "Providence in History," "The Apostle of Greenland," etc., etc., are notable articles. "Mr. Burke's Nieces," a charming serial, is continued, and there are short stories, sketches and essays by some of our most popular writers, lay and clerical. There are poems of great merit; the "Home Pulpit," with sermon by Dr. Talmage, "Footmen and Horses"; the "collection Basket," "Historical Facts," "Obituaries," "Editorial Comments," etc., and an abundant miscellany, amusing and instructive. The price is only 25 cents a number, or $3 a year, postpaid. Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

The B. & O. Red Book for New Jersey is the latest publication of a political character, and the first edition of the Red Book series devoted exclusively to this State. Hitherto the larger editions, embracing several States, have found their way here, and been much prized for the valuable information given. Now, however, the Red Book for New Jersey comes, and is certainly as complete, so far as the political statistics of the State are concerned, as is possible to imagine. To add to the value of the publication, a full and complete list is given of the membership of the coming U. S. Senate and House of Representatives, as well as of the last Congress, enabling the changes to be seen at a glance. It is a capital publication, even if issued by a railroad company, and sent free to all who care to write for it to C. K. Lord, Baltimore. What little advertising matter there is in it is by no means conspicuously introduced, is all confined to reading matter; not, however, of the usual monotonous style, but rather spicy than otherwise.

The Art Amateur for November gives a series of six admirable drawings by Walter Crane of the superb frieze, illustrating Longfellow's "Skeleton in Armor," recently painted by Mr. Crane for the Newport residence of Miss Catherine Wolfe. A biographical notice of this popular artist is accompanied by a portrait drawn by him from his reflection in a mirror. The designs for wood-carving, china painting, embroidery and sketching on linen are numerous and excellent. There is a profusion of hints and directions for art work, and the department of home decoration and furnishing is abundantly illustrated and filled with practical suggestions. Dramatic and operatic feuilletons form new and interesting features; the Munich, Louisville and Cincinnati exhibitions are noticed, and Montezuma's "Note Book" is as full as ever of readable paragraphs. A careful examination of this number will show that The Art Amateur's claim to be the "best practical art magazine" has a broad foundation. Price 35 cents; per year, $4. Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, N. Y.

The October Magazine of American History opens with a portrait of Sir Henry Clinton, suggestive of the Private Intelligence furnished that notable, by Americans, at Washington's elbow, in the dark days of the Revolution, and now first given to the public. These thrilling records are contributed by the generous and noble-hearted collector, Dr. Thos. Addis Emmet, with an Introduction and Notes by Edward F. De Lancey. The opening article of the magazine, superbly illustrated from original pencil sketches, by its author, Edgar Brodhead, is "A Picturesque Corner of Three States—a chapter of Indian History and Tradition." Of interest is the "Historical Sketch of Pierre and Jean Lafitte," by the accomplished historian, Hon. Chas. Gayarre. Joel Benton follows with "The Webster Spelling Book; Its Centennial Anniversary." Hon. Isaac N. Arnold contributes "Something new of Benedict Arnold and his Descendants in England;" and Hon. Horatio King describes an antique publication, called "The Yankee," established in the "town of Boston" about 1811. The department of Minor Topics contains other readable items. The Notes, Queries, Replies and Book Notices are crowded with information. Publication office, 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Life is a tiresome journey, and when a man arrives at the end he is all out of breath.

Every man who carries a pistol ought to be obliged by law to wear it in a belt at his side, and have it labeled "emotional insanity."

The Third Regiment.

The Poughkeepsie Weekly Eagle, in speaking of the Newburgh centennial, says:

"Of course, the splendid marching and soldierly bearing of the Seventh attracted general attention, and at several points it was applauded. * * * The Thirteenth and Twenty-Third, Brooklyn, and the Third New Jersey also presented a splendid appearance. In the opinion of many spectators, the Third New Jersey was fully equal to the Seventh in alignment and marching."

Girls Who Shouldn't Wear Jerseys.

The Cincinnati Enquirer gives the following reason what certain girls shouldn't wear Jerseys: Why do unshapely girls wear Jerseys? Blessed if I can tell you. This very day I saw a living skeleton showing herself in a stockinet waist, which revealed every bone in her body. Not only could the joints be located with the naked eye, but from hips to vertebræ the articulation was perfectly visible. She would have been useful as an illustration to use in teaching a class in anatomy—the embryo doctors must put up with unpleasant sights, I suppose—but as a fashionable and voluntary exhibit she was incomprehensible.

Copp's U. S. Salary List and Civil Service Rules. Our many readers will welcome the solid information contained in the 160 pages of this recently-issued book. It is prepared by Henry N. Copp, a lawyer of Washington, D. C. All the Government salaries are given from President Arthur's $50,000 to postmasters with $500, officials of the Treasury, Interior, Ward and Navy Departments, Custom Houses, post offices, and fully 20,000 federal offices arranged by States and Territories. State Agricultural Society.

The Board of Directors of the State Agricultural Society held their quarterly meeting at the Board of Trade Rooms in Newark last week, the President, Hon. Amos Clark, Jr., in the chair. The Treasurer, Samuel Manning, made a financial report showing that the receipts for the year were $31,179 96, of which $27,638 51 were for the fair, and $4,179 96 from other sources.

The disbursements were $20,478 01, of which $14,522 75 were for expenses of the fair, including premiums, $2,250 for liabilities paid, $2,550 unpaid bills, and $1,155 26 for miscellaneous expenses, leaving a cash balance on hand of $11,340 46. After some discussion a dividend of ten per cent., covering the past two years, was declared payable.

Bishop Wigger's Visitation.

Right Rev. Winand Michael Wigger, D. D., Bishop of Newark, has issued a circular to the churches of his diocese, informing them when, within the next three months, he will visit them. The dates assigned for visiting the churches in this city and county are as follows: December 10, St. Mary's, Elizabeth; December 11, St. Michael's, Elizabeth; December 12, St. Henry's, Elizabeth; December 15, St. Patrick's, Elizabeth; January 13, St. Michael's, Cranford, and Holy Trinity, Westfield; January 14, St. Mary's, Plainfield; January 15, St. Mary's, Rahway; January 16, St. Mark's, Rahway. On these occasions Bishop Wigger will address the congregations and impart the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. He will celebrate mass at seven o'clock the next morning, and administer, when necessary, the Sacrament of Confirmation.

A Ghost.

We learn from the Journal of that city that Elizabeth has a ghost as well as Rahway. It is said to haunt Jefferson Park. Officer Peters has seen it, Mr. George Loveland is reported to have seen it, Mr. Badge Hall is said to have given up lighting lamps in that locality because he saw it, and officer Sloan thinks he saw it one night quite recently. He describes it as neither white nor black, but a kind of a luminous fawn color, like a Jersey cow with a light inside, but in shape very much like the regulation ghost. It moves with a gliding motion up and down among the trees of the park, but never comes near the iron railing or the iron fence around the iron fountain. It seems to have a dread of that useful metal. There is a great discrepancy of judgment in regard to its size; some say it is ten feet high, others that it is not half that size. The police have quit patrolling the park, and go around by way of the railroad track.

An Englishman After Bass.

A telegram was received last Saturday by Eugene G. Blackford at Fulton Market, New York, asking whether permission had been given an Englishman, representing the Marquis of Exeter, to draw a seine in Greenwood Lake, N. J., for the purpose of obtaining 20,000 black bass to stock English waters. Mr. Blackford informed a Tribune reporter that the Englishman was a Mr. Silk, who obtained a couple of hundred bass last year to be used as he now desired to use the large quantity. Mr. Blackford added that the permission had not been given Mr. Silk, and that it would not be given. Since, however, the Englishman succeeded in securing 11,000 young black bass from the lake, which he shipped to England against the wishes and protests of those who had spent money to stock the lake. The entire procedure was wrong. The Englishman had no business to take the bass. Four arrests have been made of parties assisting Silk to capture the young bass.

Life is like a pack of cards. Childhood's best cards are hearts; youth is won by diamonds; middle age is conquered with a club, while old age is raked in by a spade.

An American laundry has been started in Mexico and the inhabitants are so tickled with the idea that they think of suspending work and going to bed for a week to have their clothes washed.

WILLIAM B. McMURTRY,
Of Bernards Township.

FOR MEMBER OF ASSEMBLY,
JOHN VETTERLEIN,
Of North Plainfield Township.

LOOK OUT!

Democrats, and all favorable to the election of Leon Abbett for Governor, should be on the alert from now to election day, for base slanders issued by the Republicans in the shape of campaign documents, against the Democratic candidate for Governor. His enemies will endeavor by this last resort, to induce, by their lies, to turn the independent voter away from Abbett.

DON'T BELIEVE THE SLANDERS.

VOTE FOR LEON ABBETT.

ATTENTION! VOTERS!

The selection of a properly qualified citizen to fill the responsible position of Governor is your important duty on Tuesday next.

The Democratic party presents such a candidate in the person of LEON ABBETT, of Hudson.

For him, not only every Democrat, but every independent Republican and non-partisan voter can with honor and safety cast a ballot.

Because, Mr. Abbett has within himself abilities for the prompt and faithful performance of every statesman obligation.

He is practically conversant with the entire routine of State affairs.

He is esteemed by all who enjoy his personal acquaintance, whether Democrats or Republicans, a gentleman of sterling integrity, moral worth, and genial frankness.

As Governor he will make the general public welfare his constant official aim, regardless of clique or combination.

With him grasping monopolists, corrupt tricksters, and lordly aristocrats will find no favor.

He will champion the best interests of all the people fearless of every foe.

Strict economy, accountability and equity will control his administration, and the credit of New Jersey and the rights of each individual citizen be unflinchingly maintained.

VOTE FOR
LEON ABBETT.

VOTE FOR LEON ABBETT.

Rarely, if ever, has a candidate for public office been more shamefully slandered than Leon Abbett, the nominee of the Democratic party for Governor of New Jersey. The most atrocious and unwarranted personal abuse has been uttered against him by Republican editors and allies; even those who with upturned eyes and hatchet shaped visages prate about "mud-throwing," and his long, active and illustrious legislative record, has been by the same scribblers contorted into every imaginable species of falsification for the purpose, as they vainly thought, of deceiving the people and injuring a worthy citizen and valuable public servant.

Leon Abbett stands far above the reach of such venom dipped weapons, and the people of New Jersey know him too favorably to be misled by any falsehoods his mercenary enemies may invent and publish.

The opponents of popular rights hate Leon Abbett, and well they may, for his entire political life has been spent battling for the toiling masses.

They don't want him for Governor.

No, no! Not they!

But the people do and will elect him.

Even the established fact of his having secured for the needy employees of the Central Railroad Company their back pay, is now declared by the brazen defamers of Mr. Abbett to be a "lie."

It is a wonder that such slaughterers of truth do not deny that he ever was elected Senator from the County of Hudson to the tune of over 4,000 majority.

"It's a lie," exclaim the classic tribe of anti-mud-slingers, "because Judge Lathrop, then Receiver of the Railroad Company, wanted the men paid and so told Senator Abbett."

No doubt he did.

Judge Lathrop was an honorable and truthful man, and if alive to-day, would be an earnest advocate of the election of Leon Abbett to the Governorship—aye, one of the most sincere.

It is not a lie, but the everlasting truth, that the credit of that noble act of justice to the many poor Railroad employees belongs to Leon Abbett and no one else.

The Receiver was powerless without legislative aid.

Mr. Abbett was a State Senator, and at once applied himself diligently and intelligently to the procurement of the passage of a law making wages of employees the first lien upon the assets of that and every other defaulting corporation within the State of New Jersey.

After hard work he finally triumphed.

The law was passed, through the strenuous exertions of Senator Abbett, and in the face of violent Republican opposition, and is now on the statute book.

By direct virtue of that law, and only thereby, the employees of the Central Railroad received four hundred thousand dollars of hard earned wages due them.

IT WAS LEON ABBETT WHO GOT THEM THE MONEY.

That is the recorded TRUTH.

Every mechanic and workingman in the State of New Jersey ought to vote, as we believe they will, for

LEON ABBETT.

Truth is mighty and will prevail—
Though evil hosts her name assail.

It is not unanimous yet. Only twenty-six of the thirty-eight States have Democratic Governors.

ASSEMBLYMAN.

The Republicans have strangely nominated a gentleman for the House of Assembly whom scarcely a man, woman or child outside of the village of Scotch Plains ever saw or heard of. He is said to be a young New York lawyer who has spent his nights in a retired New Jersey hamlet for the past two or three years. He may possess more talents than Roscoe Conkling, greater military skill than General Grant, exclusiveness equal to Judge Dixon, and be as rich as Vanderbilt, for aught we and the rest of the people know about him, which is nothing. Had the Republicans offered for suffrage such familiar names as Craig A. Marsh or Joseph B. Miller, there would have been some daylight around the transaction, but to ask voters to swallow in the dark the unknown Mr. Hall is certainly proffering them a heavy dose of partisan faith. Many Republicans will manfully refuse.

The day has come when people want to see and know for whom they vote. Candidates who rely upon their majestic dignity and keep themselves aloof from the honest masses are not popular just now.

The Democratic candidate is a man of and for the people.

He is competent and trustworthy, essential qualifications for the public service, and a thousand fold more precious than high toned pride or plethoric pocket-book.

He has for long years resided within this District, associated freely with the people, and twice served them usefully in the Legislature.

He is in every particular capable and worthy to serve them again in a like capacity.

He is the right man for the position.

Vote for
DEWITT C. HOUGH.

VOTERS OF SOMERSET.

You will have an opportunity on the coming Tuesday to deposit ballots for two gentlemen, named by the Democracy in connection with important public offices, and who are eminently deserving, both on the score of character and ability, to be elected by large majorities. They are

WM. B. McMURTRY, of Bernards,
For Sheriff,
and
JOHN VETTERLEIN, of North Plainfield,
For House of Assembly.

It is needless for us to recount further the claims of these unexceptionably good candidates. Honesty and intelligence are their recommendations, and the welfare of the people demand such in preference to every other consideration.

VOTE FOR
McMURTRY AND VETTERLEIN.

Mr. Abbett's Reply to H. S. Little's Letter and Other Attacks in Relation to the Bill to Pay the Employees of the C. R. R.

[From a speech delivered at Red Bank, October 26th, 1883.]

(From Matawan Journal Report.)

After brief remarks, Col. Pintard introduced Hon. Leon Abbett, the nominee for Governor. Mr. Abbett said the frequency of his having to appear before gatherings like this made it necessary that he should leave questions of a national character, and devote his remarks more especially to the immediate canvass in which he is at present engaged. The enemy were disposed to attack him by perverting his public record, and no sooner has he disposed of one slanderous misrepresentation than another is started. He very clearly wiped away the matter of moving to strike out the name of Abraham Lincoln from the resolution introduced in the assembly just after Mr. Lincoln's second election, in which a compliment was to be paid to the soldiers and sailors. The House had a Republican majority and could have prevented the adoption of his amendment. But he showed to the House that the Democratic members, while they wanted to vote for that part of the resolution which praised the soldiers and sailors, were not ready to endorse the Republican administration, when at the polls but a few months before they had voted for George B. McClellan as against a policy of this same administration that had removed Gen. McClellan from active duty in the army. So reasonable was the amendment that even the Republican Speaker voted for it and it was adopted, and then the whole House, Democrats and Republicans, voted for the resolution praising the brave men who had bared their breasts to the storm of battle.

The Red Bank Register had asked him, in its columns, to say if he was not receiving $3,000 as Corporation Counsel of Jersey City. He answered that he was and the amount was just $1,000 less than was received by his predecessor, who was a Republican. A voice here spoke out: "Tell them who that predecessor was." Mr. Abbett replied, "Jonathan Dixon," my opponent, the present Republican candidate for Governor. Another query made by the same paper he branded as false.

He then referred to the bill introduced by him in the Senate, in 1877, to make the wages due the workmen the first lien upon the revenues of any corporation. We call the especial attention of our readers to this part of his speech which we were at pains to have reported accurately. He said: At the time the Central Railroad of New Jersey was thrown into the hands of a Receiver, there was over $400,000 due to conductors, brakemen, engineers, clerks, and even the poor women who washed the glass and swept the floor of the cars. They appointed a committee and applied to me to see if I could not secure for them relief. They and their families were suffering for the necessities of life. I was President of the Senate at the time. I went to Judge Lathrop, the Receiver of the road, and asked him if there was no way by which these people could be paid. He replied, "I want to pay these people, they ought to be paid; but the law does not give them the prior lien on the road before the bond-holders." I gave my opinion that if there was no such law there ought to be, and that the wages of employees should be over and before all other claims; that they should be paid first, and that such a law should apply to every railroad in the State. I went back to Trenton, prepared an amendment to a corporation bill then pending, and after it passed the Senate I left my seat there and went over to the House to urge the members there to rush it through. And in this I had the sympathy and friendly recognition of Judge Lathrop, the Receiver of the road.

As soon as the bill was passed and signed I made my petition to the Chancellor, and he said the bill was sufficient, and granted the order. I telegraphed these employees at once that they would receive $80,000 in three days, and the balance in installments. They offered to pay me five per cent. of their receipts for my services, but I declined it and never received from them a single cent.

A man who was at that time an employee here spoke up and said, "that's so, and I got my money." Mr. Abbett thanked the man for the endorsement and said that wherever he found these employees, whether Republican or Democrats, they have said I stood by them in their hour of trial, and they were going to stand by me on the 6th of November.

Permit me to say further, that after the matter was concluded Judge Lathrop said to me that there must have been costs connected with the conduct of this case, and that the Central Railroad ought to and was willing to pay the same. I received the amount from Receiver Lathrop in lieu of taxed costs and allowance, which I would have obtained by order of the Chancellor, if it had been necessary; but the whole matter never cost the employees a penny, and never would if the company had not paid me anything.

CANDIDATES IN NEW JERSEY.

The State election in New Jersey will occur on Tuesday, Nov. 6, when there will be elected a Governor, for three years, to succeed George C. Ludlow, Democrat; eight members of the State Senate—seven for full term of three years and one from Gloucester for one year to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Congressman-elect Thos. M. Ferrell—and 60 members of the House of Assembly. The last Legislature stood: Senate—Republicans, 12; Democrats, 9. Assembly—Republicans, 25; Democrats, 35. Of the 13 Senators who hold over 7 are Republicans and 6 Democrats. The Republicans must elect 4 of the 8 new Senators and 31 of the Assembly to secure control of the Legislature, which in joint meeting will elect a State Controller and Treasurer for three years each. The nominees for Governor are as follows:

Democrat—Leon Abbett, of Hudson.
Republican—Jonathan Dixon, of Hudson.
National—Benjamin Urner, of Union.
Prohibition—Solomon Parsons, of Union.

Mr. Dixon is a present Judge of the State Supreme Court; Mr. Abbett is a Jersey City lawyer, who has been Speaker of the Assembly and President of the State Senate, Mr. Urner was an unsuccessful candidate for Congress in the Third Congressional District last year, and Mr. Parsons is a Methodist clergyman at Summit, who was active in the temperance movement in Newark three years ago. The next Governor will appoint a Clerk in Chancery and several Judges of the State courts, besides a number of minor officers.

THE Plainfield Saengerbund's First Sociable of the season occurred Monday evening, and was an unqualified success. A large number attended and the best of good times resulted. Messrs. W. Feibel and A. Scheidler proved themselves to be very efficient floor-managers.

THERE will be given in Van Deventer Hall some time during the present month, a grand ball under the management of a former member of "The Jolly Three" who is now a happy papa. Upon this occasion the music of French Horns will be introduced for the first time in Plainfield.

THE next session of the Union County Teachers' Association will be held in Public School building No. 2, Elizabeth, N. J., on Saturday Nov. 10th, 1883, at 9:30 a. m. City Sup't Wm. N. Barringer of Newark, will address the meeting; also Principal R. A. Dunham, of Roselle, will have a talk "with the teachers."

THOMAS SULLIVAN, for burning buildings, was sentenced to three years in State Prison, in the Somerset county court last week. The court said that owing to appeal of Mr. Schomp, counsel for the prisoner, for clemency, and taking into consideration the age of Mr. Sullivan (he being over 70 years old), the sentence would be lighter than at first contemplated.

"THE tramp's rendezvous" is the term applied to a certain section of the swamp on the estate of the late Wm. B. T. Lane. In a certain sunny nook are sometimes to be found from ten to thirty tramps, some well-dressed, others in rags, gathered about a fire, eating and smoking, and enjoying themselves as only lazy people know how. Is it not possible that among this crew may be found some of the authors of recent crimes in this city. An inspection of this precinct sometime by a shrewd detective might reveal something worth knowing to our authorities.

More Truth And Poetry.

And now the merchant wary, will deem it necessary to have an advertisement, well displayed, within his local paper, for that's the proper caper by which to catch the coming Winter trade.

This Evening.

The Rev. George L. Prentiss, D. D., will be present at the services at the Crescent avenue church this (Friday) evening, and make an address. His wife, Mrs. Prentiss, is well-known to all as the author of "Stepping Heavenward."

Middlesex Courts.

In the case of the State vs. LeGrande Fulton, of Dunellen, for keeping a disorderly house, the jury on Tuesday last found Fulton guilty, and the court imposed on him a fine of $100 and costs.

Deserving of Thanks.

Councilman Polak, we hope, will be as successful in securing the adoption of his Foot-ways and Side-walks Ordinance, as he was in procuring an appropriation for lettering the street lamps. The public will again have cause to sincerely thank him.

In the Cause of Temperance.

The First Baptist church was crowded, Sunday evening, upon the anniversary of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Plainfield. Ex-Gov. St. John, of Kansas, a champion of the cause, spoke, besides which were other features of interest.

Another Change.

Mr. John G. Staats, who has recently so successfully conducted the drug business at No. 21 West Front street as the successor of William H. Voorhees, has now been succeeded by Mr. Charles A. Butler, a young man of experience and business ability.

A Suitable Gift.

Mr. Vermeule, the hatter, on Front street, is making a specialty this season of ladies' Seal Skin sacques and dolmans, several of which he has disposed of thus far. They are genuine fur and may be purchased at reasonable figures. The ladies should call and view them.

Collecting Cabbages.

During Saturday night last or early Sunday morning, a thief or thieves entered the garden lot of Mr. Chas. McGinley, on East Third street, and stole about twenty-five heads of his best cabbage. It is hoped that our police will be successful in capturing the thieves and "reward" them with the full penalty of the law.

Broke Jail.

"Jimmy" Morrow and Wm. Rielly, the former a pocket-book snatcher, serving terms in the County Jail at Elizabeth, took French leave of that institution on Monday afternoon last about four o'clock, by cutting the bars from the window in the basement of the jail with the aid of steam fitter's tools which were left lying around loose.

A Septuagenarian.

About twenty of the descendants of Jasper G. Cadmus, Esq., of La Grande avenue, united with Mrs. Cadmus, last Tuesday, in surprising that gentleman by assembling at his residence and celebrating by a happy reunion his seventieth birth-day. None present was in better health or feeling younger than he they honored.

Plainfield "Objects."

According to his "little piece" in this week's Central Times, one of the Chemical Engine Co., of Westfield wants us to say, "the result was more of a success than the way the visitors were entertained by Zephyr H. & L. Co." That kind of a man doesn't deserve to be "entertained" by anybody. But there are no more like him in his company.

To Be Repeated.

The entertainment given by Prof. Bradford Williams and wife at the Warren Mission Chapel, Monday evening, was quite well attended considering the unpleasant weather. On Monday evening next there will be a repetition of the affair with an entire change of programme. All desiring to aid the good cause of the Mission, would do so and be entertained as well, by attending.

And Still Another.

R. Esterbrook, Esq., the well-known pen manufacturer of New York, has given to Messrs. Isaac W. Pangborn and John Chandler the contracts for the building of a $40,000 residence for himself on Franklin place. Mr. Esterbrook has been living with his daughter, Mrs. Francis Wood, nearly opposite the new site—one of the finest in the city. Mr. Oscar S. Teale is the architect.

John H. French.

Many wonder why the American Flag, the emblem of Liberty, floats over the reconstructed edifice on Front street, known as the Old Post Office Building. The reason is that Plainfield's Clothier, John H. French, has taken possession of that edifice and opened therein with a large stock of fashionable goods suitable for Fall and Winter wear. Mr. French's well-known reputation for guaranteeing a first-class suit, equal in style, finish and price to New York houses, is sufficient inducement to the public to patronize him.

$2,500 Scared Out.

The sale of the real estate recently advertised in the official papers of the city for taxes of 1882 was concluded by the Collector last Wednesday, all being sold with the exception of a few pieces, the locations of which were not so designated as to be distinguishable. In one instance the holder of a mortgage on the property bought it, but in all other cases the city became the holder for 30 years. Since the beginning of the preliminary advertisement, fully one-half (about $2,500) of the amount delinquent has been paid; almost all of which—we feel safe in assuming—is a "clear gain."

A Complimentary Entertainment.

Saturday evening of last week the Park House was a scene of life. Its three large and connecting parlors were crowded with the best of Plainfield's society, its long halls were promenaded by the city's elite, while the extending piazzas outside and even the walk in front were occupied by scores of the more retired though not less curious. The occasion was an entertainment and hop arranged by Mr. C. L. Johnson, the proprietor of the Hotel, for the enjoyment of his many friends; and in every particular it was a complete success. Prof. Burdette favored the guests with his elocutionary abilities, and in return received their enthusiastic appreciation. The very best of music followed, which rendered desired service to the many fine dancers present.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Meeting of the Board of the Ladies' Auxiliary on Monday afternoon next at four o'clock.

The song meeting which is held on Sunday evenings from 6:30 to 7:15 is free to all young men.

Young Men's meeting on Monday night will be in charge of the General Secretary. All young men are invited.

The Debating and Literary Society will meet next Tuesday evening at eight o'clock. Every member is requested to be present.

The Bible study is well attended at present, yet the room will contain more. Strangers in the city are cordially welcome to this service.

The annual meeting of the Association will be held next Thursday evening, Nov. 8th, at 8 o'clock. At this meeting will occur the election of officers and board of directors for 1884. Every member of the Association ought to attend this meeting. Remember you are interested in the work that your aid is needed at this meeting.

The Last Rites.

The funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Joseph Titsworth, whose terrible illness followed by death had appealed to the sympathies and saddened the hearts of almost the entire community, took place at her late residence during Sunday afternoon last. Her pastor, the Rev. A. H. Lewis, officiated, and the services were in accordance with a written memorandum left by the deceased expressing her desires in relation to the music and other arrangements. The large attendance expressed the esteem and admiration in which the deceased was held, as did also more apparently the magnificent and costly floral emblems that were profusely displayed. Among these latter were a large bed of blossoms in which the colors outlined a music staff and the six notes of "Safe in the arms of Jesus"; a gate-way with the "Gates Ajar"; a pillow; a crown; a harp and a lyre with broken strings; and a broken column surmounted by a dove about to fly. The flowers representing the purity of the deceased's past and the emblems portraying that which had begun.

The Only Proper Course.

And now comes another hitch in the progress of planning the building to front the new Opera House. Plans were at first prepared to suit those paying for them, but these, after suggested and accomplished alterations, have failed to please the Music Hall Committee in exterior or the Y. M. C. A. Trustees in interior. The executors of the Stillman estate are, however, only allowed to expend just so much—they cannot put a mortgage upon any of the real estate—so the funds necessary to build at greater expense will have to be subscribed, unless the Music Hall Association takes the only proper course—purchases the lot and erects the building itself.

St. Mary's Fair.

The ladies of St. Mary's church will open their next Fair in St. Mary's Hall, on the 15th inst., when the managers, besides the display usual on such occasions, promise many novelties in the way of special entertainments for each evening. Gentlemen possessing tokens of their popularity voted at former fairs, will no doubt remember the help received from the ladies and return the compliment this time, as the ladies alone are competitors. The contests so far announced are three: one for a diamond ring, with the friends of Miss Annie Sullivan and Miss Maggie Flynn working hard for their favorites; an elegant gold watch, which seems destined to go to either Miss Teresa Collins, Miss Maria Kelly or Miss Bridget Harkins, and a silver ice-water pitcher, for which Mrs. Bernard Brady, Mrs. Wm. Sullivan, Mrs. Patrick Day and Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, are the leading candidates.

Lost and Found.

A farmer living on the Springfield road back of Scotch Plains, heard a child crying in the darkness and storm of Monday evening. He brought the lost one into his house intending to keep it over night, but his wife, who could appreciate the terrible suspense and fears of its mother, persuaded him to endeavor to find its home that night. The child—a lad of about 10 years—said his name was Irving Church and that his father lived on Duer street North Plainfield. His finder brought him to that place in his carriage, and stopping a man he met on the street asked if he knew where Mr. Church lived. The one he questioned proved to be Mr. P. M. Demarest, the grandfather of the lost one, who was engaged at that moment with a number that had long been looking for the lad. The joy of all at the recovery can be imagined. The lad had strayed away in the storm, and afterwards wandered miles in search of his home.

Personalia.

Mr. N. W. Pike, wife and child, of this city, will sail to-day for Savannah, Ga., to be absent several weeks. They will visit their eldest son in that city.

The many friends and acquaintances of Charles Zukschwert, formerly of Plainfield, will learn with pleasure of his convalescence from a protracted and serious illness of typhoid fever.

Dr. William C. Boone has at last been enabled to secure a short vacation, which he is spending in Virginia and Maryland, visiting his parents and shooting the toothsome canvas-back.

Miss Nettie Mattison has accepted a situation as music teacher in a seminary at New Canaan, Conn. She left last Saturday for her new field of labor and has already entered upon her duties. Miss Mattison will be sadly missed by the Trinity Reformed Church in its Sunday School and mid-week meetings. She was also the faithful teacher of the infant Sunday School class for the last three years. Miss M. is a very capable and thorough pianist and we have no doubt of her success. The best wishes of her many warm friends follow her.

A Little One.

The residence of Mr. Samuel Huntington on Franklin Place, was entered by tramps or amateur sneak thieves, last Monday night, and a small amount of property stolen. The tenants who had occupied the premises during the past season, moved out during Monday, leaving the back door open for the entrance of the groceryman who brought a quantity of goods for the family of Mr. Huntington who arrived Tuesday. Mr. Wallace, living next door, noticed in Mr. Huntington's just after midnight a light that flashed up and then seem to go out. He called up his neighbor, Mr. Wood, but while they were dressing a wagon was heard to drive away in which is supposed to have been taken the missing goods. The selection of articles seem to imply that the thieves intended going to housekeeping. There were taken, all Mr. Huntington's Winter clothes, a looking glass, a mattress, a clock, some rugs and a little silver ware. At the foot of the stairway was found a partly burned mattress and the presence near of a broken lamp and signs of flames extinguished, lead some to suppose there was an attempt made to burn the house. Such a theory seems without cause. It is probable that on coming down the stairs with the mattress and carrying a lamp, somebody tripped and fell, causing the flashing light seen by Mr. Wallace and accounting for the burned materials. A colored man called "Jumbo" Lewis has been arrested on suspicion of being concerned in the affair.

A Correction.

Through some means there was an egregious error in our last issue regarding the game laws. An item stated that "no resident was allowed to shoot or fish in this State without first complying with the By-laws of Game Protective Societies." The item should have read "no non-resident." The following is the law on the subject:

CHAPTER CLXXXIV.

An Act for the protection of Game and Game Fish.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That from and after the passage of this act, no person or persons non-residents of this state, shall kill, destroy, hunt or take any doe, buck, fawn or any other sort of deer whatsoever, or shall kill, destroy, hunt or take any partridge, moor fowl, ruffed grouse, quail, woodcock, Wilson or gray snipe, reed bird, rail bird, or rabbit, at any time, or shall catch any speckled brook trout, or speckled river trout, black bass or salmon, at any time in this state, without complying with the by laws of the game protective societies, organized or to be organized under the laws of this state; the person so offending shall forfeit and pay the sum of fifty dollars for each and every offence, and may be proceeded against in any county in this state wherein such person or persons may be arrested, or wherein such offence shall have been committed, and in default of the payment of the forfeit money, with costs and prosecution, any person or persons so offending shall lie in the common jail until the same shall be paid; one-half of the forfeit money shall be for the benefit of the person prosecuting for the same, and the remainder paid to the collector of the township wherein the conviction may be had. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act, are hereby repealed; providing, that nothing in this act, shall prevent residents of this state from taking game or fish, subject to the existing laws of this state.

2. And be it enacted, That any member of any society for the protection of game and fish, organized under the laws of this state, shall be empowered to make arrests of any person or persons who may be found violating any of the provisions of this act, or infringing any of the laws of this state made for the protection of game and fish, and bring him or them before a magistrate for examination.

3. And be it enacted, That the county clerks of the several counties of this state be, and they are are hereby directed to keep in their respective offices a record of the members of any game and fish protective societies organized under the laws of this state, and shall upon the payment of twenty-five cents furnish to said members as aforesaid, a certificate under his seal certifying to said membership.

4. And be it enacted, That this act shall be a public act and shall take effect immediately.

Approved April 4, 1878.

Foot Racing.

The race track of the U. & M. C. M. A. Association, was occupied one morning recently by a number of the young bloods of this city and their friends, the events that had attracted them being a number of closely contested foot-races. The first between Messrs. Thomas Coler and Charles Smith, was won by the former with ten yards start. Mr. William W. Reynell defeated Mr. Ellis Campbell in another race, and Mr. James Farley distanced Everett Marsh, "with his hands down," as a wind up. There was considerable money wagered on the result, and more changed hands than during the late fair.

Death of An Old And Respected Citizen.

The following, taken from the Unionist-Gazette should have appeared in our last issue. Mr. Garretson's death occurred on the 21st of October:

"Ex-Freeholder Henry H. Garretson died without a moment's warning on Sunday morning last at his home at his son-in-law's, Mr. Auten's, four miles south of Somerville. He was sitting at the breakfast table and remarked that it was twenty-five minutes to nine, and time to get ready for church. As he pushed his chair back from the table he threw up his hand and sank downward. Help immediately came, but, without a word or gasp, he died—instantaneously, as it were. He was troubled last winter with violent erysipelas, and it has been thought that might have been a cause of death, but no examination has been deemed necessary. Mr. Garretson has been long and invariably known as a good farmer, and kind neighbor. He was in public life only as Freeholder from 1875 to 1877, but it was distasteful to him as he was most content on his farm. He was a member of the First Reformed Church, and had been an elder. He leaves a family of five children, three of them married. J. Bern Garretson, Esq., of this place, Freight Agent; Jeremiah Garretson at Plainfield, and Richard Garretson, of St. Louis, are his sons. The shock of so sudden a death has cast a gloom over the neighborhood and the church of which he was a member, as well as among his immediate family, who have lost a kind father."

Camp Fire and Reception.

The fraternal visit of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, of this city, to the camp fire and reception given them by Winchester Post, No. 197, of Brooklyn, New York, was a most pleasant and enjoyable affair on Friday evening last. About forty comrades took the 5:48 p. m., train, connecting with the Erie Annex ferry-boat and at their landing on the Brooklyn side were met by a delegation from Winchester Post, accompanied by a drum corps and escorted to Grand Central Hall, where a large number of comrades had already assembled. A "roaring log-fire" had been kindled and "rails" were ready in abundance to keep aglow the flames of twenty years ago. Over the grand-stand in gas jets were the words, "Welcome Comrades." Long tables were ranged across the Hall with seats enough to accommodate 350 guests at one sitting with reserved seats for Winfield Scott Post, with their name over the table. A large portrait of the old General occupied a prominent place on the wall. After a piano duett-overture —"White Lady"—singing by Mr. Robert Connor and music by Comrade J. M. Loretzy, the great organist and composer of Brooklyn, a neat and appropriate speech of welcome was given by comrade Robert Payne, candidate for District Attorney for the city. But now the scene changes at the tap of the "pondrous log," (gavel), the covers were lifted and revealed "old soldier's delight," (pork and beans) together with many other substantials and delicacies. The cup that inebriates was conspicuous by its absence, so the world is making progress after all. The order "fall in" did not have to be repeated. Ample provision had been made and ample justice was done. Segars that "wooden't" burn, with pipes and tobacco in old-fashioned style were passed and proved a solace to many an old love. The time from now until eleven o'clock was occupied by speech-making, reading, music, songs, a feast of reason and flow of soul. Commander Coutan in his pleasant and dignified manner maintained order and called upon the different comrades for contributions to the entertainment in their own way. Post Dept.-Commander Frazee made interesting remarks as did many others. On the part of Winfield Scott Post, Commander Mattison replied to the welcome in some interesting and well-timed remarks, followed by Adjutant Randolph in one of his characteristic and witty speeches. At eleven o'clock the assembly call was sounded when Winchester Post and visiting comrades, with drums beating and flags flying, escorted Winfield Scott Post to the ferry, where, after much hand-shaking, many cheers and good wishes they parted, all glad of the evening thus spent but all regretting it being so short. They arrived in this city at 1:30 a. m., without accident and stand ready to vote yes for Winchester Post every time.

K. of P. Reception.

The members of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74 K. of P., received about two hundred of their friends at their Castle Hall, Friday evening last. The appearance of their already beautiful hall, was considerably improved by the addition of a large and exquisitely finished frame, containing portraits of all the members of the Lodge; from the studio of Mr. Langhorn of this city; and one of the most ornamental, useful and costly stoves that could be furnished by Carney Bro's, of Somerset street. At a few minutes after eight p. m. the officers occupied their respective positions and the proceedings commenced by singing the opening ode of the order. The chairman, J. Patterson, C. C., then made a few appropriate introductory remarks, after which, a solo on the piano was given by Miss Lilienstern. Miss Lila Denie recited "John Maynard." Misses Harbie and Stewart gave a duet on the piano, which was encored and responded too. Ph. Jackson, V. C., gave a recitation entitled "Damon and Pythias;" J. Patterson, C. C., sang "The Slave Chase." J. H. Carney, P. C., recited a parody on "Sheridan's Ride," which was excellent created much laughter. A solo was then given on the piano by Mrs Williams, after which Prof. Williams exhibited a number of facial representations of prominent characters and recited "Lord Dundreary's Hunting Expedition," creating roars of laughter. Mrs. Williams and Mr. Rogers gave a flute and piano duet, which was encored and responded to. A selection from Meredith was recited by Miss Mortin in a thorough manner, after which a duet was given on the piano by Misses Harbie and Stewart. B. Force, P. C., gave a recitation from Longfellow, entitled "The Famine." Miss Lilienstern and a friend volunteered a duet; following this a recitation "The Curfew" was given by Miss Denie. The guests were then conducted to the Temperance Hall adjoining, where a palatable supper, which reflected much praise on the managing committee, was provided. After supper the guests returned to the hall, which, in the meantime, had been cleared of its furniture, and indulged in the well selected programme of round and square dances, to the music supplied by Prof. Frazee, until the early hours of the morning.

It is worthy of note that the above is one of the strongest and most energetic lodges of the order in the State of New Jersey, having increased its membership nearly fifty this year. It now musters upwards of one hundred and fifty members, representing a body of young men in our midst whose industry, energy, and thrift, qualifies them to perform the functions of true citizenship, and makes them well worthy of all the honors of Fythian Knighthood. The Committees on the occasion were as follows:

Floor Manager—Wm. VanSickle.

Assistants—M. Cronce, J. F. Wakefield

Com. of Arrangements—Thos. Casco, W. T. Walker.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Republican candidate for Assembly, David P. Hall, was in our town on Saturday evening. He made his headquarters at the post office.

The regular monthly meeting of the S. & E. Co. No. 1, will be held on next Monday evening at Town Rooms. There ought to be a full attendance, as business of importance will come before the meeting.

The Rev. J. R. Thompson, of Brooklyn, is advertised to deliver a lecture in the M. E. church on Monday evening next. Subject—"The Sovereignty of Manhood." Mr. Thompson is a very popular lecturer and is deserving of a full house.

On Saturday evening last, a portion of the fence and gates in front of the public school house on Prospect street, were broken and destroyed. The Trustees held a meeting and offered a reward of $25 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who so wantonly destroyed public property.

Our town has been very quiet politically ever since the nominations were made. Both parties seem to be making a still hunt. The probabilities are that they both will be disappointed on election night, as a large number of the voters on both sides hardly know when election occurs, as there have been no meetings, speeches, etc., as we usually have in a Gubernatorial campaign. The Republicans claim about 70 majority, which no doubt will be very nearly the result.

About two weeks ago Elizabeth Stedley, wife of Joseph Stedley, residing on Central avenue, in our town, was taken ill. Her husband went for Dr. Cooper to attend her. Upon his visit at the house she told him she was suffering from kidney disease. The doctor prescribed for her. She, after a few days grew worse, and a neighbor telegraphed to New Providence for her aunt, Mrs. McNair, who came down and took her to her residence at New Providence. After her arrival at her aunt's, she told her she had been beaten and ill-used by her husband and his brother. Dr. Cooper again visited her and found her covered with bruises. She grew rapidly worse and died on Sunday afternoon. Dr. Cooper wisely refused to give a permit for burial, and notified officer Marsh, who together with County Physician Terrill, went to New Providence on Monday morning. Upon an investigation by the County Physician, he deemed an inquest necessary, and ordered Coroner Lowrie to summon a jury. On Monday afternoon the aunt, Mrs. McNair, made a complaint before Justice Jaques of Westfield, against the husband, Joseph Stedley, and George, his brother. The warrant was placed in the hands of officer Marsh, who arrested the parties and lodged them in jail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Dr. Lowrie had a jury summoned and sworn in on Monday afternoon. On Tuesday morning they went to New Providence and viewed the body, and adjourned to meet Nov. 8, at Westfield. County Physician Terrill, Coroner Lowrie and Dr. Cooper made a post mortem examination, the result of which will be made known before the jury at their meeting. The following gentlemen compose the jury: Joseph Moffett, James E. Burtis, Matthew Beiler, Henry Miller, Wm. H. Edgar, Harry Edwards, John L. Roulstone, Frank Demming, Wm. Stitt.

Leon Abbett's Letter of Acceptance.

The following is Leon Abbett's letter of acceptance of the Democratic candidacy for Governorship, which we reproduce in our columns.

GENTLEMEN—I am deeply sensible of the honor conferred upon me by the Democratic Convention in nominating me for the office of Governor of the State of New Jersey.

I accept the nomination, and shall endeavor to secure a victory so decisive that it shall embrace in its triumphs the Legislature as well as the Executive.

I endorse the platform of the party; and as Governor, I shall feel bound by it in the administration of the State affairs.

I deem it proper to emphasize and supplement some of its declarations of principle and action.

The tariff resolutions meet with my hearty approval.

The manufactures and workingmen should remember that it was the vote of a Democratic United States Senator from this State that saved the industries of New Jersey during the last session of Congress.

The tariff is a subject for national and not for a State legislation, and the Governor has no power to act upon it; but if my efforts can influence legislation on that subject, no mill, factory or workshop in the State of New Jersey shall be closed, and no workman thrown out of employment.

Referring to the question of convict labor, I am opposed to contracts which give the profits of the labor of criminals to contractors. All the profit that can be derived from their labor should be paid directly into the treasury. Such a policy would not only be just to the State, but it would also protect the manufacturer and mechanic from unfair competition. Give criminals employment, but not at the expense of honest labor. I do not want in New Jersey busy prisons, and empty workshops.

I shall favor all measures which tend to improve the condition of the workingman.

The agricultural interests of the State will at all times command my earnest attention, and every measure tending to the encouragement and protection of this industry will receive my approval.

The fisheries, and all other interests and industries in our State, which provide food and employment for our citizens, should be fostered and encouraged.

The prudent and economical management of the affairs of the State by the present Democratic administration, has relieved the people from the burden of a direct State tax. I approve of this policy, and such tax shall never be imposed with my consent.

Officials, when appointed by the Executive, owe their duty to the whole State, and the paramount consideration in selecting men for positions, should be to secure an efficient public service.

I believe in local self-government, and am opposed to the creation or continuance of Legislative Commissions.

I favor the simplest and most economical form of government for city, borough, town or township. Where complicated and expensive forms of municipal government still exist, they should be abolished, and there should be substituted a simple form, with legislative limitations upon the power of taxation, and the creation of debt: so that neither extravagance nor corruption shall be able to impose heavy burdens upon the people.

My views upon the subject of taxation of corporations was clearly and fully expressed in the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State, offered by me May 17th, 1881, as a member of the Constitutional Commission. I earnestly urged the adoption of these amendments, which will be found fully reported in the proceedings printed by the State in 1882. At that time I advocated among others the following:

1. "That the real and personal estate of every corporation, foreign and domestic, except that of municipal corporations of this State, shall be taxed the same as the real and personal estate of an individual, and all laws that establish a different rule are hereby repealed.

2. That no law shall be passed, or contract made by or on behalf of the State, or any municipal corporation, by which the power of taxation shall in any way be impaired or abridged."

I am now, as then, in favor of equal taxation for all—corporations and individuals.

I am opposed to monopolies of every kind. I believe in equal rights for all, and exclusive privileges for none.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen of the Committee, your obedient servant,

LEON ABBETT.

A Rare Offer.

Attention is directed to an advertisement in this issue of the sale of valuable building lots on Hillside avenue. Many persons recollect how disappointed they were in not purchasing building lots in North Plainfield, sold at auction about one year ago. The present sale is one of as great importance. The property is eligibly situated and valuable, and must be sold to the lowest bidder. Attend this sale by all means.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

Our Candidate.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—The convention at Plainfield on the 26th inst., did well in nominating the Hon. DeWitt C. Hough for Member of Assembly for this District. He is well-known to the people, and twice before have they commissioned him to represent them in the Legislature, where, his record was honorable to himself and a credit to his constituents; but he has a noble record beyond that. While his opponent, Mr. Hall, was coaxing Coke and Blackstone cosily by the fireside, Dr. Hough was fighting for the Union on the tented field. He is highly respected by those of his comrades who survive, for the kindness and bravery displayed in his military position. If our Republican friends carry out the principles they profess they cannot but support a loyal defender of his country, who has proven himself a gallant soldier in war and an able and honest legislator in peace, always interested in public matters, and well-posted in whatever is necessary for the best interests of the people of this Assembly District. On the other side, who is, or what is known of his opponent? We are informed by the New York Tribune that he has a Mother-in-law, a highly respected and talented lady, but just "How" this fits him for a representative of the Third District of Union county we fail to see. He has resided within this State only a short time and is known but by few people, and is certainly ignorant of New Jersey public affairs. He is a lawyer and it is thought by many that the least number of that honored profession we have in our Legislature the better for the people. He may have the talents of a Webster or Clay, but he has no record in Union county to entitle him to be a representative of the people. Our candidate we can proudly say has a record, and deserves the support of all who desire honest and capable men to serve them in the Legislature.

Somers' antidote to malaria is the only remedy approaching a specific against malarial ailments. It has cured more chills and fever, or malaria in other forms, than any known remedy. Its popularity originates from the cures it has made; not from advertising. It advertises itself. A. Field, of A. Field and Sons, 78 Chambers street, New York, writes: "It has cured my children of malaria, and me, of an obstinate dyspepsia."

Oh, what a cough!—Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourself if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cents, to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will Cure your Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup, and Whooping Cough at once. Mothers do not be without it. For Lame Back, Side, or Chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

COMPARISONS ARE ODIOUS.

There is no authentic case on record of a Niagara hackman having gone over the falls. In fact the falls are absolutely good for nothing but to look at; whereas the "Palmetto Pliable Plasters" are more useful than ornamental; they eclipse all other so-called remedies. Try them once. All first-class druggists keep them.

Dr. Foord's Tonic Cordial is a splendid medicine for children as well as adults. Read the following letter from a well-known citizen of Syracuse: "Wm. L. Palmer, Syracuse, N. They take it so well, and its effects are so decided, that I take pleasure in speaking of it in terms of the highest praise."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

WE ENDORSE HIM BECAUSE WE KNOW HIM.

Under the above caption the following appears in the Matawan Journal, Hon. David A. Bell, editor. Mr. Bell was also Private Secretary to Hon. George C. Ludlow when he was President of the Senate, and also represented the second district of Monmouth in the sessions of 1881-'82:

WE ENDORSE HIM BECAUSE WE KNOW HIM.

"The editor of this paper desires to make a personal endorsement of Hon. Leon Abbett, as a reason, independent of party sentiment, why he supports him in his candidacy for Governor.

In the legislative session of 1877, when Mr. Abbett was elected President of the State Senate, he appointed us his Private Secretary. Holding this position brought us into intimate relations with him in his legislative life, and our duties made it necessary that we should be in his presence when matters not intended for the public would be under discussion. Since then, by the favor of the people, we have associated and been thrown more in contact with men in public and legislative positions, and the comparison of Mr. Abbett as it has been our privilege to know him, with other legislators and other men as it has been our privilege to know them, makes us realize his marked ability and to feel an earnest hope—and we are glad that it is based on a positive belief—that Mr. Abbett will be the next Governor of New Jersey; for a more thorough man, more utterly devoid of the 'jelly fish' spirit we have never met. And this characteristic is the more marked, the closer the acquaintance is formed; so that while he is genial, he is positive; while he is polite, he is prompt, and while he is with the masses in sympathy of national sentiment, he is a leader in thought that the masses love to listen to and follow."

THAT LINCOLN RESOLUTION.

The Republican press of the State, in a vain effort to get up a "bloody shirt" campaign, grows anxious over the fact that Leon Abbett, while in the Legislature, moved and voted to strike the name of Abraham Lincoln from the resolution of thanks to the officers and soldiers of the army. Mr. Abbett, in a speech in Jersey City lately, thus alluded to the charge:

"I have no time, nor is it worth my while, to answer all the falsehoods that my Republican enemies have uttered against me. But one of them deserves attention. I am charged with having moved, when in the Legislature, to strike out the name of Abraham Lincoln from a resolution thanking him and the Union Generals and soldiers. I did move to strike out Lincoln's name, because I said that while we were willing to recognize the great merit of, and express our gratitude to, the soldiers who had fought so bravely for our liberties in the field, I was not prepared to let politics enter into the subject. I said that the object of inserting Mr. Lincoln's name in the resolution was simply to procure by trickery an endorsement of the Republican Administration and its head. My motion was adopted in a Republican House by a vote of 27 to 2, and the resolution was then passed unanimously. So much for this collapsed charge."

The Monmouth County Republican Convention nominated Sherman B. Oviatt of Ocean Beach for County Clerk.

"I'm going to turn over a new leaf," as the caterpillar remarked when he had successfully ruined the one he was on.

A farmer's wife in Iowa once being much troubled with "rats" stealing her pies and cakes, her husband set a spring trap for the offenders and caught the hired man.

Out of 3,361 specimens of wine submitted to analysis in Paris the other day, only 357 were pronounced genuine, but the same amount of champagne, cognac, claret, etc., will be sold as usual in the United States. Here is consolation for the steady wine drinker.

A single locomotive is now being built in the Sacramento car shops of the Central Pacific Railroad which will be larger than any ever before built in the world. The weight of the engine will be seventy-three tons; weight on drivers sixty-four tons; weight of tender twenty-five tons; weight of engine and tender when fully equipped for the road, one hundred and five tons. The length of engine and tender will be sixty-five feet and five inches.

Garret S. Boice, the former President of the Fifth Ward Savings Bank and the City Bank, Jersey City, both of which were wrecked mainly through his instrumentality, was brought from State Prison by Keeper Laverty one day recently to give evidence in a suit brought by the First National Bank to recover on two notes, one for $669 09, indorsed by Smith & Scarry, and the other for $300, indorsed by Michael Farley.

When the Central Railroad Company went into the hands of a Receiver it owed its employes the sum of $400,000. Leon Abbett, by earnest effort, secured the enactment of a law which gave them every dollar of their wages. He never charged nor received a penny for this valuable service. His reward, however, will come on the 6th of November, when these men will show their gratitude by helping to elect him Governor of the State of which he is so valuable a citizen.

The porpoise industry at Cape May City is agitating the public. The experiment that is soon to take place will determine the importance of the enterprise, and should the success arise from it that its earnest projectors believe will, other companies will be established along the Delaware bay shore where at certain seasons the creatures are abundant. The great porpoise seine is being prepared. It is now at the beach, being hung to the ropes. A day will soon be announced for the trial haul, when a special train will convey a number of Philadelphians, Baltimoreans, railroad officials and others interested in the enterprise to the Cape.

A well dressed young woman, who gave her name as Rebecca Hill, and who said she lived in Chicago, was arrested in Jersey City, one day recently on a charge of grand larceny. Geo. B. De Revere, proprietor of Taylor's Hotel, being the complainant. The woman returned on the 23d from Europe, and on the following night she stopped at Taylor's Hotel. After going to her room she complained of being cold and asked for additional bedclothes. Two new and handsome bedclothes were sent to her room by Mr. De Revere, and after her departure the bedquilts were found to be missing. The quilts were found in her trunk. The complaint not being pressed she was allowed her freedom.

ONE TRIAL ENOUGH.

Will some one who knows tell us what are the advantages of the overhead check rein so commonly used nowadays? To us they seem so inhuman, so cruel and and barbarous, that we feel like cutting them off whenever we see them. If there is anything that can be said in their favor, we would be glad to hear it. In the absence of this we must conclude that we are right in our strictures. We should just like to have a twitch in the nose of some friend of this check, pass it over his head, attach it to the seat of his pants, so as to hold his head with his eyes pointing skyward, and then drive him about town for three or four hours. If he did not confess to a radical change of mind on the subject by the time the tramp was ended, we would give him another trial the next day.—Orange County Farmer.

A good wife or a good husband is the greatest of earthly blessings.

They are the safest who marry from the standpoint of sentiment rather than feeling, passion or mere love.

If we can't be sublime, let us be something. It isn't every one who knows how to be ridiculous gracefully.

An insane Rochester girl gets out of bed at midnight and goes to work sawing wood in the back-yard. Her father deeply deplores her insanity, but he always leaves the wood-pile handy for her to get at.

The fashion is not to send in the wedding present until almost the last moment, so good authority says. The young man on a $10 salary, whose friends are all getting married, wishes the fashion would come of not sending it at all.

A gentleman was talking to the owner of a ferocious bull dog, and asked him the question, "Do you think your dog could become fond of a stranger?" "Yes," replied the dog fancier, "if he was raw, but he wouldn't if the stranger was cooked."

If the young man who went to call on a girl on Fourth street last Sunday but who suddenly left the front door and shot out of the yard, with a dog attached to the dome of his trousers, will return the dog, a reward of five dollars will be paid by the girl's father and no questions asked.

The fool hath said in his heart: "Any one can write for the paper." Try it, O fool! try it.

The boy now sneaks out with a club and comes in with his pockets looking like the pouches of a gopher.

The piles of leaves that are being daily raked from our streets and burned tell story of the progress of the season.

Railroad officials are discussing the adoption of Greenwich time and the 24 hour system on all roads; 15 o'clock will sound funny.

The time will soon be here when the average female will tie a ribbon around her head, stick a feather under it, and call it the new style of Winter bonnet.

The residents of the extreme southern section of Newark are seriously thinking of organizing for protection against the gangs of tramps who terrorize women and children.

Public school officials are canvassing the various counties for returns of all illiterate children, in order to practically controvert the statement that there are 90,000 of them in this State.

For his latest sermon a Long Branch minister took as his subject "The Devil," and a State paper suggests that the time was ill chosen, for the reason that "the old fellow was not around, as he is at the Branch only in the Summer time."

DROWNED IN BEER.

Concerning this Popular Beverage Two Men Express their Minds.

"The fact is sir, and you may stick a pin there, that the people of this country are likely to be drowned in a flood of lager beer," shouted an enthusiastic teetotaler the other day into the ear of [illegible] correspondent. "That German drink has struck us hard. It is the second deluge."

"Yes, and the worst of this beer drinking business is that it gets up kidney troubles, as a heavy wind raises the waves," added a city physician, who had a knowledge of the [illegible] and a tendency to metaphor. "The midnight 'schooner' leaves behind it a wake of furred tongues, headaches, torpid livers, nausea, and all that, and lays the foundation of Bright's Disease."

This melancholy fact accounts in part for the increasing sales of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, which at once mitigates these symptoms. Price 25 cents. Ask your physician about it. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, N. Y.
